ACTIVITIES
A Sense Of Community

By giving a little, East students get a lot. Whether they are painting signs, encouraging others, or just putting a smile on someone's face, students donate their time to help others in activities such as Blood Drive, FOP, and Operation Smile. For example, students in FOP stay after school to paint posters and cut table decorations for the annual holiday party held for handicapped people at the Hilton Hotel. Members agree all their effort is worth the time for such an experience.

"The party is an amazing experience. When a student can brighten someone's day just by lending his time and effort, you know it's a worthwhile cause," said Perry Hwang ('03), one of the chairpeople for FOP.

Tracing an outline of a puppy for a table decoration, Dan Minzer ('04) chats with friends as they donate their time to FOP. FOP organizes an annual holiday party for handicapped children. At the party, children enjoy music, dancing, and tasty snacks.

Intently listening to Dr. Miller, Sreetha Bharadwaj ('05) learns the fundamentals of medicine at Virtua Mother Hospital. In the future Doctors of America, students gain the experience needed before entering the real world of medicine. "The club is great because we have lots of hands-on activities, guest speakers, and presentations," said Parth Modi ('03).

Creating a poster for the FOP holiday party, Younie Kim ’05 pays attention to detail as she paints a Christmas tree. At the party, students use their time constructively by entertainiing handicapped children. Not only do the children benefit from the party, but also students benefit from the worthwhile experience.

Anna Cho (03) works diligently to decorate boxes for AIDS Awareness toy and food drive. Members each year take on different fundraising activities to raise money for their cause. "It's important that interest groups provide opportunities for non members to participate in their cause because these topics affect the entire community," said Cho.

Pausing at Communications, Adam
Elisha (03), co-president of the International Affairs Club, dashes off an announcement to the student body. Like many other clubs, student awareness is top priority to International Affairs. These groups encourage students to voice their concerns.

In class, Michela Leone (03) and Parth
Modi (03) studiously plan for the next Animal Rights Club meeting. Their dedication to the cause shines through in their constant effort to ensure better welfare for animals.

An officer of the Animal Rights Club, Junior Nikki Robinson (03) proposes three upcoming topics at a meeting. The club is dedicated to improving animal welfare and informing students and the community about animal rights.
Share The Knowledge

Without a cause, there can be no awareness, without awareness there can be no improvement. Fortunately, East offers clubs such as ARC, TAG, JSA, TOPS, International Affairs, and AIDS Awareness. Each organization aims to educate and improve the youth of America. For instance, AIDS Awareness participated in the AIDS walk Philly 2001 to further the search for a cure for AIDS. Similarly, ARC holds various discussions concerning animal rights. East will send a graduating class of wise students who work to inspire and improve the world because of their dedication to cause and awareness clubs.

Braving the noon sun, John Li ('03), Anna Cho ('03), Olivia Wu ('02), and Kavita Pandit ('04), members of AIDS Awareness, participate in the AIDS walk in Philadelphia. Each participant walked twelve kilometers to raise money for future research and to provide affordable treatment for all. “Even though it took the whole day, I thought it was a worthwhile cause because it helped raise money for people with AIDS,” said Wu.

Kirsten Spearman ('03), an officer of T.A.G., puts up a flyer announcing their upcoming meeting. This club is dedicated to discussing God in everyday life. It gives students an opportunity to communicate their thoughts and feelings on God with other teens.

JUNIOR STATESMEN OF AMERICAN: Josh Rissmiller (President), Neha Sawhney (Internal Vice President), Priti Ojha (External Vice President), Mindy Dhillon (Treasurer), Euguene Braude (Publicity Manager), Leena Bhatnagar, Marc Davis, Ajit Dhillon, Timur Dylkhine, Janice Hartley, Vipul Kumar, Patrik Kuo, Gregory Laynor, Amanda Levy, Phil Osborne, Phil Rosen, Meena Tripathi, Kobina Wilmot. When the amount of homework and tests escalate, clubs are an enjoyable way to divert students' attentions. Besides offering a change of pace, clubs allow them to express their creative sides. Whether students meet for broadcasting or writing, each club offers special attention to subjects that are not always dealt with in the classroom. For instance, students who work for Eastside learn special techniques specific to journalism. In the Great Books and Movies Club, students explore beyond the standard curriculum by reading books and viewing movies from all genres. East fosters the wide range of talent in storytelling.

While attending a meeting for the Great Books and Movies Club, Jennifer Gin (‘03) analyses works of Mahatma Gandhi. By holding such discussion groups, not only are students able to explore different analytical approaches to works of literature and films, but they are also able to mediate the course of their discussion.

During a Demogogen meeting, David Koslow (‘03) and Kim Southwick (‘02) preside over the reading, interpretation, and final selection of poetry and prose. Demogogen has been successful in past years, winning first place in both the American Scholastic Press Association Annual Magazine and in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association competitions.

Journalism teacher, Mr. Gagliardi, goes over story ideas for the upcoming post of Eastside Online with Editor-in-Chief Anna Cho (‘03). The site provides up-to-date sections with concise articles on news, sports, and world issues. In the past, Eastside Online has won acclaim from parents, faculty, and websites like About.com.
Examining an issue of Eastside, Editor-in-Chief Jon Cetel ('02) inspects an article before the newspaper is distributed through the school. Spanning a wide array of topics from school issues to hard-hitting international subjects, school newspapers provide a way to understand the world around them through their peers’ voices. “With opinions, community, and international topics, Eastside allows me to learn more about what goes on outside of East,” said Samhita Bhargava ('03).

Eastcast’s sports anchor Josh Sellers ('02) sits down for a man-to-man sports chat with special guest host Matt Lausi ('02). Eastcast, a Cable-19 news show run entirely by students, airs every Tuesday night to inform students, the community, and anyone else interested in East sports, theater, and news. The hardworking crew meets every Monday in B131 to produce quality television.

These students are diligently competing in a test at Washington Township High School, this being the first of four meets. About twenty-four selected members of Science League are chosen to participate in these major tests on science related topics. The two students that achieve the top scores will walk away with the highest rankings for the day.

Proud winners, Eugene Braude ('03) and Agi Dhillon ('03) pose for the camera, taking First Place overall in the Hospitality Services Management category of the Regional DECA competition. After the written test and role-playing portion of each category, the top 8 teams in the team categories and the top 15 competitors in the single categories move on to the State competition. "DECA is a great experience for anyone preparing for a career in business," said Braude.

Amanda Levy ('03) prepares herself for her presentation to the rest of her group on Debate Team. The group meets regularly in the library to discuss their position on many debatable topics. She takes the time to strengthen her argument and present herself to the others with strong support and facts.

After cleaning Benny’s wire cage with a sponge, Rat Lab Technician, Jane Kovalevich ('02) scoops out his droppings onto a paper towel. Besides daily maintenance, technicians must also observe and record changes in the weight and behavior. Their dedication to the lab gives them experience and techniques, which creates a good foundation for any future careers in psychology.

Cramming on the bus ride to the monthly Science League Competition, Strathern Verdun ('02) reviews the basics of gene regulation. While Verdun studies, other members of Science League try to discuss every topic or catch up on sleep in order to achieve top rankings for Cherry Hill High School East.
Evident from the first step into East, diversity is everywhere students look. For many years our school has organized culture clubs to foster appreciation for other ethnicities. In clubs such as the Asian Cultural Society and Indian Cultural Society, members learn about traditions from several cultures.

In the Indian Cultural Society, for example, students watch Indian films, take field trips to Indian restaurants, and conduct forums about issues that affect both India and the rest of the world. In these forums, students can express their opinions about anything from an interesting Hindi film to the troubles of growing up as a first generation Indian.

In addition to learning about cultures, all clubs join together to expose them during special events. For instance, during the Lunar Banquet, students cook food, dress in cultural garb, and perform for teachers. While students learn about the cultures, teachers can also sample a bit of culture in every bit of curry, rice, egg rolls, and sushi.

Creating bonds, the culture clubs are dedicated to promoting friendship between people of all races.

Performing a trick with a Chinese Yo-Yo, Enoch Hsieh (’04) diverts the attention of East’s faculty. As an officer of Chinese Culture Club, Enoch is an active participant in culture Clubs. Said Hsieh, “Chinese Yo-Yo requires a great deal of practice. My participation in culture clubs, allows me to teach others about this Chinese art form.”

Ajit Dhillon (’03), dressed in traditional Indian Kurtas, and Mindy Dhillon, outfitted in a Lengha, serve their teachers classical Asian dishes prepared by the Lunar Banquet participants. The Lunar Banquet is held annually on the Chinese New Year and allows students to show their appreciation for their teachers by immersing them in multicultural enrichment.
Scrutinizing her arrangement, Jen Choi ('02) puts the finishing touches on her edible display. As president of Korean Culture Club, she tries her best to make the Lunar Banquet a success. Said Choi, “Even though organizing the event is hectic, I enjoy every moment from the preparation to the actual event.”

Planning the fashion show for East’s annual multicultural day, Rachel Wu ('02) and Eugenia Chung ('02) finalize the details. Showcasing each culture’s traditional garb, the fashion show exposes students to diversity. In addition to fashion show, multicultural day presents dance, music, and skits.

Dressed in traditional attire, Akhila Vasthare ('03) dances to a classical Indian song about a woman who cannot remember the face of her lover. Dances like the one Vasthare performed help bring Indian culture to life for the faculty. Said Vasthare, “I performed at the Lunar Banquet because I wanted the teachers to experience Bharathanatyam, an art form that is very representative of Indian culture.”

United in both ideals and friendship, the Gay-Straight Alliance shows their support for one another at a typical meeting. The group emphasizes the importance of standing by each other during time of uncertainty. With clubs like Gay-Straight Alliance, East becomes more respectful and enjoyable for its students.

Finalizing plans for another meeting, Shaun Keiser ('02) and Lee Brownstein ('02) stay after school to work on various topics affecting Student Government Association. Applying skills of leadership, the SGA conducts meetings to organize events and activities for the student body. With dedication and enthusiasm, members utilize their skills to make a pleasant atmosphere for their peers.

SGA OFFICERS: Lee Brownstein (President), Antoinette Duffy (Vice President), Justin Ensign (Vice President), Justin Marlowe (Vice President). Advisor: Dr. Vivone.

FRENCH CLUB: Adi Schmuel (President), Jaclyn Josephs (Secretary), Rachel Leipow (Treasurer), Joel Cohen, Jaime Dorfman, Janice Harlow, Alberto Herrera, Alex Hill, Anthony Kasinski, Allison McElgun, Stacy Silverman, Ruth Simpson, Liz Soloman, Kim Southwick, Kira Weinstein. Advisors: Mrs. Saillard and Mrs. Sokolov.
From All Ends

When those after-school soaps and talk shows become trite, why not join a club at East? Having clubs to suit everyone’s interests, East offers a myriad of activities that can’t possibly offer a dull moment in a student’s life. Whether students are painters, photographers, or friends of the environment, they can join a club to enrich both academic and extracurricular interests.

In the Chinese Cultural Dance Club, for instance, Jennifer Wang (’02), by blending originality and improvisation, teaches traditional dances to their peers, exposing East to more diversity. After putting in time and effort, the club presents their dances to the school during events such as the Lunar Banquet.

Another club that caters to a student’s taste is the Friends of Environment club, which refurbishes the landscapes of East. With dedication and generosity, members of the club plant trees, clean parks, and restore the beauty to both East and the community.

With clubs to interest any student, East offers something for everyone.

Members of the Chinese Culture Dance Club, Jennifer Tan (’02) and Jennifer Wang (’02), perform a dance at the Multicultural Day Assembly. Both girls partake in a dance troop outside of school where they learn a variety of cultural dances. Said Wang, “By performing dances from our Chinese culture, I think we add a little more diversity to the global community at East.”

Yearbook Yuppies
Welcome to Yearbook Country - where clocks are broken, mirrors are crooked, and chocolate is abundant. This land in A022 houses 31 teenagers and 1 recycled teen. So, what happens when you stick 32 "teens" in a 448-tile room? Anything and everything. To share our experiences, we glued puppies have come up with nine objects that more or less sum up how we have kept ourselves busy this year.

First on the list is our very own yearbook mascot, Charlie Nun. We look to this 59.95, battery-operated furball for inspiration when we get yearbooker's block. If that doesn't get us rolling, our founding father jumps in with random kowtow chops. When he does, we don't know whether to laugh or run. While putting together pages, we often come across pictures where people are in rather weird poses. Naturally, we felt we had to tack them up and dub the collection the "Wall of Shame." Another source of entertainment is our Beatles/97.5 PST/Gertrude Stein playing machine. When visual and audio stimuli fail to stimulate us, we turn to our supply of chocolate. Two seconds after that picture was taken, the only thing left of poor Smiley was his eyes. And we store our paraphernalia, includ

Both Andrew Gessman ('03) and Maria Carroll ('03) devote their attention to the officers speaking at an Irish American Club meeting. The Irish American Club not only attracts members of Irish origin, but also attracts members of all ethnicities. Culture Clubs such as the Irish American Club allow people of different cultures to teach one another about their different cultural backgrounds.

IRISH CLUB: Ashley Craven (President), Sarah Cochran (Vice President), Nicole Pulio (Secretary), Kristen Kinsell (Treasurer), Nicole Ambrosi, Beth Boland, Meghan Boland, Jeremy Boyell, Eileen Brennan, Deanna Burch, Maria Carroll, Harry Cochran, Brandon Carusone, Meghan Daly, Steven Emerson, Chris Fell, Molly Finkelstein, Max Gessman, Laura Gladman, Emily Goldman, Justin Gordon, Laura Griffin, Christina Grisafi, Jen Hampshire, Katie Luchman, Thomas Malek, Justin Matti, Leila Mendelovic, Kelly Scallon, Chris Spong, Ranishma Vohra, Katie Voskoboinik, Cindy Wen, Helen Zhang. Advisor: Mr. Kilmon.

During an Irish-American club meeting, members Meghan Boland ('03) and Nicole Pulio ('03) gather ideas for the upcoming St. Patrick's Day Dance. The dance, which is funded entirely by the club, raises money for the Children's Hospital in Philadelphia. Said Pulio, "I think it's great that East has so many cultures that are represented. We are so glad that we can represent the Irish Nationality at East.

All Eyes On The Baton

Concert night showcases the talents of East’s musicians to family and friends. The evening climaxes not only the weeks of practice but also incorporates the musical knowledge accumulated since grade school for many performers. Playing the correct notes is not the only key to delivering a magical performance; many other elements come into play. Beautiful harmony is the result of music played in perfect intonation and tempo. In order to give a dazzling performance, the musicians all concentrate on the baton of the conductor, who helps them maintain a steady tempo, precise rhythm, and expressive dynamics. The baton also guides the ensembles’ interpretation of each concert piece. Through an understanding of the essence of the piece, the performers are able to capture the styles and nuances of each composer to deliver an unforgettable performance.

"Playing the bassoon has been an enriching experience for me because it has allowed me to express myself in ways that the classroom doesn’t offer," said Leah Plimpton (‘02).

With determination and energy, Ben Silverstein (‘05) uses all of his concentration to produce a clear, tuned note from his trumpet. As a member of the Freshman Wind Ensemble, he adapts to the change in the level of expectations from junior high to high school. He said, "Our conductor pays more attention to small details in the music, and he gives each section individual attention."

As they listen to their intonation, Kimberly D’Imperio (‘03) and Daina Maciunas (‘03) use a steady stream of air to produce a sound that is in tune with the rest of the band. One of the keys to being a successful wind player is remembering to take large enough breaths before playing a note. D’Imperio said, "You have to focus your air and find the center of the pitch so you don’t go flat or sharp."

Mr. Bruce Yurko guides the Wind Ensemble in bringing out the composer's true intentions of a piece. Provided with much patience, motivation, and repetition, his students succeed in capturing the beauty and style of any work. Yurko said he would like to achieve his goals for his ensembles "by performing music that is intense, diverse, and will make the students grow musically - both technically and emotionally."

As principle players in the Wind Ensemble, Christine Mullin ('03), Christine MacArthur ('03), and Jennifer Feinberg ('03) assume the roles of leading other instrumentalists by making sure that they know their parts and by constantly remaining attentive to the conductor. Mullin said, "The concept of always staying in focus and setting a good example is challenging, but it's my responsibility to perform at my highest potential."
Focusing on his voice part, Randy Chan ('02) sings a holiday section. As one of the basses, he is responsible for establishing a solid foundation for the piece. "Understanding the meaning of the song" helps him set the tone and mood for the rest of the choir.

The bass section of Vocal Workshop gathers together in the boys' dressing room for a rotating lesson led by Ms. Ferguson. Unlike the daily rehearsals with the whole choir, rotating lessons give students a chance to focus on their individual parts and refine the small details of the music. Seth Alamal ('05) said, "Ms. Ferguson is able to spend more time with each of us specifically and that makes it a lot easier to learn our specific parts."

Harmonizing East

While walking through the halls of D-wing, one can hear the melodious songs of the four gifted choirs at East. With the proper skills and motivation provided by the choir directors, these beautiful sounds arise from an enormous amount of preparation. With daily in-class and after-school rehearsals, rotating lessons, and individual practice time, it is impossible for a choir member not to be strongly devoted to his or her music class.

In daily rehearsals, singers use stretching, breathing, and vocal warm-ups to expand their vocal ranges to their fullest potential before diving into a concert piece. In learning a piece, not only must the musicians learn the correct notes but they must also shape each phrase using various dynamics and articulations in order to deliver the beauty and emotion of each piece. In addition, East’s choir members constantly face new challenges, which include singing pieces in foreign languages, sight-reading complex melodies and rhythms, and entering adjudicated competitions.

On the night of the concert, students are proud of the sacrifices made and the time spent in the name of music, for the musicality they have developed and the bonds they have formed with one another will remain for years to come.

"Singing is by far my favorite activity because we can learn a lot, make such beautiful music, and have so much fun at the same time," said Christa Wesley (’02).

"Listening attentively to each other, Kirsten Burkhart (’02), Holly Washauer (’00), and Brittany Cohen (’04) rehearse their alto II part in the spiritual, ‘He’s Got the Whole World in His Hands.’ Singing in small sections allows the musicians to soli dify individual parts, which polishes the overall sound of the choir. Washauer said, ‘It helps you sing the correct notes by hearing the voices around you.’"

EAST SINGERS: Jennifer Adler, Yasen Al-Sayyad, Stephanie Berger, Samshita Bhargava, Kim Boden, Sarah Blakeslee, Kirsten Burkhart, Brian Cabral, Paul Caracciolo, Randy Chan, Anna Che, Daniel Chiang, Brittany Cohen, Rob Crece, Marc Davis, Elaine Eisen, Adam Finkel, Kim Friend, Steve Goldberg, Justin Gordon, Ben Gross, AliceHon, Pat Hunn Hwang, Jennifer Joyce, Lyndsey Karcher, Rachel Karp, Sara Kates, Rachel Katz, Christine Kim, Susan Ki, Josh Kolvin, Svennel Lai, Brandon Liao, Lauren Levine, Sara Linton, Graham Livingston, Kristin Luchman, Chris MacArthur, Lauren Mennes, Eva Micalak, Crista Milani, Laurie Nathan, Priti Ojha, Hannah Plotzke, Dave Rahbiadaleh, Danny Rose, Amanda Russo, Raj Sarker, Allison Seiber, Lauren Shotwell, Lara Sherman, Stephanie Siewcek, Josh Specht, Paul Specht, Serena Sun, Jennifer Tan, Dana Tang, Jing Tao, Diana To, Roshni Thorne, Corinne Tybris, Holly Washauer, Sarah Wasserman, RJ Weaver, Evan Weiss, Lit Welch, Christa Wesley, Claire Wesley, Kyle Wisek, Olivia Wu, Ms. Laurine Steele (Conductor)
Surrounded by his fellow mimes, Andrew Bleaken ('04) pantomimes the act of relishing in a snowball fight. When facing the challenge of using no words, the actors develop their dramatic skills by exploring various ways of conveying messages through gestures.

R.J. Weaver ('03) plays Dick, the game show host, in Actor's Studio II's production of Don't Take Away the Sun. In order to get into his character, he thought of actual game show hosts. Weaver said, "As Dick, I had to portray the exaggerated, upbeat, loud, and energetic voices of game show hosts like those in Wheel of Fortune and The Price is Right."

Marissa Fox ('04), playing Emily Webb, and Jeremy Bannett ('05), playing George Gibbs, practice their scene on a ladder by the window. Here, they discuss the beautiful night sky and the things that are to happen in the future. Marissa Fox said, "Acting helps me express myself, and Lab Theater has helped me to grow as an actress because it has given me new opportunities."

Liz Sobolew ('03), playing the bride Julie Peterson, and Jami Johnson ('03), playing the bridesmaid Kaye Mason, prepare for the wedding scene. Mr. Weaver helps the students to become better actors and actresses by teaching them how to better portray a character. Johnson said, "Actor's Studio II has taught me a lot about character development, which is really important as an actor."

Ben Gross ('04) makes a face trying to hold in his sneeze during a comical mime skit. Being a mime emphasizes another angle of acting - the use of physical gestures over verbal expression. Gross said, "I have a good time with everyone, and it helps me develop a character as an actor."

"Thespian Society helps out and organizes various events in the other parts of the theater department. It is really good to know that all the hard work we contribute as a group helps the other thespians. It's the SGA of the Theater Department" said Adam Guthehahl ('02), the president of Thespian Society.

The Play's The Thing

In addition to the Fall and Spring Shows at East, the theater department offers Lab Theater and Actor's Studio II, which perform shows in October and January. Lab Theater is composed of newcomers to the theater department as well as a number of veterans. Actor's Studio II, a semester course geared towards more advanced thespians, prepares two different shows to be performed at the end of the semester.

In addition to vocal theater, the Mime Company entertains East as well as others of the outside community using the art of facial expression and body gestures. They participate in the annual FOP Party, Multicultural Day, and the Haddonfield Christmas Celebration in addition to visiting various schools both in and out of the Cherry Hill district.

Behind these events lies the International Thespian Society. Composed of experienced thespians who have been inducted for their various accomplishments in the theater department, the Society meets once a week to discuss past and future events. They also raise funds for the theater department through the Haunted House event and the Halloween Masquerade Ball, which are used to co-sponsor the Spring and Fall show.

Exceeding All Expectations

While many students are eager to go home at the sound of the 2:30 bell, those who remain in school gravitate towards D-wing for rehearsals of various instrumental ensembles. One of the benefits of East's music department is the diversity of opportunities offered to the students. For those who play a brass or wind instrument Brass Ensemble or Chamber Winds gives the musicians a chance to perform in small groups. As a result of working in a ensemble where there is close interaction and communication among the musicians, the students develop a maturity that proves useful in areas other than music.

One of the main features of East's concerts are the jazz ensembles' performances. Jazz Band, consisting of trumpets, trombones, tuba, saxophones, and a rhythm section, and the Jazz Standards group always provide the audience with captivating performances. In addition, the soloists never fail to enthrall the listeners with their technical capabilities and stylistic approaches to the music. Last, Lab Band gives those who wish to learn jazz but who may not play a traditional jazz instrument to expose themselves to the art of jazz. The various ensembles offered at East reflect the school's endeavor to preserve the value of expanding students' musical knowledge.

Before another rehearsal of Brass Ensemble, Todd Kent ('02) warms up his trombone to prepare his embouchure and to better tune his instrument. Using all the skills he has accumulated since elementary school in addition to practicing regularly at home, he gives his full potential at every rehearsal and is able to face any musical challenge that comes his way.

Although rehearsals can be demanding and tedious, Michael Ahn ('04) and Ian O'Bierne ('04) welcome the rigor of the Jazz Band. Playing jazz is often an entirely new experience from performing the repertoire of other ensembles such as the symphonic band or wind ensemble, and as these saxophone players know, commitment to more than one ensemble requires much dedication and perseverance.

BRASS ENSEMBLE: Jordan Berg, Daniel Chou, Anthony Kasinskas, Todd Kent, Asher Ross. Advisor: Mr. Bruce Yurko.

CHAMBER WINDS: Ed Balsam, Jennifer Feinberg, Christine Mullin, Leah Plimpton. Advisor: Mr. Bruce Yurko.
After taking a deep breath, Anthony Kasinskas ('02) holds his note during a rehearsal of the Brass Ensemble. The quintet not only provides the musicians with increased individual attention with the director, Mr. Yurko, but also gives them a chance to face any challenges given to them.

Alex Goldstein ('02) proves that practice and dedication pay off as he performs his improvised solo in a Jazz Band rehearsal. One of the difficult tasks to master in playing jazz is improvisation. Given a key and a phrase melody, the soloist is responsible for creating his own musical lines to adorn the sounds of the background.

JAZZ STANDARDS: Andrés Cotto, James Gillespie, Alex Goldstein, Cristin Milloti, Asher Ross, Andrew Thompson, Julie Wagner, Matt Weiner. Advisor: Mr. Timothy Keleher.

Roshni Toorkey (’02) holds her hand out to a fellow Madrigal as she beautifully sings her part in “Matona,” one of the group’s signature pieces. Part of being in Madrigals means becoming a part of the music during the Renaissance, which Toorkey demonstrates by coordinating both singing and acting into her performance.

“Being in a small group allows us to get to know each other really well, so that we are able to feel and connect to the music,” said Kristin Luchtman (’02).

A Unique Blend

Intense workshops, the anxiety that accompanies the auditions, and the agony in waiting for the results. When the list of the new members of the vocal department’s small groups are posted on the D-wing bulletin board, accepted musicians not only rejoice but also prepare themselves for the amount of time and practice to which they have committed themselves. Beginning early morning before homeroom, the groups stretch the capabilities of their vocal chords to rehearse their music for upcoming performances. In addition, the weekly after-school rehearsals and occasional dress rehearsals come together to produce flawless concerts.

Being a member of one of the groups requires more than experienced singing. Belles coordinate their voice parts with the rhythm of their bells, Madrigals practice their choreography for selected pieces, and Casual Harmony finds ways to always incorporate humor into their performances. Having established well-respected reputations through the years, Belles, Madrigals, Casual Harmony and Celebrations are often invited to sing at locations such as Longwood Gardens, nursing homes, special education centers, and the Cherry Hill elementary schools. Through these activities, they share their love of music with the community.

Celebrations members, Pathun Hsang (’02), Meiling Gao (’02), and Jen Wang (’02) and Cecilia Brooks (’02), swing their bells in harmony at the Winter Concert in December. The dedicated girls practice every Tuesday after school in order to perfect their melodies, performing everything from Bach to Les Miserables. During the holiday season, they devote their time to spreading joy at the POP party and nearby nursing homes.

Madrigal Singers, Jennifer Tan (’02), Dan Kober (’04), Claire Wesley (’04), Brandon-Laine (’02), and Kirsten Burkhardt (’02) rehearse together before one of their many community performances during the holiday season. The Renaissance-era singing group travels along with Belles and Casual Harmony to brighten the days of children and adults alike, performing everywhere from elementary schools to Longwood Gardens.

BELLES OF EAST: Amie Adcock, Samhita Bhargava, Brittany Cohen, Sara Linton, Christine MacArthur, Eve Michalski, Alison Selbert, Sara Sherman, Elizabeth Sobkow, Jing Tao, Holly Warshauer, Sarah Waxman, Liz Welch (officer), Christa Wesley (officer), Advisor: Ms. Laurie Steele

CASUAL HARMONY: Brian Cabalo, Randy Chan, Adam Finkel, Ben Gross, David Rabizadeh (officer), Danny Rose, Raj Sarkar, Paul Spechler (officer), R.J. Weaver, Evan Weiss, Advisor: Ms. Cindy Ferguson
Casual Harmony members Randy Chan ('02), Adam Finkel ('02), and Brian Cabalo ('03) clap to the beat of "Run Around Sue" as they rehearse before the Winter Concert. Energy is essential to a Casual Harmony performance in order to preserve the excitement and upbeat nature of the music. Since they perform without accompaniment, the guys have to maintain a steady rhythm as well as carry a tune in perfect time.

Ben Gross ('04) and David Rabizadeh ('02) of Casual Harmony express themselves through both their music and body language as they perform for the East community. By entertaining audiences with humorous antics incorporated into their performances, Casual Harmony has gained much popularity throughout the concert.

Christa Wesley ('02) demonstrates the performance abilities of the Belles of East, a handbell choir that combines the English handbells with soprano and alto voices. As an officer for the ensemble, Wesley leads her fellow musicians by making sure that the girls are solid on their parts and that they remain focused during rehearsals.

CELEBRATIONS: Celestria Brooks, Charlotte Chong, Sarah Cochran, Kim Friend, Melinda Gao, Andrea Goldstein, Alice Hon, Patbun Hwang, Christine Kimi, Z Liu, Christine MacArthur (officer), Leila Mendelovic, Jennifer Wang, Olivia Wu (officer), Advisor: Ms. Cindy Ferguson

MADRIGALS: Kirsten Burkhardt, Brian Cabalo, Lyndsay Kancher, Rachel Karpf, Susan Ko, Dan Kober, Brandon Laine, Kristin Luchtman (officer), Lauren Mennes, David Rabizadeh (officer), Danny Rose, Jennifer Tan, Roshni Toorkey, R.J. Weaver Claire Wesley, Kyle Wellocky, Advisor: Ms. Laurie Steele
Bringing together all the vocal rehearsals that went into preparation for the Fall Show, the actresses sing their piece with brightness and fervor. From the expressions on their faces, all the exhaustion from the endless hours of practice seems to have disappeared for the work will prove worthwhile when the audience erupts in applause at the end of the show.

The spotlight shines on Francesca Dellenici ('02) as she delivers her lines. In Celebrate America, the actors as well as the audience can relate to the message of the play for it is composed of many aspects of America. From Benjamin Franklin to the birth of radio, the wide range of subjects allows the people to truly celebrate everything about America.

Playing the role of Abraham Lincoln, Steve Goldberg ('03), delivers a speech written within the context of America's history. Celebrate America, a play devoted to the uniqueness and growth of our nation, served to boost patriotism after the events of September 11th.

Nathan Detroit, played by Scott Goldberg ('02) and the crapshooters sing about the reliability of Detroit in finding a place to play the game. Goldberg said, “The show was the best experience of my life. I wouldn't give up the opportunity to play Nathan Detroit for anything. It was a great way to end high school with this role.”
From the moment the name of the Fall or Spring Show is revealed to students to the final scene of closing night, a buzz of excitement constantly flies through the school as East’s thespians prepare for the productions. Once the cast is chosen through auditions, students must memorize their lines, rehearse the music, and learn the dance routines among other tasks. The work and time these drama students devote to the plays are admirable. While most students are comfortably resting at home late at night, the thespians remain in school in order to produce a show that will surpass all expectations. On opening night, when the actors show off their charm and talent on stage, there is no person in the audience who is not thoroughly impressed with the creative gift that lies within East.

Making The Show

When remembering the Fall or Spring Shows, many audiences forget to consider the hard work of the students who are not in the spotlight - the Stage Crew. Weeks before the show begins, Stage Crew members begin to build the sets for the play. The creation of the set involves extensive carpentry, painting, and technical engineering of sound and light to obtain the correct atmosphere for the show. Not only are they in charge of the creating the set, but they are also responsible for the smooth flow of the show. While the play is going on, the members of the Stage Crew are busy behind stage moving sets and making sure that all the technical plans are running smoothly.

Likewise, Pit Orchestra is also a group that contributes greatly to the success of the Spring Show. The Orchestra consists of highly devoted instrumentalists who begin rehearsing for the show months in advance. Although being a member of the Pit Orchestra or Stage Crew involves much time and energy, the students are proud to contribute to the success of the shows.

PIT ORCHESTRA: Ed Balsam, Jordan Berg, Andrew Bleaken, Kirsten Burkhardt, Brian Cabalo, Dan Chou, Andrés Cotto, Bill Early, Laura Earley, Jennifer Feinberg, James Gillespie, Alex Goldstein, Janice Harlow, Dan Herron, Beverly Hon, Faye Hughes, Michelle Kang, Anthony Kostinskas, Julie Kowalk, Boris Lau, Josh Levinson, Shara Mack, Christine MacArthur, Stephanie Mikitish, Christine Mullin, Ian O’Beirne, Hannah Plimpton, Asher Ross, Jennifer Shipon, Paul Spechler, Jennifer Tan, Laria Terry, Andrew Thompson, Diana To, Julie Wagner, Matt Weiss, Mr. Timothy Relefer (Conductor)

Concentrating on every sweep of her bow, Michelle Kang (’02) adds to the sweet melodies of the Pit Orchestra. Not only does the Orchestra face the regular demands of other instrumental groups, they must also overcome the tediousness of coordinating the music with the acting.

John Ryan (’02) and Christina Grisafi (’04) work together to move the bar from the set of this year’s Spring Musical, Guys and Dolls. The Stage Crew is in charge of arranging everything: the set from props to lights. With their help, the production is able to run smoothly with no glitches.

During a routine Pit Orchestra rehearsal, Ed Balsam (’02) plays his clarinet with his alto sax sitting on his lap, ready for action. Many musicians like Balsam have learned to “double-up” on instruments. Even after entering high school, it is not too late for students to pursue a different instrument than their primary ones.

Snapping his fingers to the beat, Paul Spechler (’02) gives an energetic performance with the members of Casual Harmony. The all male group just one of the many performing arts activities Spechler is part of that awarded him membership to P.A.V.A.S. He is also a clarinetist in Wind Ensemble and Pit Orchestra, a saxophonist in Lab Band, and a performer in East’s drama productions.
Playing the Vaudeville comedian, Adam Gutbezahl entertains the audiences with jokes about America in the early 1930’s from this year’s Fall Show, Celebrate America. In the play, he also played a New York firefighter post September 11. Gutbezahl has actively participated in drama programs such as Lab Theater, One Acts, Actors Studio I and II, and various Fall and Spring Shows, which has given him the honor of becoming a P.A.V.A.S. member.

With a serious gaze, Asher Ross (‘02) blows into his tuba at a rehearsal of the All South Jersey Symphonic Band. Along with diligent practice and extraordinary devotion come rewards, for being accepted into an ASJ ensemble is a prestigious achievement, honored to only the best in the area. Ross said, “It took a lot of effort to get there, but it was definitely worth it. It was a really cool experience to play with more than one tuba.”

Virtuoscos Of East

Many of East’s musicians and thespians are more than willing to push themselves to their highest potential. For the singers and instrumentalists who want to challenge themselves further than the normal activities of school music classes, many audition for the All South Jersey and All State ensembles. After months of learning a solo piece, polishing up scales, and working to improve sight reading, most students find their dedication worthwhile when they receive the opportunity to sing or play in one of the ensembles.

Similarly, the Performing And Visual Arts Society (PAVAS) gives those who have been especially dedicated to the arts an opportunity to be recognized for their skill and devotion to their passion. Most importantly, not only do these musicians, thespians, artists, and writers want to improve their artistic capabilities, but they would also like to improve themselves through art by becoming more disciplined, sensitive, creative, and appreciative of beauty everywhere.
Attention!

While the other wings of East are still in their quiet summer slumber, D-wing comes alive with students in August with Marching Band members coming in to the daily rehearsals of band camp. The practices are essential for the members to polish up the performance of the music as a band and maintain visual coherence in their marching formations.

A unified performance requires much practice because the members must conquer the task of marching correctly as well as playing multiple pieces of music fully memorized in sync. Despite the obvious difficulty presented by the marching while playing, the musicians must also face the problem of outdoor acoustics and distances between the marching musicians. The band members must also watch the Drum Major for the correct tempo.

Although Marching Band can be a lot of work, many members feel that their dedication is well worth the effort when the crowds at halftime express their appreciation for them at East's football games.

Jessica Kolinsky ('02) of the East Color Guard adds flair to the field during halftime by waving her flag in the air. The Color Guard performs alongside the Marching Band at football games to give the fans an exciting spectacle of music and dance.

After a scatter drill, the East Marching Band quickly reforms and kneels in formation to backup a solo performance. Because timing and positioning are key to a good marching band performance, all members must know the routine like the back of their hand. Synchronization of the drill combined with upbeat music delivers a stellar performance.

MARCHING BAND: Nick Acciani, Cierra Allen, Anna Anningham, Jared Batterman, David Baumgarten, Naomi Baumgarten, Jordan Berg, Andrew Bleaken, Meghan Boland, Deanna Burch, Brian Cabalo, Ailen Chao, Ivan Chen, Christopher Cicero, Kim D'Imperio, Molly Finkinstein, Jackie Gerber, James Gillespie, Nicole Goldman, Daniel Herron, Fay Hughes, Anthony Kastrinas, Kristen Kindell, Jessica Lier, Daniel Kober, Jessica Kolinsky, Melody Joy Kramer, Steven Kramer, Joshua Levinsohn, Stephen Liu, Christine MacArthur, Melissa Mack, Shara Mack, Lauren Menees, Anthony Menta, Stephanie Mitakis, Andrea Moldoff, Lauren Mormone, Jill Pahnen, Hannah Plimpton, Leah Plimpton, Tim Plimpton, Advisors: Mrs. Bethany Carl, Mr. Christopher Carl, Mr. Jay Cohen, Mr. Timothy Keleher, Mr. Bruce Yurko

With his French horn in hand, Jordan Berg ('02) leads the brass section of the Marching Band in a line-up along the sideline as they practice before a game. The members demonstrate their team unity both on and off the field through the many friendships formed while performing together. "It's a great way to get closer to your peers," said Berg.
Boys’ Soccer: The boys soccer team is ranked #3 in South Jersey, Group IV finalist, and season record of 16-3 ... Girls’ Volleyball: This season’s MVPs, Jhane Zarghami, Amy Lejarzar. Most improved player, Kathy Girman. Defensive player of the year, Meredith Minoff and Shara Senderoff. Rookie of the year, Kate Gold. Most dedicated, Elyse Mitchell. Having won the Olympic Conference American division for the second straight year and went to the State Group 4 semifinals. Jhane Zarghami- 1st team all conference, 1st team all South Jersey. Amy Lejarzar- 1st team all conference, 2nd team all South Jersey. Cathy Girman- 2nd team all conference, 2nd team all South Jersey. Meredith Minoff- 2nd team all South Jersey. Elyse Mitchell- 2nd team all South Jersey. Their season record of 20-3.

Captain Jhane Zhargami ('02) keeps a focused eye on the ball as she prepares to set it to her teammate for a spike over the net. The Girls' Volleyball team displayed both talent and teamwork this season, making their way all the way to the quarterfinals of States, ready to beat any team in their path. "We made it there with determination, but our closeness had a lot to do with it too," said team member Lisa Alton ('03) about the team's success.

Competing in their third year on Varsity, Cathy Richter ('03) and Sam Schafer ('03) prepare for a tough match in doubles. Doubles tennis differs greatly from singles tennis because players must communicate and cooperate with each other. The boundaries in doubles tennis are wider, and team alternation servers every other game.

Goalies Sean Dallas ('02) saves the East boy's soccer team with an explosive dive and then scores another point for the winning Girls Volleyball team. She uses her height, strength, and skill to exert enough power on the ball so that the other team cannot react in time to return it.

Jack Keyes ('04) races his opponent with determination to win the ball. Possession is important in soccer in order to control the game and beat the opposing team to score a goal. The Boys East Soccer team showed their skill in possession by their successful season this year.

Leaping up and reaching high, Diana Maciunas ('03) forcefully spikes the volleyball over the net, scoring another point for the winning Girls Volleyball team. She uses her height, strength, and skill to exert enough power on the ball so that the other team cannot react in time to return it.

Goales Sean Dallas ('02) saves the East boy's soccer team with an explosive dive and then scores another point for the winning Girls Volleyball team. She uses her height, strength, and skill to exert enough power on the ball so that the other team cannot react in time to return it.

Tom Guida ('02) bursts into the air above his opponent, preparing to head the oncoming ball to his teammates alongside him. Such physical feats are a product of hard work and determination both before and during the season. The East boy’s soccer team started their preseason training earlier this summer in Germany, a trip of both drudgery and fun.

Leanne Silverman ('04) and Christina Contrafatto ('04) play hard and have fun, as they contest their opponent in doubles tennis. These two partners learned from each other throughout the season by playing and practicing together. With perseverance and diligence, they earned a very successful season.

With a winning spirit, Shana Herman (04) aggressively tries to regain control of the ball from her opponent. Through her hard work and dedication, Shana qualified for the 2nd All Conference Team. The girls proudly ranked as the 2nd Team in South Jersey, their biggest achievement of the season.

Flyer Amy Townsend (03) fearlessly bursts out of the cage toward the oncoming opponent's shot as teammates Jen Elenstro (02), Jen Habina (02), Casey Stronski (02), and goalie Michelle Govito (02) defend the cage. Defensive corners place the opposing team at a 10 to 5 player advantage, giving defense a challenge. However, the East girls accepted this challenge in stride, saving countless goals this season.

Grace Under Pressure

Penetrating forward to score a goal, Dana DiBruno ('02) successfully defends the ball from her opponent. DiBruno had a very successful season this year, qualifying for the 1st Team All Conference and assisting her team in a winning season.

With a look of fierce determination, Senior captain Jen Elentrio strives forward toward the ball as teammates Jen Habina ('02) and Billie Birmbaum ('03) run beside to support her. Jen's aggressive spirit shows through in her playing, helping the Cougars excel through their challenging season.

Boys' Cross Country: Accomplishments- 5th South Jersey Group IV; Ranked in the Top Ten Courier Post; Highlights- Qualified for the State Finals for the first time in 15 years; Dave Koslow: All Conference, All Group IV, All South Jersey; Peter Galie: All Conference, All Group IV; Matt Kuzan: All Conference; Chris Corey: All Conference ... Girls' Soccer: Accomplishments- Ranked 2nd in South Jersey; 1st Team All Conference; Emily Brenner, Christine Mullin, Dana DiBruno, Perri Brenner; 2nd Team All Conference: Danielle DiBruno, Lauren Houck, Shana Herman, Katie Boyle; All South Jersey: Emily Brenner, Christine Mullin, Dana DiBruno, Highlights- Beat Shawnee and Lenape in regular season.

Peter Galie ('02) runs on before a meet, unsheath by fatigue and driven by determination. For his achievements in crosscountry, Galie was honored with the recognition of First team All-Conference, a prestigious award given to only the best Southern New Jersey runners. This season he led his teammates all the way to State Finals, a great accomplishment for this year's team. "We accomplished what we set out to do," said Galie.

Lunging forward with her stick, Jen Kim ('03) tries to block the Eastern opponent from driving the ball up the field. In the game teamwork is key, making the girls to cooperate and communicate as they play. This came easily to the well-bonded team. "It was a lot of hard work," said captain Jennie Joyce ('02), "but always a lot of fun."

Varsity halfback Casey Stronski ('02) excels past her opponent as she pursues the ball, determined to gain possession. Stronski is one of the last defenders before the goal, but instead of feeling pressured, she gets pumped and refuses to let any offender by her. "It was my job to protect Michelle in the games," said Stronski, "besides, I don't want to be scored on."
When Push Comes To Shove

Kim Wisely ('03), Dale Burton ('05), Holly Moeller ('04), Lauren Scarpato ('04), and Kim Friend ('02), members of the Girls' Cross-Country team practice after school. Their hard work paid off, earning them a victorious season as No. 20 in South Jersey, the highest rank for the team in East history.

As the cheerleaders wave their pom-poms and show their spirit, Cougars Jake Herman ('02) and Stephen Scanlon ('03) burst through the East banner with their teammates following behind. The team takes pleasure in this pre-game ritual because it gets them psyched to compete with the other team on field.

Girls' Cross-Country: Highlights—
Girls had a winning record (5 wins, 4 losses), the best record in 11 years; finished in the Top Ten at the Sectionals for the first time in 12 years; All Conference All Stars- Lauren Scarpato and Holly Moeller; finished in the Courier Post Top 20 for the first time in East History ... Football: Accomplishments: Broke three school records; 3 blocked kicks and/or punts by Mike Marinaro; 96 yard kick off return for a touchdown by Chris Harley; 43.1 yards per punt average achieved by Greg Frade; Greg Frade: All-South Jersey Kicker' & All Group IV; Mike Marinaro: 2nd Team All-Conference Defense End

With athletic grace, varsity wide receiver Matt Barnum ('02) flies past oncoming defense, supported by teammate Ryan Kardos ('02). The closeness of the boys this year shows through in their impeccable teamwork and overall cooperation with each other. "There isn't another group of guys I would rather have played with," said senior player, J.J. Ernst. "We were all great friends."

Freshman Dale Burton ('05), leads the Cougar pack in a race against time and the opponent. With the leadership of coaches Charlie Musumeci and Jason Russo, the Girls' Cross Country team completed a fabulous season this year, earning the highest rank in South Jersey that East has ever achieved. "It was hard work, but we all had fun," reflects Kim Wisely ('03) about the season.
Before the game, the East cheerleaders perform their familiar hello cheer, “Rock the stands,” to excite the crowd for the upcoming football players. The squad this year was a closely packed group of girls, all spirited about the season. “Beginning with cheerleading camp in the summer and ending with the homecoming game, we were all full of cheer and unity,” said Megan Sobel ('02), “It's sad to leave it all.”

Fighting off the defender, Jay Sherwood ('02) dives with all his might to gain the extra yard. Son of former East Coach Bo Wood, Head Coach Eric Wood instilled such dedication to the game in the players this year. Coach Wood Jr. infused strong leadership in the Cougars as they fought their way through the season.

Valuing Each Point

Jackie Herb ('04) takes a mighty backhand swing at the incoming ball. As a new player on the Girl's Tennis team, Jackie Herb's talent and skills provide a new arsenal for the team. The Girl's Tennis team had one of its best seasons, with only two losses.

Marc Ruten ('02) fights for the ball as teammates Randy Shapira ('02) and Jake Rowden ('02) await the pass. The East Boy's Soccer team continued the legacy and completed yet another great season, making it all the way to the quarterfinals of States. "We played the best we ever had and proved we were a great team," said sweeper, Matt Acciani ('02), calling the season the "highlight of his career."

Ready to let loose a powerful kick, Danielle DiBruno ('02) prepares to send the ball up the field to her awaiting offensive teammates. The East Girl's Soccer team fought their way through yet another winning season, all the way to the second round of both the Coaches' Cup and States. "It was a great season with a very talented group of girls that gave us all and left everything on the field," said Captain Katie Boyle ('02).
Midfielder Jen Elenrio ('02) sends a hard drive down the line as Sarah Wood ('02) looks back ready to receive. The Eastern game was one of the most challenging games the East Field Hockey team had faced during their season in the hardest conference in the State. The girls never gave up as they fought until the end.

Quarterback Cody Tucci ('03) scrambles past oncoming defense as teammates Ryan Karlos ('02), Chris McNeil ('02) and Ken Corso ('02) clear the way for him. The East football team fought a tough season this year and held their own right up to the final Homecoming game. Matt Barnum ('02) said, "We played our hearts out and left everything on the field. The seasons brought us together as a big family of friends."

Cross-Country runners, Matt Kuan ('02), Arif Rahman ('02), Andrew Elkan ('02), Pete Callie ('02), and Cole Zucker ('02), practice for the 5K race. Their devotion paid off when the team placed second at the Olympic Conference Championship and made States for the first time in nearly twenty years.

Lauren Morrone ('02) concentrates on the form of her roll as the East bowling team tries to clinch another win. In the loud atmosphere of the bowling alley, Morrone must ignore distractions to focus on her game.

Jeff Rusignuolo ('03) jumps off of his starting block, diving into the pool, as he starts the 100 meter freestyle race. In a sport where winning can come down to the hundredth of a second, the dive is one of the most crucial skills a swimmer must perfect.

In the first few seconds of the match, Brian Rimbberg ('03) executes a counter move against his opponent's single-leg takedown. Because wrestling is such an exhausting sport, Wrestlers must maintain a dominant or neutral position to conserve energy.

Graham Parker ('04) breathes in deeply needed air as he completes the 100 meter breast stroke. Parker, East's top breast stroker, secured his place in the East Swimming team since his freshmen year.

Poised for perfection, Amanda Cacciatore ('04) concentrates before her dive. Although divers may win individually, the team wins their meets together.

Taking a quick breath during freestyle, Lindsey Grimes ('04) swims home during her event. Even though the race concludes in a matter of seconds, swimmers concentrate on form and style, never forgetting speed and agility.

Katie Boyle ('02), driving the basketball to the right of the basket, uses her speed to outrun any attempted steals. Combining strategy and agility, basketball proves to be a work out for both the body and mind.

Angled perfectly to make a strike, Michael Jay ('02) releases the bowling ball from his grasp, hoping his shot will bring the team another win. While some believe bowling is not as physical as other sports, it requires incredible skill and focus.

When the team needs a boost, the cheerleading squad is always there to raise the crowd and team's spirits. With complex routines and seemingly effortless poses, cheerleading requires endless practices and drills after school.

Thinking quickly before his opponent makes a steal, Andrew Rusler ('03) uses his speed to foil the defender. Although the physical aspects of the sport are evident, the mental aspects are just as demanding.

Driving towards the basket, Dan Butler ('02) keeps possession of the ball, without letting his opponent make a steal. Requiring dexterity, speed, and intuition, basketball is both a mentally and physically intense sport.

There's nothing but net for George Keefe ('03) as he soars to make another shot. With practice and cooperation, basketball players are able to foil opponents' attempts to steal the ball.

Energetically the cheer and crowd's spirits, Hallie Piwnitzky ('04) poses in the middle of the squad's routine. It is important not only for each cheerleader to excite the crowd, but also for the team, as a whole, to inspire school spirit in everyone.

Two Thousand & Two

 Academics
Creating Blue Ribbon Excellence

Q: What aspect of our school are you most proud of?
A: There are three main aspects that are combined into one larger concept. First of all, we have a gifted student body. With their different talents, they truly are special; you can see it in their everyday hard work and determination. The teaching staff is also wonderful. They come in everyday, working with the students to help maximize each student’s talents. Also, the parent community gives their full support and demands excellence in all that we do here. This triad of students, teachers, and parents makes East everything that it is known and respected for.

Q: How much do you think the September 11th attacks affected the school community?
A: Attacks definitely had an impact on the school, but it is hard to quantify. Every day here reflects back to what happened, and since then I have been able to talk to students, parents, and teachers about it. There was a lot of assurance needed since most do not feel as secure as they did before the events took place.

Q: What is your favorite memory of East?
A: One of my favorites would have to be an event that was more personal — it would have been handing my daughter her diploma at her graduation in 1999. It was a proud moment for me. But if I had to choose a favorite professional memory, it was when Mr. Scott Pfeifer of the Blue Ribbon Committee came up to me right before he left and told me that our school was outstanding. So much of our school life jumped out at him, and he was impressed by the fact that we do meet up with our standards. Or, as he said, “we are living what we say we do.”

Q: In what ways has school spirit changed since you’ve been here?
A: In thirty one years of working here, there have been many more clubs and interest groups formed in the past few years. Since the early 70’s, every new class has been excited by individual efforts. However, the school as a whole may still need a little work on school spirit.

Q: What significant changes have you noticed in East students over the years?
A: There has not been a great deal of change because the students here have always been top-notch kids, eager and ready to learn. However, they have become more sophisticated, in terms of real world situations. The students here went through a lot this year, and I think they handled everything very maturely.

Q: How has student life here influenced your views of life in general?
A: That’s easy: it keeps me young. Dealing with students everyday makes you think younger. I think the biggest impact it has had on me though was when my daughter attended East. That year I learned what really makes kids tick.

Q: So what makes kids tick?
A: I feel that when students are given the appropriate conditions, they have an automatic incentive to succeed and achieve their goals.

Q: Do you see any possible renovations and additions for the future?
A: We’ve already put millions of dollars into the current renovations like the lights, windows, and science labs. But, within the next 3-5 years, there will be an additional referendum by the administration, and I hope to see more repairs regarding the infrastructure of the school. We still need to fix the ceilings and leaking roofs and incorporate more technology where it is needed.

Q: Do you have anything to say to the class of 2002?
A: I hope that the graduates are successful in college and in life. The class has done remarkable things over the years; even though trying times, they have demonstrated resilience. I wish them the best of luck and good health.
Focused on class work, Man Lueng ('03) and Hsiao-Chien Shih ('03) explain to David Hou ('02) how to solve a science problem. While working in groups may be distracting for some people, most students benefit from the experience. "It's nice to have friends in the same classes who can help me when I have questions," says Hou.

During journalism, Brianne Herman ('02) and Samantha Gable ('02) share their work with each other. Although bogged down with so much work and papers, many students like these girls find time to organize and explain their notes to one another. "Being able to help each other has helped produce the best newspaper ever," says Gable.

Art Studio students here at Cherry Hill East worked together to display the sorrows and faith felt in school. After the September 11th attacks, Americans are more united than they have ever been in American history. Here at East, the flag represents our unity, our hopes, and our dreams, just as it does for the rest of America.
I'll Be There For You

When thinking about academics at East, one song comes to mind: "I'll Be There For You" by the Rembrandts. Students can get help from just about anywhere and anytime they want from teachers, counselors, and even each other. Teachers often take a lot of their personal time to stay after school for their students. They provide help for the confused, opportunities to make up missed work and tests, and even simply a friend to talk to. If teachers aren't available for students, the best place to turn to is the guidance office. Counselors provide direction for lost students and give advice to fearful freshmen, seniors in the college crunch, or any other students who need help. Yet another option, naturally, are the good-natured students of East. Wherever a student is, there is always a peer to help, whether it be a classmate or just a friend. Members of the Cum Laude Society also offer themselves as one-on-one tutors for anyone struggling in their classes. All in all, never fear. East is the school that is always there for you.

In photography, Laura Bierley ('03) shows Suzanne Ferland ('03) how to see which negatives to print by holding them up to the light. Classes such as photography encourage students to give advice to peers in need of help. Bierley says, "I like classes where we can ask other classmates for suggestions because it helps improve our work."

In Mr. Carr's English class, Lauren Kresloff ('02) and Johnny Oh ('02) prepare Coleridge's "Kubla Khan" for a choral-speaking presentation. This concept may be more difficult than it seems. In order to read simultaneously, teamwork is involved. After practicing together for a period, they pulled off a great performance.

Standing in the hallway, Brian Locasle ('02) stops to ask a teacher, Mr. Radbill, a question. Although students have an opportunity to ask questions after class, some find time in between classes as well. Even if both will be late for their next classes, persevering students and teachers will be willing to help each other out despite the time and place.
Carefully drawing a circle on a draft sheet, Jason Rosner ('05) prepares a rough sketch of a new project. His drafting class allows his creative and intellectual juices to flow. Drafting, as well as many other electives at East, provides students with a means to switch from focusing on academics to concentrating on other areas of interest.

Heeding Mrs. Cainon-Buote's instructions, Alex Busch ('04) and Leah Schneeberg ('04) watch their teacher as she gives helpful suggestions to improve their artwork. Art provides the opportunity to express artistic abilities, while preparing some students for futures in that field. Emphasizing detail and emotion, art classes can be a haven for solitude and relaxation for some students.
Going Beyond the Textbook

It is the same thing nearly every period and every day. Teachers stand in front of a classroom and lecture for forty-two minutes while classes become monotonous and students fall asleep. In some classes, however, there comes a much-appreciated break. Students fill those classes with excitement and interest instead of rote memorization and a lack of understanding. Moreover, learning without textbooks provides many students with a sense of accomplishment and more importantly, a purpose.

In science classes, students break away from the monotony by dissecting many different types of animals, breeding fruit flies, or experimenting with toy cars to discover the laws of physics. Math students play with basketballs to complete lab assignments, and drafting students dream of buildings to see just how far their talents and imaginations can go. “Hands-on learning helps you better than textbooks,” said Lauren Levine (’02). “They allow you to understand what’s really going on.”

Turning on Science Workshop during their physics lab, Austin Deng (’03) and Michael Duncombe (’02) wait eagerly to view their newly collected data. To understand the concepts of physics, students perform experiments themselves to analyze data and arrive to their own conclusions. After finishing labs, students can apply concepts they have already learned to reinforce their knowledge.

Dissecting a mud puppy in Vertebrate Anatomy, Jennifer Hacker (’03) tries to identify the important features of the animal. Accuracy in these types of labs is crucial to fully understanding the anatomy of an animal. Because of such hands on experiments students comprehend the principles of the course visually.

Todd Kent (’02) and Mo Yang (’03) collaborate on physics lab about momentum. Cooperation during labs is key to successful experiment. By working in groups students get to know one another, forming new relationships.

Intently reading a book on Latinos, Alberto Herrera (’02) and Mr. Miamidian tackle issues facing many Hispanic-Americans. Good teacher-student relations are an important goal for a happy school year.
EXPLORING INTERESTS

In the middle of a hectic day, a well-placed and well-chosen elective can provide a welcome break. Elective classes, whether they are in art, photography, cooking, journalism, computers, business, or something completely different, give students a chance to relax from their required courses and explore an area that they enjoy.

Walking through the school, a visitor can enjoy freshly baked cookies, study newly printed photographs, help mold clay, and learn how to create a computer program all in less than a day. East students can always experiment with their talents in an elective class, no matter what their interests are. "Electives give me a chance to take other classes that I normally would not have considered in my schedule. Taking Journalism during my freshmen year as an elective made me realize how much it interests me. Electives have allowed me to become a more well-rounded person," said Brianne Herman ('02).

Jennifer Habina ('02) carefully builds her miniature house in Drafting class, making a tiny version of her dream home. Drafting class stresses hands-on learning while at the same time teaching students the basics of architecture.

Conscious of cubist elements, Patrick Richartz applies learned rules while painting his own rendition of a cubist painting. Learning specific units of painting, such as Cubism, not only helps students to advance in their artistic skill but also broadens their perspective of art. "The art classes here let students put their own touches on artistic periods," commented Richartz.

With a steady pencil and a focused eye, Craig Oppenheimer ('04) carefully traces the characters in his Commercial Art class. With plenty of practice and a smidgen of skill, students can learn to do anything in the class, from simple calligraphy to full-page ads.

Careful not to hit her fingers, Yumiko Hraco ('05) hammers in a nail to complete the frame for her tile, one of the many projects in 3D Art. In many cases, preparatory steps must be taken before a work of art can be masterfully created, showing that artists can be carpenters too.
In cooking class, Marissa DeAngelis ('05), Rachael Clancy ('03), and Devin Dreschier ('03) prepare a pizza for their anxiously awaiting peers. As they learn the fundamentals of cooking, the students relish the time they spend on activities such as baking cookies and making salads. With hands-on experience, students can experiment with new recipes and techniques.

Explain the basics of Digital Photography to Stephanie Chang ('02), Mr. Kovnat shows his students how to alter pictures with the click of a mouse. Teachers like Mr. Kovnat allow students in Advanced Photography to focus on their own personal skills and favorite techniques in order to help them further understand and appreciate the course. "There is so much freedom to be creative in that class," said Chang.

Kristen Kendra ('04) lets the clay speak for her as she carefully sculpts aesthetic forms using the messy medium. Pottery making, a great outlet for creativity and just plain hands-on fun, is just one of the units for the students of 3D Art. In the class, budding artists learn to create works of art through a variety of media ranging from plain paper to clay.
Cherry Hill East was awarded the New Jersey Department of Education Star School for 1999-2000 for its innovative programs and astounding student involvement in athletics and extracurricular programs. Over the years, East has proven to be one of the most demanding and challenging high schools in New Jersey. The rigorous courses offer both intellectual and creative outlets into certain subjects and create an excellent learning environment. In comparison to the state and the nation, the average SAT I verbal and mathematics scores at East, as well as the SAT II subject test scores, are significantly higher than the national and state averages.

With some free time during the day, Lee Norsworthy ('02) fills out the payment voucher for her Rutgers application. Many seniors at East have active and busy lives and must find time in their hectic schedules for homework, extracurricular activities, and, of course, college applications.
Sitting comfortably in the Guidance office, Ed Balsam ('02) looks over an SAT registration packet. In addition to challenging courses, standardized tests help students see where their strengths and weaknesses are so that they can work harder for a better future.

During study hall in the Cafeteria, Michelle Govito ('02) helps Andréa Camarata ('02) and Jessica Lauer ('02) with a paper. Study halls provide students with a free period to finish homework or study for a test, because there are not enough hours otherwise. "With all the classes we have to juggle, it's helpful to have a study hall to finish the work we fell asleep doing the night before," said Lauer.

Whether drinking coffee in order to pull an all-nighter or taking all honors courses to maintain a high weighted GPA, Cherry Hill East students undoubt-edly go to great lengths to compete with their peers and strive for academic excellence to make an impression on prospective colleges and universities. In addition to demanding schoolwork, East students must also effectively manage their personal time and extracurricular activities.

Consequently, some students will take great pains to achieve the coveted 90. "Because of the fact that your weighted GPA is calculated by a letter system, it is pointless to go for a 99 when you can achieve a 90 and maintain the same GPA," said Omar Beidas ('02). Also, many school conscious students will often opt to not take an accelerated track course merely because of the fact that it will lower their weighted GPA and class rank. "Every college is looking for the best and most competitive students. If you want to get into the school of your choice you should be willing to put in that extra effort," said Samitha Bhargava ('03).

While a schedule filled with six honors classes and extracurricular activities may seem feasible to manage at first, many students lose their academic stamina and often feel overwhelmed by the pressures of being a competitive student. Ultimately, however, most students feel that receiving an acceptance letter to their top choice school more than compensates for the lost hours of sleep and personal indulgence.

Listening intently, this class absorbs every bit of Chemistry from their teacher. Taking challenging courses at East gives students a chance to work hard to reach their potential. However, often times this type of learning environment can lead to competition between some students.

According to the U.S. Department of Commerce's bureau of consensus, only 62.9% of American students go on to college after graduating high school. In contrast, 96% of seniors at East continue their education; 82% attend 4 year colleges or universities, and 14% attend 2 year colleges. This significantly high number of East graduates who continue their education in college shows the strive for learning among East students.
Time In, Time Out

Homework, tests, SATs, extracurriculars. With the abundant "buffet" of activities combined with the stressful amount of schoolwork, when do East students find the time to relax? Students begin the day by running from class to class, piling work, and finally ending the day with some kind of after-school activity. Many students often feel the pressure to succeed in an environment in which competition is very high.

The addition of so many AP classes over the years has added to the pressure, which leaves students feeling that only the "fittest" students survive. It is therefore no wonder that so many students welcome stress relieving activities such as hanging out with friends, listening to music, or exercising to prevent themselves from burning out. "Running for me is a way to relieve the stress that accumulated throughout the day. By joining the track team, I was able to forget things and look forward to the end of school," said Joe Kim ('05).

Like Kim, East freshmen quickly learned to adapt their learning styles as well as balance their schedules so that they could have enough time to sleep, study, and play. During the school day, students faced with complex physics problems and history debates eagerly anticipate the 5-minute socializing break between classes to chat with friends. Socializing and relieving stress are important aspects of school life for most students who want to maintain their sanity yet maintain their high school education. Those who make the most out of high school and make lasting friendships are those who have clearly experienced school life at East.

As a staff member of Eastside, Matt Berns ('02) enjoys the school newspaper's first edition of the 2001-2002 school year. Eastside editors and staff members work hard to make their deadlines, so they are elated to see the finished product. Berns said, "It is great to see the results of the long hours needed to put together the paper and to read one's own article printed."

On a bright, sunny day, Rachel Katz ('02) shares a laugh with Becca Muhlbarg ('02) who is on her way home from school. After the school bell rings, seniors will driving privileges look forward to relaxing, making plans for the weekend, and hanging out in the student parking lot. "The end of the day is the best part of the day because I can go home and relax," said Muhlbarg.

During lunch, John Davis ('02) and Menelique Woodson ('02) play a friendly game of basketball. When the temperature is warm enough, students take advantage of the newly renovated courtyard to get some fresh air, enjoy the outdoors, and take a break from the rigor of school.

Relieved to have finished his health test, Scott Soloff ('05) makes sure he puts down the correct answers. Like Soloff, many freshmen are overwhelmed with the new school, new course choices, and countless tests. However, as they ease their way into the school year, they find themselves slowly accustoming to the building and new testing schedule.

Taking some time to stop at the hallway bulletin board, Aaron Lenzer ('02) posts various theater announcements for any interested students. Despite the stress that comes with a jam-packed schedule, many East students like to fill their days with countless activities like theater and devote their time to doing something they love.
While people use lunch as a time to relax, students like Maria Carroll ('03) and Perry Hwang ('03) utilize this time to study. Many pupils feel pressured into taking a quick trip from the cafeteria to a quiet place like the library to prepare for a test in the following period. Although studying between periods for tests causes more stress, students still want to try to cram as much information into their heads as possible.

Hanging out in the hallway between periods, J.J. Ernst ('02) laughs as Craig Slootkin ('02) pretends to play the guitar with Zach Abo's ('02) guitar case. Students often need these breaks during the day to laugh with their friends and have a little fun.

Before and during school, Sherry Lu ('02) uses her translator as a guide for her homework and notes. Because Lu has just come from Taiwan to America, school may be more difficult for her than many others. Because she is not just learning academics but English as well, Lu and other ESL students put in double amount of effort compared to average for school.
Distractions, Distractions

You're sitting at a desk during 5th period English class. Your class is in the middle of a class debate about Shakespeare and your mind starts to drift. As diligent and hardworking as you are trying to be, you cannot help but have your mind wander off into new realms of dreaming. You think about sleep, for the past 24 hours has been dedicated to working on your History presentation. As tired as you are, you attempt to stay awake and continue taking down some notes. But again, the attempt is unsuccessful. Suddenly the class stops talking and stares at you. Embarrassed, you realize the ringing cell phone belongs to you. With a goofy smile, you reach out to turn it off and you take a look around the classroom. You notice some other classmates intently paying attention to the teacher, while others are playing games on the graphing calculator or avert their attention outside the windows.

Throughout the school day, there are many distractions that may keep students from paying their full attention in class. At school, instead of listening to the teacher lecture about Stoichiometry, it is easier to let one's mind wander or play games. Amy Lejarzar ('03) says that “with sports, homework, and family obligations I think it is natural for everyone to occasionally not pay attention in class”. At home, besides doing homework, a student might opt to chat with friends, listen to their CD players, or talk on the phone. Karishma Vohra ('03) says that while doing homework online, I receive a lot of mail from people... and I feel that I have to reply to them. I think it distracts me from my work and I waste an hour or so from the Internet”. Whatever it is, such distractions are a part of a students day at East.

Using an electronic translator, Jenny Yi-Ni Lu ('02) tries to find more effective adjectives. Despite the fact that this unique device helps her to find the words she needs in order to communicate thoroughly, it also may cause her to become dependent upon it. Besides being a modern way of finding and translating words, the translator may also add to the distraction level during class.

During some free time in Photography class, Megan Sobel ('02) shows Lindsey Ruthen ('03) and Breanne McNearney ('02) entertaining tunes on her cell phone. Even when there is nothing to do, good times can be found through simply laughing at those around you. Said Sobel, “We crack each other up in class. It's great!”

Dana Karl ('02) and Gayatri Patel ('03) find a second in the hall to slip in a word or two to each other. It's always a challenge to say something you want to say in the hall a minute that you have between classes, but fast talking and hand motions seem to get the job done. “A lot of times I'm in a rush, but I still make time to talk to my friends,” said Karl.
her lunch period to call up a friend on the payphone. Besides eating lunch, students can find other things to do during the period like make a call, play hackey sack, or visit the library.

Walking down F-wing, Nick Foley ('03) stops to look out side at people playing sports in East’s newly renovated courtyard. Pausing to take breaks during a hectic day helps alleviate some stress that students feel from class work.

At the end of the day, Sydney Reaves ('03) and Gwen Carter ('03) took over some class notes. Students like Reaves and Carter usually look forward to the end of the day so that they can take their minds off school work. However, they often find that even homework can become distraction when trying to enjoy life outside of school.

Listening to his discman, Andrew de Baun ('05) works on a Pop Art painting for Foundations of Art. Students often find themselves listening to music, an important element in their daily lives, during elective classes and lunch periods. Distractions like these can provide an escape from a rather noisy environment to one with more appealing sounds.

With a few minutes to spare, Nicole Agresta ('03) uses the rest of the period to write a letter to her friend. With such active lives, students often find it hard to manage their time and sometimes busy themselves with nonacademic activities before or after class.
Daily Dose of East

The first bell rings, signaling the start of homeroom, and in another five minutes a voice comes over all intercoms, telling students to "please stand for the flag salute." Students here know that with this start, they can also expect other "East" moments throughout the day: chatting in the hall, sharing current events in History, forming desks in a circle for discussions in English, helping one another, participating in countless activities, and all the while having fun.

The routine gives most students a sense of order in their everyday lives at school. Daily life at East, however, is rarely monotonous. Faculty and friends often add the right amount of variety to keep East students on their toes.

Before the start of her journalism class, Catherine Richter ('03) makes outlines for an article due for next week. For many students who arrive at their classes early, a few moments are used for catching up on homework and preparing for class.

After reading Great Expectations Cliffsnotes, Alice Nascimento ('05), Robyn Weiss ('05), and Julie Maggioncalda ('05) enhance their understanding of the book by reading a brief biography and background information on the life and times of Charles Dickens. Students often get a better grasp characters, themes, or symbolism in books.

Discussing lesson plans, Mr. DeLuca and Mr. Lapp prepare for another math unit. Because teachers understand that two heads are better than one, they often work together to coordinate their lessons so that their classes are both challenging and enjoyable.
In Wind Ensemble, while Mr. Yurko holds the chromatic tuner, Christine MacArthur ('03) watches the needle on it to make sure her pitch is not too sharp. Used both before and during every rehearsal, the tuner has become the most efficient way to check and adjust various notes. "Playing on a properly tuned instrument is so crucial to hitting the right notes and blending with the rest of the ensemble," said Jenny Feinberg ('03).

Megan Redmond ('02), Josh Pennepacker ('02), Kristie Allison ('03), and Sherita McBride ('02) gather around the computer screen as they explore websites about environmental studies. Modern classrooms are now considered incomplete without computers available for students.

Before a test, Casey Stronski ('02) and Courtney Wallace ('03) review in D-wing. Because sometimes students just cannot find enough time to study at home, hall cramming sessions seem just as effective. Stronski said, "Taking just a few minutes before class to study is better than not reviewing at all."
Keeping Busy

7:45—rush through homework. 5th period lunch-chat with friends.
2:30—go to clubs and activities. These are the mental notes of an average East student throughout the school year. The school days for East students are filled with different activities that help ensure a well-rounded high school experience. Everyday, the buffet of classes and activities at East gives students the opportunities to participate and explore different interests. The long list of activities almost guarantees that at least one activity will appeal to them and East allows students to reach their full potential and discover new talents.

Waiting for the bell to ring, Mike Morasco ('04) reads the school newspaper in the cafeteria. School publications such as Eastside contain different views written by East students. Through groups such as the school newspaper, students are given the opportunity to express their views to their peers and put light on issues that affect the school community.

Carefully rolling out paper, Neil Cohen ('02) works in the hallways of East. The large amount of activities that are available give many students ample opportunity to participate in something they would enjoy. By participating in an activity, students are motivated to explore their interests.

Concentrating on his painting for art class, Steve Gonzalez ('04) works to perfect his artwork. Art classes such as Foundations of Art and Photography inspire students to bring out their creative and artistic talents.

After school, Jenny Feinberg ('03) and Brittany Kaplan ('03) paint signs for SGA. The Student Government Association is the driving force behind a successful Spirit Week and dances. Not only does this group motivate themselves, but they also work hard to motivate students to love this school.
Sitting comfortably in one of the library's new chairs, Shantell Scruggs ('04) finishes some homework. The library is open to students like Scruggs who want to escape the din in the halls. The quiet and calm atmosphere motivates students to study or get their work done without interruption.

Studying for a test, Matthew Pagan ('03) and Ronald Rankine ('02) review the basic concepts before class begins. When forming study groups, students who share their knowledge sometimes gain an advantage over those who study alone. Working with two minds often facilitates the learning process.

Watching his peers act on the stage, Alex Ruderman ('05) sits in the little theatre. Because lab theatre allows students to experience the stage instead of lectures, students can always look forward to this period. Many elective classes like theatre give students an opportunity to have fun as well as open up their minds.

Steven Gao copies notes down in his notebook in Mr. Carlin's geometry class. Gao is one of the few students from middle school that attends classes here at East. "Even though I feel weird in a different atmosphere, I am glad that I have the opportunity to be in a freshman math course, and I get to meet new people," said Gao.

Strumming his guitar while the rest of the students sing to the music, Rick Gold ('02) entertains his Calculus class with a song about derivatives and flow rates. A simple twist to everyday learning, such as songs, interesting demonstrations, or presentations, often adds variety while also teaching a lesson.

A large group of students, including around twenty-four from East, pack themselves into the Washington Township High School cafeteria to participate in the science league. The league goes to various schools four times a year to challenge others in a fifty minute competition. Special opportunities like these at East offer students a chance to test their knowledge of the sciences outside of school.

What makes East so special? Maybe it’s the middle school student working hard in one of our math classes, a fellow East student leaving school at the end of the day to attend the UMD NJ program, or music filling up an academic classroom to enhance the students’ learning. Programs and different activities not only bring out the unique qualities of our school, but they also help students go above and beyond a normal curriculum. While most visitors at East will find these sights out of the ordinary, students here most likely will not even question them. Because East offers amazing additions and alternatives to ordinary school life, people in this school certainly appreciate them and use them to their benefit.

In the cafeteria, Amber Shernoff (’05), Christina Hopkins (’05), and Keisha Blount (’05) present a project for their World Civilization class. This change in environment for students gives them a more laid-back atmosphere to do presentations. With more open space, students find themselves more comfortable when performing under these conditions.

Aerating paramecium, Meiling Gao (’02) makes sure each culture has enough food and oxygen. Running errands, preparing buffers, and making gels are only a few jobs that lab aids like Gao do to dedicate their time to the bio department. Volunteer jobs such as this give students a chance to explore their interest in biology and allows them to become familiar with the lab equipment.

In Eastern Humanities, Daniel Morse (’02) and Nora Smaldone (’02) make their Zen garden during class. In order to create this Japanese garden, Mr. Haines and Mrs. Schuster brought the elements (sand, rocks, and wood) of a Zen garden for each student. “I liked this project because not only was it a different experience, but I also learned a lot from it,” said Morse.

Working in ESL, Jenny Lu (’02) helps her sister, Sherry Lu (’02), with some math homework. This class gives students who have only recently moved to America time to improve their English while also giving them time to communicate with other students in the same situation.
Brian Cabalo ('03) uses this TI-83 plus to calculate chemistry problems. Many students, especially juniors and seniors, are offered graphing calculators for not only math courses but science courses, too. Along with receiving new equipment, the school has also adapted to them by creating overhead projectors and a new curriculum for related subjects.

Ashley Evans ('02) catches a second in the hall to call up a friend. Understandably, after the events of September 11th increased, cell phones and payphones have allowed students to communicate family and friends of their plans.

After cleaning wire cages with a sponge, Rat Lab Technician Timothy Barnes ('03) prepares to transport one of the rats to the Skinner Box. Besides daily maintenance, technicians must also observe and record changes in the weight and behavior. With this new program, students can have not only experience but also reinforcement of psychological concepts.

When Lauren Lopilato ('04) presents her rendition of a Cubist College painting, she also explains benchmarks and standards she has reached. After her self-assessment, her peers offer constructive criticism. This year East's art classes have led the way for new approaches of learning by training students to personally evaluate their own progress.
Relaxing on the new couch during their free period, Alberto Herrera ('02) looks on while Christina Hopkins ('05) flips through the latest issue of People Magazine. Because these couches, along with the other recent renovations in the library, create a more familiar environment, students tend to spend more time there reading and catching up on schoolwork.

Scott Frank ('04) and Aaron Rivkin ('05) add finishing touches to their shelves in Woodshop. While this class has existed for many years at East, students learn to work with new materials and create new projects each year. They are exposed to different technology as well as receive hands-on experience with real tools.

The new additions to Cherry Hill East, such as the Behavioral Science Animal Lab, the newly furnished library, and class critiques, have improved the overall learning environment. These additions, combining physical renovations as well as new approaches to learning and teaching, have given the school a fresh new face. Students like to take advantage of these various extras to enhance their high school careers. "It’s great that Cherry Hill East brings new technology and programs to the school, especially at a time when it is most in need of innovation," said Andrew Elkan ('02).

As Ms. Poveda watches over them, Josh Sellars ('02) and Christina Losikian ('03) search the computer for online resources. With the changing technology over the years, the Internet has become a more reliable source for information. Increased use of the computer at East has given students not only easier access to resources but helpful math and science programs as well.

Comfort Zone

The chaos of a jam-packed schedule can sometimes be hard to handle. There are things to do, places to go to, and people to see, and after running from class to class and watching the list of assignments in your planner grow longer, any break is greatly appreciated. Luckily, East provides a laid-back atmosphere in which students can always find spots to relax in and take their minds off the rigors of schoolwork.

A free period like lunch allows you to chat with friends while also taking a breather from a busy day, and study halls give you the opportunity to finish homework or catch up on some leisure reading. Open doors are always found within other parts of the school where students can enjoy some more time alone or with a friend. With so many available places to rest during a tiring day, students can always look forward to being in East.

With some free time during the day, Cheryl Billy ('02) and Samantha Goldstein ('02) skim through a magazine article in the Main Office. East students can always find a room in the school with a warm environment in which to settle down.

With an assignment and pen in her hands, Breanne McNerney ('02) prepares to do homework by herself in the SGA office. Small rooms such as this provide students with an escape from the hectic world of East, and many students like McNerney appreciate any chance to work peacefully and alone.

With her feet propped up on the table in front of the auditorium, Christina Chang ('03) laughs at the pleasant feeling that comes with the end of any long day. Taking the time to kick back and enjoy the free hours to spare before having to do homework and come back to school is something all students look forward to.
Waiting for their rides, Andrea Gomez ('03) and Corey Westover ('04) share the events of their day on the welcoming steps at the main entrance. Students often take this short time before leaving school to socialize with friends about daily news or upcoming weekend events.

Melissa Felix ('05) and Justin Sokoloff ('05) share a laugh with their lunch table. Lunch periods give students time to loosen up and take their minds off of rigorous work and tests. Once the period ends, students can usually return to their classes with a refreshed and ready-to-focus mind.

Christine Duncombe ('04) and Colleen Duffy ('04) settle down in F-wing to sketch designs for Drafting. With so many areas around the school to work in, students sometimes find that the floor works as a more comfortable seat than chairs. Having the freedom to sit like this also brings a more familiar feel to the school, making students feel at home.
Helping Lindsay Guacciardi ('03) develop the skills to perfect her reading, Mrs. Morrone sits patiently next to her student. Even after class, teachers willingly help students reach and maintain full academic potential.

Holding the flag, Mr. Terranova shares a laugh with Michael Weitzman ('02) in the hall. Anytime during the day, students can always rely on teachers for advice, extra help, or a good conversation. Rather than bringing about a feeling of formality, teachers at East are like friends who care about their students.

In Journalism, Mr. Gagliardi helps Priti Ojha ('02) proofreading her latest story. When writing, receiving feedback from others is the best way to go. "Mr. Gagliardi is always so helpful when we need to get something done," said Ojha.
Principal Gallagher makes sure that East students are focused on their schoolwork and activities. Apart from being a hard-working principal, Mr. Gallagher has the responsibility of keeping an eye on the hallways of East.

Holding an attendance sheet, Ms. Dehoratiss gathers a group of students as she jot down some things in the cafeteria. Teachers are given many responsibilities besides teaching and helping students. Not only do they enrich the minds of East students, but they also have to make sure that the school rules apply to all students.

The Faculty

When the days are over and high school is behind us, we will look back and remember the activities we participated in or friends that we made. However, we may forget to give credit to the people who influenced us as well: the faculty.

Although they are an integral part of students’ lives, they are sometimes taken for granted. There are the teachers inside the classroom who then become our coaches, advisors, friends, and mentors outside the classroom; the counselors who become our guides in this hectic world we call high school; the officers, aides, secretaries, and supervisors. “It’s great that the faculty here is so dependable. They are always there when you need help,” said Lakshmi Ravindran (’02).

Mr. Jackson critiques the film processed by Lauren Karpf (’03) as he continues to grade the photos printed by Nicole Sindoni (’03). Mr. Jackson is one of the teachers of the ever popular photography class. Besides enriching the artistic and creative minds of the students, art teachers help students explore a different world of aesthetics.

Mrs. Muscimeci helps Spanish exchange student Jose Bernardo Hernandez Avila (’03) adjust to his classes and the new surroundings. With the handful of new exchange students this year, faculty members spend extra time with the new students to help them with their studies abroad as well as help them adjust to the differences of the school.

Going through page by page, Mrs. Panzif helps Arthur Marinoff (‘04) with his homework. Teachers usually spend extra time after school to help students who need their help. This time after school with students allows teachers to become more familiar with their students as well as communicate with them individually.
Alexandra Fox ('04), Andrea Schlater ('04), and Cathrin Di Ponzio ('04) glance at some pictures from the weekend while waiting in the halls for the five-minute homeroom bell to ring. Throughout the day, the hallways are crowded with anxious students rushing to classes or groups of friends sharing the events of the day. The hallways are a popular spot for students to hang out and exchange a few words before rushing to their next period class.

Enjoying a healthy snack, Jill Greenfield ('03) and Barri Sarwasitz ('03) laugh over a funny joke in the cafeteria. Although some students opted not to take lunch this year, many students still chose the free period in which they could socialize with friends as well as eat their lunch. The lunch period allows students to meet new friends as well as enjoy the company of many others, thereby opening up students to mix in with different cliques or groups. This often leads to new friendships.

Sitting in the comfortable library, Derrick Kearney ('02) and Alfred Bowles ('02) discuss an interesting topic they read in the newspaper. The library is open for students to go to find something that stimulates their interests. Besides providing a quiet atmosphere for students to research, the library also provides a place for students to go to meet other friends who want to relax.

Break Time

Beeeeeeep!! The 8:10 bell signals the beginning of a new school day at East. Some students are running down the hallways, trying to get to class before they get another lateness on their record. Others are slowly pacing the halls with friends, eagerly chatting about the latest gossip. Each school day may seem full of work, but with the help of the bell, many students are able to catch relief. After each period, students grace the halls as they walk to their next period class. On the way, many stop to chat and to socialize with friends and peers they encounter. This five-minute journey through the halls allows students to relieve themselves of stress as they enjoy a few minutes of much-wanted conversation with a good friend. Also, these breaks between classes help students stretch and take their mind off of complex math problems for a moment. For others, the lunch period or after-school activities serve as a better time to relax and have some fun. The lunch period enables students to finish homework, chat, listen to music, or just enjoy munching on their food, while after school activities encourage members to have fun and socialize with others of the same interests. Whatever method students choose in order to socialize and have fun, the valuable time that students have in school to kick back and enjoy the company of friends is time well-spent.
Psychology students look forward to Child Development Day every year because it gives them a chance to test not only psychological theories but their creativity as well. This year, students gathered in the auxiliary gym with children from the ages of 2 to 11, prepared with original games and questions to test moral, physical, emotional, cognitive, and language development. The real-life experience and observations gave East students a different approach to learning more about child development in those areas.
Eastside editor-in-chief Brianne Herman ('02) points out to Opinion's editor April Ostach ('02) areas in her article that need changing. Students like Herman and Ostach join the newspaper in order to reach out to others through their writing. With Eastside's many sections, each writer can incorporate his or her individual style to produce an informative and enjoyable newspaper.

Describing the compression rates of a cement sample to determine its strength, Mrs. Heath gives her class a concrete example of how calculus can be used in factories and workplaces. Teachers like Mrs. Heath sometimes find ways to incorporate real-life situations and ideas to enhance the learning process, making concepts easier to understand and remember.

After finishing his piece, Timothy Rinehart ('04) shows off his newly formed coil pot to Jennifer Vosbikan ('04) and Samantha Inselman ('05). Students that take 3D Art enjoy using different media like clay, wood, paper, and paints to create their own works of art through which they can express themselves.

Creativity Is Key

Being a student at East can be a challenge. Most classes require both book smarts and actual interest in the subject. However, another underlying factor is involved as well: creativity. This integral part of learning gives a new approach to understanding important concepts in class. With the countless projects due each day in different classes, teachers are constantly testing the students' abilities to use their imagination.

From biology seminars to Shakespeare plays, and even midyear projects, students have begun to incorporate creativity into their daily life at East. Their presentations allow students to research their own topics in depth or get to the deepest levels of a character's mind in order to receive full affect of their education.

Staying after school to work on a Hamlet play for English class, Mark Corcoran ('02) explains his ideas as Matthew Ezzi ('02) tears off enough black paper for the backdrop in their scene. Plays like this provide students with an opportunity to let their imaginations run free when making costumes and backdrops, as well as adding their own personal touch when playing each character. Students then gain a better understanding of the play itself when going through this creative process.
Diligently working to find the solution to a complex problem, Robert Ing ('04) and Peter Ko ('04) think they have found the correct answer. By working in groups to solve a problem, the solution can often be found much faster. Group work enables students to combine their knowledge and allow them to develop interaction skills.

In order to create a delicious pizza in cooking class, Jenna Dorfman ('05) and Samantha Schlaier ('05) spread out cheese on the dough while Gregory Whitten ('05) hungrily awaits for the finished product. Cooking Tech is a class that lets students learn about food and the basics of cooking. Most times, the easiest and most interesting way to learn is to work and interact in groups.

East Interacts

In the middle of first period U.S. history class, your teacher announces a midyear assessment assignment due this week. As soon as the teacher says the word “midyear,” a couple of groans resonate throughout the class. You anxiously await the instructions to follow. The project seems simple—a five minute presentation on a history topic and a reflection paper. The teacher adds, “You may work in pairs or in groups of three.” These magic words fill you with relief. The words from the teacher yield a positive response from the students because the very nature of working with others suggests that it will lessen the workload.

At East, whether it is in English, Chemistry, or cooking class, students are given the opportunity to work with their peers. The ability to interact well with others will not only help students reach their goals more quickly, but it will also be beneficial to students as they prepare to work in the real world that requires teamwork.

During an English class, students are given the option of working in pairs. Sierra Allen ('03) and Natalie Deal ('03) use this opportunity to debate about a topic. At East, interacting with others encourages partnership as well as group skills.

At the end of gym class, Dana Karl ('02) and Allison Horowitz ('02) put away their badminton rackets as they recapitulate about the game they played. Gym class is a place that reinforces the relationship between students and teachers. Students are encouraged to participate in games and sports that improve their athletic abilities and encourage good sportsmanship with their peers.
To test a theory in physics, Phil Rosen (’03) sets up a lab experiment while Mike McCoy (’03) works the computer, and Justin Baratz (’03) anxiously watches to make sure everything is set to go. Such laboratory experiments require students to acquire group skills and interaction with other classmates because of the many responsibilities in a lab experiment.

Working tenaciously to accomplish additional research, Arif Rahman (’02) stays in the computer lab with another classmate after the bell signals the end of the period. The atmosphere at East encourages students to work and motivate each other.

During English, Alan Reed (’02), Gene Hu (’02), and Helene Rejy (’02) prepare for their modern drama critique play with each other before class. One of the major aspects to succeed in performing a play is team work. Assignments such as this one also give students the opportunity to combine creativity and intellect with each other.
Finding some time during the day to study in an available room in D-wing, Sarah Parker ('04) crams as much as she can before the next period. Students sometimes find it hard to do work in the noisy cafeteria and often seek quieter areas to study during their lunch periods. Luckily, the library or the D-wing dressing room offers a peaceful environment for last-minute reviews.

Study hall gives students like Rachel Henschelberg ('02) and James Boyle ('02) forth-two minutes of free time during their busy schedules. Balancing classes, assignments, and activities in one day can be difficult, and a free period like study hall provides a calmer atmosphere with enough time to study or do some homework.

Anthony Le ('03) pauses for a moment in study hall to think about how to answer the next question in his assignment. This quiet time to himself gives Le an opportunity to not only complete any unfinished homework but also consider his schedule for the rest of the day or week. With an open period like study hall, students can sometimes even work ahead to finish upcoming assignments.

Working Hard

Students at East are known for their athletic abilities, artistic talents, and, among many other things, their hard work. Their active lives seem to leave no time for fun and games, but students tend not to complain because they understand that they need to meet up with their teachers' expectations. During school, students constantly flood the classrooms, ready to learn with eager minds. Their determination and dedication to East and its challenging curriculum help to enhance their learning.

With so much to do in so little time, students often find themselves needing to take a study hall in order to have a free period in which to finish all of their homework or staying after school to get extra help from a teacher or a peer. They also attend study groups before and after school to develop better knowledge of different subjects. With these various aspects of school to intensify their learning experience, students can appreciate all that East has to offer.

Taking a moment from writing notes, Zachary Silverman ('04) concentrates on Dr. Vivone's lecture. Trying to keep up with a teacher when taking notes can sometimes be easier said than done, so a short break to absorb and process information is, at most times, needed and always welcome.
Naseem Lodhi ('02) smiles with a friend as he helps her with homework after school. Even after the last bell rings, most students, like Lodhi, find themselves still in school, hoping to understand the last concept in Math or trying to analyze poems for English. Fortunately, a peer or teacher is almost always available and glad to be of help.

Stressing during study hall. Peter Wang ('04) rereads the first chapter of Rebecca for the third time. With so much on their minds, East students sometimes find it difficult to focus well on one subject. As the school year progresses, however, students learn to familiarize themselves with their classes and their environment, and their workloads become easier to manage.

Elizabeth Solomon ('04) and Amy Cheung ('04) cut out signs to acknowledge the students and teachers who donated at the Spring Blood Drive. Dedicated students like Solomon and Cheung work hard, both during and after school, to make East a more spirited environment.
Student Life

Known for its active community, East is bountiful in athletic, cultural, musical, literary, and academic activities. When the bell rings at 2:25 p.m., many students don’t simply end their day there. They proceed to conduct club meetings, play in musical ensembles, and participate in community service. In addition to adding to the diversity and activism of the East community, student participation in extracurricular activities helps many relax and have fun.

Students also find ways to spend time with their friends or relax their minds from school outside East. Instead of heading home to homework, many students find themselves discussing that day’s events with friends or stopping for a bite at McDonald’s. “After school, I sometimes find time to flip through photo albums, take walks, or watch TV. These activities help relieve a stressed day and allow me time to think things through,” said Naomi Baumgarten (’02). Whatever students are doing, they are always involved in activities that enhance their lives.

Before beginning his homework Andy Dittman (’02) plays a few video games on his PlayStation 2. Many students will find ways to relieve the stress of academics after school at home.

After school, Jason Dorfman (’03) and another member of Friends of the Environment change the topsoil of the land around East. As usual, this club often dedicates hours to help the school community by creating a better environment.

As a way to spend free time after school, Mindy Dhillon (’02) shops at Express. Whether it is the Echelon or Cherry Hill Mall, both places are popular spots to hang out with friends and shop around.

Typing into the cash register, Jill Pahren ('03) spends one of her Thursday afternoon working at Classic Cafe Company. Like many other students, working during the school year has become a big part of student life. Not only do students work to earn money, but it also gives more students experience out in the real world.

During homeroom, Melissa Medoway ('02) and Marc Davis ('02) read two popular book series: Harry Potter and the Lord of the Rings. These best-selling books, along with their movie versions, have motivated many East students to read for pleasure. "I read it for fun and it's relaxing because it's fictional," said Medoway.

Making The Grade

Whether they are drinking coffee during an all-nighter or taking all honors/AP courses to maintain a high weighted-GPA, Cherry Hill East students have long taken to great lengths to compete with their peers. With college admissions looming on the horizon and class rank adding increased pressure, East students pack their schedules with study, extracurriculars, and even jobs, finding little time for “extras” such as meals, bathroom breaks, and sleep.

Consequently, some students will take great pains to achieve the coveted 90. “Because of the fact that your weighted GPA is calculated by a letter system, it is pointless to go for a 99 when you can get a 90 and still maintain the same GPA,” said Omar Beidas (‘02).

Also, many school-conscious students will often opt not to take an accelerated track course merely because it will lower their weighted GPA and class rank. “Every college is looking for the best and most competitive students. If you want to get into the school of your choice you should be willing to put in that extra effort,” said Samhita Bhargava (‘03).

While a schedule filled with six honors classes and extracurricular activities may seem feasible at first, many students lose their academic stamina and become overwhelmed by the pressures of being a competitive student. However, upon receipt of an acceptance letter to their top choice school, most students feel that the lost hours of sleep and personal indulgence are more than compensated for.

Like most East students, Austin Deng (‘02) accepts the “normal” workload. With his tightly packed bag and strong back, Austin knows he’ll be prepared, both physically and academically, for an even more rigorous four years in college.

The College Craze

With one white slip of paper, a student's life changes from simple routine to utter insanity. The first college meeting with a guidance counselor is a rite of passage. Not only does the conference force students to think about the future, it marks the end of a time where decisions consist solely of what movie to see on Saturday night. Devotes to standardized tests and majors, this meeting is a rude awakening to students who have not yet looked toward a time when they will not be living under their parents' roof. Looking back on it, Maxine Barish ('02) said, "I was very frightened when 'college searching' started. It finally hit me that soon I would be leaving Cherry Hill East and that I would miss the school I became so familiar with." Gavri Yares ('03) has met with his counselor, and he is feeling the weight of the process. "The whole experience is overwhelming," he said. "There are so many little and big things to worry about. Do I take the SATs more than once, maybe two or three times? Should I take the AP exams? What about SAT II's, and which ones do I take?" He knows, though, that he can turn to his guidance counselor for assistance with every worry or question he has. Soon, time will be comprised of SAT preparation, and books about "The 311 Best Colleges" will begin to appear on kitchen tables. But for now, students can relax knowing that their guidance counselor will be with them every step of the way.

Nhan Bui ('03) flips through a college information guide comparing certain aspects like size, location, and campus. With an overwhelming number of colleges to choose from, many students find their way to the guidance office, where a countless number of resource books are available.
A Night To Remember

The sun is shining and there isn't a cloud in the sky. Daydreams of road trips and weekends spent at the shore start to swim in and out of students' heads, making paying attention nearly impossible. But mixed in with those daydreams is the anticipation for something sooner. It's April and everyone's looking forward to the Junior Prom.

One of the last big events before the all too familiar halls of East are left behind, Junior Prom comes right when students are starting to relax, enjoying the time that they have left with their friends. Mei Yang ('03) said, "Even though I'm not too crazy about dancing, I still plan on going. Being able to spend time with my friends and having a good time is what's important."

While the time to leave friends behind for the summer quickly approaches, there's no time to be sad as East becomes consumed with a severe case of prom fever. Preparation is everything when it comes to this special night. Whether it involves simply taking a shower and getting dressed or going through the elaborate process of hair, nail, and makeup appointments, every detail is planned, sometimes even months in advance.

Junior Prom is one of those special high school moments that are never forgotten, as the memories of the night last a lifetime. When the night is through, it won't matter what color dress was worn or how someone's hair was styled. Because for this one amazing night, it is the time spent and memories made with friends that will.

Carefully picking prospective gowns, Amy Huang ('03) and Katie Cook ('03) guest for that ever elusive dress. Like most junior girls, they know that the perfect match of dress, hairstyle, and accessories will add that extra touch to perfect their magical evening at the Junior Prom. "Even though getting ready for the prom takes a lot of effort, it'll all be worth it in the end," said Huang.

Q: You were out for a period of time due to health concerns. How did the students support you?
A: I had a liver transplant last year and while I was in the hospital, students sent me a lot of cards and notes. The students also sent me a big poster that everyone signed. I felt lots of support from the students. In my profession it’s important to feel needed, and it was heart-warming and fulfilling when I felt that.

Q: What was your most cherished moment with the Class of ’02? Did the Class of ’02 teach you anything?
A: When I welcomed them to East as freshmen. The class had its own personality, and its growth process from that time to graduation was familiar, interesting, and satisfying. It was still nice to see the class mature overall. There was never a time I didn’t learn something. One never knows how or when he learns something; it’s just that you do, through interacting with individuals. I found this particular class to be very talented in all facets. How could you not learn something from picking up Eastside or going to a school concert?

Q: What one word or song sums up the Class of ’02?
A: Hmm ... my one word would be exciting. I think “Somewhere” from West Side Story would be a good song for this class.

Q: If the class could be a movie, what movie would it be?
A: Umm ... Titanic? (thinks and laughs) No, no ... I’m just kidding.

Q: What advice can you give to the Class of ’02 for the future?

Q: Any last comments?
A: I wish the class the best and ask that the Class of ’02 be blessed.

Dear Class of ’02,

With the end of high school comes the final installment in the book of our adolescence. However, that does not mean that we neglected to leave bookmarks in the pages we remembered best. To highlight some of those pages, here is a madlib for your enjoyment.

I can clearly remember the first day of high school. As I entered the building I was ___________. Over the first couple weeks of school, I ___________ all the time. Over the years I have gained many friendships. I will never forget the time my friends and I ___________. I am very ___________ that high school has ended. However, as I reflect on my time at East, I would say that high school was ___________.

We wish each graduating student the best of luck in the future. Class of ’02, we thank you for the memories.

Your Senior Officers,

Rachel Hershenberg, Katie Boyle,

Not Just Smarty-pants

Every year, the top fifteen percent of the graduating class are inducted into Cum Laude Society. This year, the induction ceremony was held on April 9, 2002. Entrance is based solely on class rank, where the first five percent are chosen in the middle of junior year, the next five present are chosen at the beginning of senior year, and the final five present are chosen in the middle of senior year.

While students are chosen because of academic achievement, Cum Laude also stresses the importance of volunteering and giving back to the community. Students having difficulty with math or a world language can fill out a form in guidance, and a Cum Laude member is assigned to tutor the students. In addition, Cum Laude members volunteer in regional Special Olympics competitions.

Stephanie Chang ('02) holds up a sign advertising the Cum Laude Valentine's Day Rose Sale. Jennifer Wang ('02) wraps a rose in cellophane, and Amber Naqui ('02) and Melissa Medoway ('02) sell a rose to an underclassman. Chang said, "Dethroning roses by hand, wrapping the roses at a miraculous speed, and running back out to get more ribbons made the day very hectic, but it was worth it!"

Marissa Fang ('02) makes a change during the Cum Laude Rose Sale. Cum Laude uses the money for worthy causes. Fang said, "The money raised offsets the cost of your community service projects."

Ashley Schlaifer ('02) tutors Jon Cetel ('02) in calculus after school. One of the ways Cum Laude Society members give back to the community is through tutoring their classmates, and many members find it rewarding. "I have a lot of fun tutoring, and I think that it is great way to help others," said Schlaifer.

Match the ranking scholar with his or her answer.

1. What is your favorite word and why?
   a. Gross, as in gross incompetence: Alright, I don’t really have a favorite word, but I think “gross” speaks for itself.
   b. Friday, because I like it a lot better than Monday.
   c. Banana (I don’t know why; it just is.)
   d. Souffle because it’s a light and fluffy word that sounds nice on the tongue.
   e. Koyaanisquats, because it makes me feel so sophisticated.

2. What three words describe you?
   a. Quiet, idealistic, compassionate.
   b. Music, mind, myself.
   c. Very, very concise.
   d. Tang (of a) tyrant tongue
   e. Short, petite, and tiny

3. What are your favorite and least favorite sounds?
   a. Rain hitting the roof at night, and um … you know that sickening crunch when you smash your fender into a parked car? Yeah.
   b. The house settling, and people who eat really loud, ew.
   c. Music, and people chewing food.
   d. My cat’s purr, and my alarm clock waking me up at 6:30 every morning.
   e. When someone is singing and they hit that perfect note that makes a chill run up your spine. It gives me goose bumps, and that squeaky noise balloons make when you rub them; it gives me goose bumps. I guess its weird that both my favorite and least favorite sounds do that.

4. If you could be any fictional character, who would you be?
   a. Jo March from Little Women.
   b. Mr. Miyagi.
   c. Inspector Gadget-he puts calculator games to shame.
   d. The cat in the hat.
   e. The “Cheshire Cat”

5. What did you eat for dinner last night?
   a. My dad made steak with some really spicy fries and salad. He doesn’t usually cook but that was really good.
   b. Chicken and couscous.
   c. I seriously do not remember. I have no idea. Is that a bad sign? (The answer for two people.)
   d. Vegetable Tempura Sushi Rolls from Lotus Restaurant—the best I recommend!
   e. What is the one item you can’t sleep without:
      a. Clothes. Oh no, wait, you said that I can’t sleep without.
      b. A guy … well actually, one guy in particular. He’s brown, his name’s George, and he’s really hairy (or maybe furry is a better word). Did I mention he’s my favorite stuffed animal monkey?
      c. My eyes closed.
      d. My Snooky stuffed animal
      e. Daisy, my stuffed caterpillar. Oh yeah, like you don’t have a secret stuffed animal friend. Stop laughing; I mean it.

7. Who rocks your world?
   b. ‘N Sync. They are all that and a bag of chips.
   c. The Simpsons.
   d. I love my mom, my dad, my brother, my sister, and my best friend.
   e. Anyone who plays great music full of emotion. Anyone from Stevie Wonder to Hendrix to the Dead to Gov’t Mule to John Coltrane.

8. Where do you see yourself in ten years?
   a. I want to be Bill Graham-the concert promoter, not the evangelist. He promoted benefit concerts to help world problems. I want to own some concert venues like the Fillmores.

A POP QUIZ

Diana Tang

Matthew Berns

Marissa Fang

b. In a Tibetan monastery. When we're not meditating, some of the monks and I will start a band. We'll call it Grand Monk Railroad. We'll just make sand paintings and jam all night long. Groovy.

c. A little older, a little wiser, and just maybe a little taller.

d. Traveling.

e. A teacher or a doctor happily married and living in Manhattan.

9. What is the most important lesson you have learned?
   a. "Leaves of three, let it be. Leaves of four, eat some more!" — Homer Simpson.
   b. Appreciate everything around you. Aw.
   c. To keep going.
   d. The golden rule: treat others as you would like to be treated.

e. Don't sweat the small stuff, or like Jimmy says, "If we didn't laugh, we'll all go insane."

10. What is your favorite memory of East?
   b. My English classes.
   c. Pulling my first all-nighter. Afterwards, I fell into a trance-like state and saw all sorts of interesting things.
   d. Hmm... Field trips, photography, and photography field trips.
   e. The hours spent on Richterman Field playing lacrosse and soccer—whether sweating or freezing, always forming friendships.

11. What has been your proudest moment in your life so far?
   a. When I learned to swim. It's not funny, but it's true. Mom, Dad—thanks.
   b. That's personal.

c. I'll never forget the day when I truly became a woman... the day I finally decided to take the nightlight out of my room.

d. Um... breaking the school voting machine.

e. My Bat Mitzvah.

Seasons of Change

Four years passed without warning, a silent wind whose exhalations stirred leaves along our cobblestone path. Cherry Hill East and its red and white hallways shaped us; they led us to classes with teachers that changed the way we viewed our lives and activities that gave us insight into art and people. We will always remember these years ...

FRESHMAN YEAR: 1998-1999

As we crossed the threshold into high school, opportunities lay ahead of us like a gleaming road, teaming with classes and activities. In this first year, we tentatively engaged in different clubs and sports, testing the waters for what would become our own special niches. For years, high school, with its school dances and Spirit Weeks, cast itself in the definitive role in our young lives, and now we experienced all of it. These large-scale activities and productions, like Annie, the successful spring musical, showed us the scope of our young capabilities. We idolized the seniors as the stars of the school who took advantage of every opportunity, and we promised ourselves that we would one day fill their shoes.

Yet, our year of adjustments also caught the country in some serious obstacles. The Monica Lewinsky scandal and Clinton's impeachment became hot topics of conversation. East also felt the backlash of the Columbine tragedy. Suddenly, bomb scares were frequent, and cameras were installed. Although for many of us these were nothing but nuisances and jokes, the lessons of school violence became a permanent part of our society.

Still, the excitement of being high school students carried us through the year. College loomed before us, but our East careers were only beginning.

Anything Goes. The title of our spring musical represented this year of change. As sophomores, we knew all the intricacies of our school and confidently went about our ways. Although we discovered some shortcuts, we also faced more challenging classes, and guidance counselors began to mention a frightening thing called GPA. Drivers Ed also reminded us that our young lives would soon change. We would finally be able to drive without bumbling a ride off of somebody else!

Even the United States seemed to be stuck in a strange period of awkward growth. The strange circumstances of a boy named Elian Gonzalez captivated a nation that had been planning for the Y2K bug and celebrating the new millennium. Then, as if Regis had predicted that the nation needed a quirky game show, the big hit “Who Wants to Be a Millionaire” provided fodder for students and teachers alike.

After this transition and our entrance into the new millennium, we students would face a tough year that would bring our imminent future onto the horizon.

As Juniors we slowly worked our way up the power ladder in East, but our first year as upperclassmen promised many frustrations. Many discovered workloads beyond their wildest nightmares, while we attempted to balance schoolwork and responsibilities for clubs and activities. We also had to prepare for our first SAT, AP, and driving tests, and college campus visits. Madness ensued. Although the freedom of being Juniors made us feel older, adults and parents soon expected us to plan our futures, bury ourselves in schoolwork, and assume leadership positions in countless activities. We finally noticed the importance that we held in the school, as we became young adults, almost ready for the "real world."

Meanwhile, construction all around the school revealed crumbling facades around the courtyards. The bare walls stood gray and water pipes exploded in classrooms. Still, students found release by discussing the closest election in America’s history. We spent even more time in front of the television as "Reality TV," with the captivating show "Survivor," swept across a country thirsty for adventure. For us the thrill was also mounting. We only had one more year to go. We were almost there...

SENIOR YEAR: 2001-2002

As the realization dawned on us that this year marked our last, the anticipation coupled with hard work created a buzz among the seniors. However, even as this excitement swelled, no one expected the year to start out as it had. After September 11th, when we had huddled in classrooms listening to the loudspeaker announce the unbelievable catastrophe in our nation, we found ourselves in a country that was learning to deal with change. Our patriotism found a voice throughout East’s halls and onstage in Celebrate America, a tribute to the history of our freedom. Suddenly, we saw the future and our impact on it as a tangible force.

College, too, became a reality as we worked our way through applications, interviews, essays, and transcripts. We scrambled to finish the last of our SAT and AP tests and to prepare ourselves for college. With school construction finishing up, and the barrage of senior activities, the culmination of four years seemed complete. They snuck up on us: Mr. East, the Disney World trip, Project Graduation, and the Senior Prom. We found ourselves receiving letters from colleges. We bade farewell to friends and family. Soon we would all be starting a new leg of our journey.

After years of cocooning, our Cherry Hill community, our parents, siblings and teachers, set us free into an existence filled with infinite hues. Our childhood will transform into bittersweet memories, and our futures will contain hardships that we have never imagined. Still, we will always remember the beauty and support that people, life, and the world have given us. The sun rises, the fog dissipates, and the dewdrops tremble on fresh new blades of grass. We breathe in the morning and are ready.

A SECOND TASTE OF VICTORY

By the end of the 2001-2002 Powder Puff football game, the Juniors did not want to hear the Senior chant anymore. “We are the Seniors. Couldn’t be prouder! If you can’t hear us, we’ll shout it at you louder!”

On a beautiful autumn day, the Seniors dominated the Juniors in a 24-8 win. All of the hard work and tough practices, where two girls suffered concussions, paid off. Leading the pack, head coach Brian Locasale and other Senior coaches, Roberto West, Jon Ducati, and Al Bowles, worked with a wonderful team and put together a stifling defense and potent offense. Quarterback Lynn Brown and wide receiver Aadar Wellington led the Senior offense to three touchdowns. Molly McNerney added two extra point kicks, while Pia Litz sacked the Junior quarterback in the end zone for a safety. Megan Sobel and Ashley Schlaifer each had an interception.

This year marked the second straight victory for the class of 2002 in Powder Puff, partially thanks to returning players who offered valuable experience to the team. In fact, the team was so good that some people along the sidelines jokingly remarked that the Seniors would put up a good fight in a game of touch football with the varsity football team. Prepared well by the coaches and spurred on by the fans, the Senior players erupted in cheers when the final whistle blew.

During the second quarter, Juniors pursue quarterback Lynn Brown (’02) as she runs for a first down. Picked by the coaches because she threw accurate spirals in practice, Brown considerably helped lead the offense towards the end zone. “Going into the game, had lots of confidence in her,” said Coach Brian Locasale (’02) after the game, "but in the end, she totally exceeded my expectations.

After the final whistle, the Senior players and coaches screamed in excitement as they ran to the middle of the field with arms raised. All seniors involved in the game knew their hard work had paid off with their victory. Jane Kovalevich (’02) who was a cornerback, said, "Our victory was rewarding, especially because we accomplished our goal of going undefeated in Powder Puff.”

As their teammates make a big play on the field, Christa Wesley (’02) and Linda Chuong (’02), cheer them on. During the many practices, the players formed new friendships and developed team unity. Chuong said, “It was great supporting people I had gotten to know better in the weeks leading up to the game.”

Matthew

Congratulations!!

You set a high standard at East that is going to be tough to beat...gee, thanks.

Good luck in college next year. You are a great brother!

Love, Adam
May good fortune be with you
Down every road you roam
And may sunshine and happiness
Surround you when you're far from home

May your guiding light be strong
And may your never love in vain
And in our hearts, you will remain
Forever Young

And now that you have gone away
We hope that we have served you well
For all the wisdom of a lifetime
No one can ever tell!
But whatever road you choose
We are right behind you win or lose

Though they had their moments when Lauren would cry and Brandon would bite!

Our first family trip to Disney World we went
With parents, Ari and Andrew, a great week was spent Mickey and Minnie they couldn’t wait to see Disney in Florida was the place to be!

They went to pre-school at the JCC
Their friendship continued from here you’ll see
The elementary years were spent at Johnson school
And there were a lot of great summers at the Woodcrest pool!

The two years at Beck quickly flew by
They have grown into a great girl and guy
Their years in high school at East also went fast
It is hard to believe that they are just about past!

The next step you are college bound
We think you are the two greatest kids around
It has been exciting watching you two grow
Always remember that we love you so!

Love,
The Moms, The Dads and The Brothers

LAUREN AND AMANDA

A thirteen-year friendship lasting all these years,
The long late night talks, our laughter, our tears.
Memories too precious to be saved in a box,
The simple way we fit like a key in a lock.
All the special fun times we've had together,
Advice given or taken, for worse or for better.
Within our hearts this unforgettable bond will lie,
No matter where life may lead us, this friendship will never die.
So if ever in need, we can turn to each other whenever,
And realize in Johnson's kindergarten, we made a friend forever.

A long time ago, in the year 5744 in a city across a bridge, a little girl was born. She was cute and her hair stood straight up and her two sisters called her Spike. Spike grew quickly. She learned to walk and talk and entertain the family by putting spaghetti in her hair. When she was happy she giggled and made funny faces. When she was angry she sought out the fleshy parts of bodies and bit down hard. Her sisters wear her teeth marks to this day. And her parents called her Rookletookleberry. When she was five, she began to develop her flirting skills. Eighteen year old Jack, was smitten. She went on to conquer the hearts and minds of her teachers and friends. When the family traveled to Israel she trekked in underground caves in the desert and cooled herself on waterslides at Hamat Gader. And her sisters called her Ugly-Weed-Duckling-Sweat while they sang rap songs to their Pop. And the school years came and went along with Hebrew School, piano lessons and Camp Harlem. But what she longed for most was LBI. Every summer she would go to her favorite place in the whole world: 10 W. Mississippi Avenue. And there she would spend August with her parents and sisters and grandparents. Aunts and Uncles would bring her cousins to play with and they called her Rach-El. There she played penny poker and rummy cue and hid her cache of sugar cereals. And each summer she would do her summer reading on the beach, while the ocean roared in the background and the sea gulls called to her. As she anticipated her time in East, she and her sister planned her political career. And she worked very hard and followed the plan. And all the while she was surrounded by Shawn and Amy and lots of dear friends who studied and shopped and partied together. Her bedroom became her haven where she could be found talking on the phone, while listening to Napster, while typing a paper, while IM’ing, simultaneously. And at night, she fell exhausted into bed after studying human anatomy and deciphering calculus and interpreting Donny Q and organizing SGA, blood drive, yellow ribbon and RAK and student teaching Hebrew School and maybe even practicing a little piano. And her parents looked at her curled up in her bed, with her arm around her cat, Athena, and they were prouder than anyone could ever imagine. Their little girl was almost all grown up. She was intelligent and beautiful, loving and empathic, passionate and charming, clever and independent. And now in the year 5762 Spike aka Rookletookleberry aka Ugly-Weed-Duckling-Sweat aka Rach-El is on the brink of the rest of her life. But until she moves on, we must all call her MADAME PRESIDENT.

WE LOVE YOU SO VERY MUCH- MOM, DAD, ANNA, JULIA, GRANDPARENTS, AUNTS, UNCLES, COUSINS and CATS!!

Josh, I hope U had an amazing 5th year— it’s the only time U’ll be an upperclassman while I’m an underclassman! I wish we had become friends sooner than my last semester @ East; it’s a shame we hated each other @ 1st & once we started 2 get along I stopped going 2 school. The 1st time we really talked I realized that we shared so much in common (Our weird families, how we were both born in Tulsa & your sis & I share a middle name.) We both have the same sense of humor (Sharks, your “not anymore” comment). I don’t know how it happened, but one day U made me laugh & I haven’t stopped laughing since, it’s impossible 4 me to be unhappy when I’m w/ U! U’ll never forget the 1st time we hung out & not just b/c we have pics! We had so much fun @ the shore— U still owe me a Ferris wheel ride! From that day forward we’ve been inseparable. It’s amazing how U can spend so much time w/ 1 person, while having so much fun, & never get sick of them. Even when we have nothing to do, we’re still having the time of our life & making memories. When we started becoming close, I thought it was a dream—I didn’t understand how a person as amazing as U could put up w/ me! I sometimes still don’t get it, but I love every second of it! Our personalities R so compatible—for 2 of the same. I’ve had so many people come & go throughout the yrs, I’m certain that U’ll always remain a huge part of my life & I swear that I’ll always be here for U! I didn’t know how things would B when I left 4 Elon 400 miles away. While I miss U like crazy everyday, it feels like U R so close by U call me when U get out of school & I call U when I’m walking across campus. I realized that it doesn’t matter where we are or how far apart we R, b/c what we have is for always & few find that. I’ve spent my entire life waiting 4 a person like U 2 come into my world & when I wasn’t looking or expecting it—there U were! We R so lucky; most people spend their life trying to find the connection we’ve created. When I’m w/ you or talking to U, the rest of the world disappears—nothing else matters. U have a way of making everything bad fade away. I can’t wait 2 live the rest of my life knowing U are going 2 be a key part of it— U make me enjoy & look forward 2 living. I can’t express in words how much I cherish our friendship! I love U so much & R so much more than I ever thought I would find. When I was empty inside, U filled me w/ laughter & happiness. No 1 has ever made me feel as cared 4 as U do! have & that means everything 2 me! U R such an amazing best friend & I’m so honored & lucky 2 B yours as well! Last year U wrote in my yr bk “Hopefully U’ll remember me when U are 30 yrs old, reading this & remembering. But if not, it’s all good!” I told U that day that I would never & could never forget U & that there was much more 2 come. Look @ us 1 yr later. We’ve really been through so much 2gether (family disputes, my going away 2 NC, road trips, lots of “1st’s”) & the best is yet 2 come— we have a lifetime of fun & memories 2 look forward 2! Thank U 4 being everything U R; U deserve nothing but the best & happiness! I LOVE YOU JOSH! U have a huge place in my heart, I known we’ll always be best friends! Love Always & Forever, CHERYL

♥ Through it all we've had each other, and we'll always be there for one another no matter how far apart we are ♥
Once upon a time, there were 3 little girls- Carah, Ash, and Mer.
It all began in 7th grade playing Truth or Dare
In 8th grade, we thought we were the top of the school
Chilling with the older boys made us feel really cool.

Freshman year "cheese" became our favorite snack
Mer would never leave the house without her orange compact Typical freshman is what we became,
From then on our lives would never be the same.

Clubbing with Fork and his funny lines
We've all done stupid things more than once.
The shrimp incident in the summer
Sumo and Greenbean hosed Ash down and it was a bummer.

Sophomore year, we became smarter
The slump made school so much harder
The collgium was fun with Twix and the rest
Mer's pre party was definitely the best.

With the guys in our grade, walking around at night in Woodcrest
With rolled jeans, we always wanted to look our very best
The rain almost stopped us from going to Counting Crows & Live
But as soon we got there, we were ready to jump and jive.

Waiting for our licenses seemed like forever,
But we made through by sticking together
BNL was fun... Carah got herself into trouble
At DMB Ash was seeing double.

Carah throws her men around like they're toys
Mer had an incident with hair gel which made a lot of noise
Making it through prom was an interesting event
Billy Elliot and small hands provided us with some entertainment.

In the summer we wanted adventure so we took some road trips
When we got lost, Carah was always sure to flip Weeks at the JCC camps we missed Mer a lot
But we wrote her and kept her updated on all our hot spots.

We've had lots little fights, but true friendship always lasts,
Although next year will keep us states apart, we'll forever share our past.
People say these are the best years, the ones to always remember,
But the years wouldn't have been memorable if we hadn't met our "best friends forever".

memories:
Stalking, obessions, cosmo, fork, dl girl and dl boy,
spacial problems, bipolar disorder, trips to penn,
error death accidents, teaching mer to // park, making cd's,
big o's, welcome to pinups, midyear, secret lives, dirt hole, blonde boy, sessions at the corner, concerts,
being freaks, rides to camp and many more.
May your future ride be filled with good health, happiness and much success!

We Love you,
Oliver, Scooby Doo, Hercules, and our Families
Partying, Z’s house, DRIVING, dances, jcc, gossip, silly string, WAWA, ocean city girls, starbucks, short hills, senior guys, trick daddy, golfing, aol, Coming to America, halloween, college, movies, vito’s

Michelle - We’ve always been there for each other, this will never change... we’ve been best friends since 7th grade and it’ll last a lifetime

Lee - I have known you for 6 years now and we have so many good memories. You are my best friend and I couldn’t ask for anyone better. We will always be best friends forever

You’ve grown up from such a fun & loving little girl to a wonderful loving & caring young woman. We have enjoyed every minute we have spent with you. Always reach for the stars and follow your dreams. Give the world the best you have and the best will come back to you. We will always be here for you.

Lots of Love,
Mom, John, Sam,

Dear Jennifer,
We love you so much! You are our sweet, beautiful, little girl forever! Dad loves your laughter and Mom loves your sweetness. We are so proud of your academic success during your 4 years of high school. We also enjoy watching your graceful dances. As an easy going girl, you made friends everywhere, who kept your busy schedule. It’s hard to see you leave home. We are going to miss you badly, we know you are creating a bright future for yourself. We believe you will build another successful and meaningful 4 years in college!

God Bless You!

You & Laur
A day in the life of The Psychotic Friends

* Lauren & Lee *

On Friday morning at 7:45, Lee's marshmallow car pulls in front of Lauren's house, where she waits for five minutes, and upon seeing Lauren, she yells at her extensively for not wearing a coat. "Is that a joke?" She asks, and then compliments her outfit. "You are so hot!"

In the car, they fight over the radio station, and when Lee rolls her eyes at the Janet Jackson selection (how dare Lauren interrupt Ani DiFranco!), Lauren reminds her, "Duh! It's J. Lo!"

In the parking lot, Lauren refuses to get out of the car. After Lee drags her out of the door, they walk into school reciting their mantra: "we are the coolest girls in school." They say goodbye to go to homeroom; parting is such sweet sorrow.

After enough separation, the pair goes out for a noon lunch and manicure. Then they talk about the meaning of life (hands under the UV dryer) and go back to school.

At 2:30, Lauren and Lee meet at student entrance where they run to Lee's car in order to be the first at Bagels and... When the "best customers" have ordered "the usual" and Lauren has emptied all of the salt containers, they tell all of their secrets only to find out that "fortune cookies never lie." Trying to "get comfortable," they sit on the curb at Holly Rovine for three and a half hours, looking through the random goodies (and glitter) bought at CVS.

Having walked into her house, Lee remembers that she forgot to tell Lauren something and calls her, but then her cell phone rings. Lauren is on the other line (who else would it be?)! It is time to discuss the evening activities, but that conversation ends quickly. What could be better than Elena Wu's, Dégâ Vu, and Country Club? But then again, they wouldn't know.

On this night, however, the two girls get lucky! One of their very favorite groups, THE BETA BAND, is playing at the TLA. They go to the Chinese restaurant on South Street for a "snack," and then go dance with Muhammad like it's their job.

Driving home in their "cherry red, one-fifty" with the windows down, Lauren and Lee "get Real." They have a sleepover at Lee's house where they talk into a fan until 3 a.m. After their good deed helping Raf with beauty tips, they jump back and forth from discussions on, once again, the meaning of life and various positions (to eat wheat thing)... their exhausting day draws to a close as they doze off to sleep, with a hug and an "I love you, sweetie."

"Best friends on every day, in every way."

Brittany - You mean the world to me. You are the greatest Big Sister and I love the relationship we have. They don't come better than you. To live with my best friend is the best thing I could ever ask for. I can't believe you're graduating and leaving me next year. We have so many memories that we share and they will just continue. I will miss you soooo much next year. I will always be here for you whenever you need me. Good Luck in college.

I LOVE YOU!
Love Always, Chelsea
From the day you were born, you have filled our lives with pride and love. May your successes, accomplishments, and memories of your high school years be an inspiration to you forever. Enjoy all that life has to offer for "Life is short but sweet for certain." Congratulations! We have no doubt that your future will be bright.

We love you,
Mom and Dad

Dear SHAUN,
Congratulations, on graduating from high school. I am going to miss having you home to fight with. I hope you do great at college and that I am able to come and visit you. I will miss you.

I love you,

Michael,

It seems like only yesterday we were freshmen and this whole "dream" of the two of us began. These past four years with you have been like "heaven-on-earth." Michael, you have truly shown me what it feels like to be in love, thank you! You're my best friend and at the same time, so much more. I will always cherish the times we've spent together and the memories we've already made. I LOVE YOU ALWAYS & FOREVER!

~Your Baby Girl~

Joyce,

Well, it has been a wild and crazy four years and now, it's our time to go our own ways. We have had so many great times together, as well as some bad. But as I say good-bye to you, I can truly say it was all worth it and if I could go back, I wouldn't change a thing. I hope you know that I will always be right there to pick you up if you fall and wherever the roads of life may take me, you will always be in my heart. I love you and you will forever be my baby girl.

Michael
Relationships—of all kinds—are like sand held in your hand. Held loosely, with an open hand, the sand remains where it is. The minute you close your hand and squeeze tightly to hold on, the sand trickles through your fingers. You may hold on to some of it, but most will be spilled. A relationship is like that. Held loosely, with respect and freedom for the other person, it is likely to remain intact. But hold too tightly, too possessively, and the relationship slips away and is lost.

Watch out guys... here come the Blondes!!

Hotel parties, club wawa, "Annie are you ok" Dance. Having no sense of direction whatsoever... Tara how does it feel, to not be blonde? (poopy hair). "ya idiot", "Tara, what's your opinion on this?", Looks like we're the hottest ones here (again). Prom night (of hell), late night parties, pointless driving, breakers... if all else fails, Free donuts (only because we're hot), serving dinner to bands in our bikinis at Warped Tour '01, Diners at 2 AM. Punk-o-rama tour, "That's just the way it goes these days", hanging out with every band there is (Green Day, Sum 41, Wheatus, SR-71, Incubus, Fenix*TX, Blink-182, Good Charlotte, BBMak, Mest, Hoobastank, Alien Ant Farm, Less than Jake, NOFX, US Bombs, American Hi-Fi, Drop Kick Murphys, POD, and the list goes on.)

When we imagine
the life you will live,
We think of the pleasure
your presence will give;
see the joy your smile will light and the wonders you'll weave when your dreams take flight

We feel the hope that will grow with your grace and the difference you'll make to each heart you embrace

We imagine your life
as we know it thus far,
for Dear Dana, you've given us
'This" and 'more'

Thank you for being our other 'shining star'.
We will love you always,

TO MY SON:

High School is over, the day will soon come for you to go away...
We will pack the car and drive you to school through my tears "keep him safe God" I will pray.
I will walk past your room and close the door, it's something I will not want to see...
Once where there was noise & clothes and clutter it will be quiet and empty as can be.

I will tell myself I am in a phase, my emotions will be all out of whack...
But deep down I know, as each of you grow this emptiness will keep coming back.

Our family will be whole again on and off through the upcoming years...
It will be different though, it won't be the same and for that I will shed some more tears.

I have raised you Matthew, for exactly this I want you to fly and spread your wings...
It's just so hard to let you go and let you see what else life has to bring.

I know now that I must look ahead and put your childhood memories behind... and look forward to the times to come and the HAPPINESS you will find.

ALL MY LOVE,

MOM

Matthew - we are PROUD of you. You have turned in to such a wonderful young man. Your high school years are over and you will be off to college. We will MISS you, but you have the best years ahead of you!!!!

LOVE,
MOM, DAD, JASON AND BRAD
Matthew~
I guess I can say that it has been a crazy road growing up with you. You have not only been like a brother to me but you have also been my best friend. Whenever I needed someone to talk to or someone to make me laugh, you have been that person. We've been friends for as long as I can remember and I'm sure you're going to be my best friend for the rest of my life. I cherish our friendship with all my heart. You are truly my best friend! I love you!!!~Dana xoxo

Dana~
It's hard to put into words what your friendship really means to me. For as long as I can remember I have always been Dana's twin brother no matter where we went together. You and me have always been, in my eyes, the closest of friends, and I just want you to know that no matter where we go in life I will still see us as having that relationship. No matter what college you go to or where you end up afterwards you will always and forever remain my best friend and twin sister. Love~ Matthew

We Love you!
To our dear Christopher:

We can't believe how much time has past,
We wish it all would forever last.
But now we have to let you grow,
Into the young man that we all know,
You brought us joy, triumph and hope,
Your struggle for success was like a long rope,
We wish that you may always be,
Humble, kind and live with prosperity.

With love,

Rachel,

It has been a long and wonderful journey from an airport on the other side of the world until today. In between, there have been homework, headaches and more hours driving you to dance than anyone can imagine but, more than anything, there has been the pleasure of watching you become who you are today.

Congratulations, Little One, on your graduation from high school and on preparing to start off on another journey.

We love you!

THROUGH IT ALL SOMEHOW WE REMAINED FRIENDS

To Ryan:
You know me inside and out. You can read my mind, finish my sentences, and find out anything I say about you in seconds. You’re always there for me whether I need someone to yell at, a shoulder to cry on, or just someone to make me laugh. You are truly a best friend. I know at times I don’t give you the credit you deserve but you know... It’s all part of the head games. Honestly Ry, I love you with all my heart and I don’t know what I’d do without you. Although to the world we aren’t together, in my eyes we never broke up. Good luck in the future and forever keep in touch.

~Kristin~

To Kristin:
What a crazy couple of years this has been. We have quite a history, going back many years, that all started with the infamous driveway. A lot has happened since then, and I cannot imagine all the experiences we have had together and all the ways I have to know you. We are fortunate to have remained close, in the closest of friends, and I know I am not alone when I say I am thankful for the memories we have and hopeful for the ones that will come. Good luck.
Ryan

To Matt – my best friend and older brother,
I don't know what it will be like to not have you at home.
You were always there to help me with everything!!!!!!
Who will cover your back on the ice?? I'm just a phone call away. Good luck in college.*I love you, Matt.
Love,
Moose
Casey,

As you go out into the world on your own, you'll leave some things behind. Just don't leave behind your smile, laughter, and loyalty to what you believe. These three qualities that you possess have won the hearts of many—especially mine! Follow your dreams, work hard, and never forget how much you are loved. Good luck in your future!!!!

Love always and forever,

Mom

Lizzy,
We've been through a lot together. Although a lot of the time we fight over borrowed clothes, having to share a bathroom, privacy, and a lot of other stuff, most of my memories of you are GREAT!! You are always there for me when I have to complain about something and can't find anyone to listen to me, when I need advice (mostly guy related), but most importantly, you are always there when I need a friend! I know I complain about you and you complain about me, but you are the best sister I could have asked for. I am going to miss you SO much when you go off to college.

I know we fight to be the center of attention but you will always be center stage in my life.
I love you Lizzy!
Love, always,
Your little sister Margie
