ACTIVITIES
Skimming through Eastside, Samhita Bhargava ('03) and Molly Finkelstein ('04) discuss issues of the school. Eastside contains various school-related articles, including sports, features, world issues commentary, humor, opinions, and community. "Eastside is a link connecting the community with news about recent and ongoing events," said Bhargava.

Orchestrating a poetry discussion, Demogorgon editors Marissa Fox ('04), Dave Koslow ('03), and Max Gessman ('03) keep the group from straying on too many tangents. Demogorgon, which is entirely student run, produces their literary magazine at the end of the year. "It's nice to get feedback on my writing from my peers who have similar literary styles," said Molly Finkelstein ('04).

Discussing photos, Daniel Chung ('04), Charlotte Cheung ('04), Molly Finkelstein ('04) and Parth Modi ('03) select candid photographs to place in the year's yearbook. "Throughout the school year, editors and staff members select and crop photos, draw layouts, and write captions to create the final book. Creating the yearbook can often be stressful, but its results are very rewarding," said Chung.

Smiling for the video camera, Erica Klazmer ('04) interviews Kate Morin ('03) for Eastcast, East's news show. Eastcast informs the community about East's events and gives students a chance to involved themselves with the production of news. "Eastcast gave me the opportunity to develop public speaking and communication skills as well as experience in front of the camera," said Klazmer.

A Way With Words

While school projects are a way to learn cooperative learning, many clubs offer a different approach to teamwork. Some even allow students to showcase their creative sides. Covering areas not typically found in the classroom, these clubs emphasize a particular skill such as reading or writing. For example, East's newspaper, Eastside, instructs staff members in the principles of journalism, while allowing them to dip their pen in layout, editing, and photography. Their work has been recognized nationally, and received the George H. Gallup Award given by the International Quill and Scroll. If journalistic writing is not one's forte, he can opt for creative writing and have his work published in the literary magazine, Demogorgon, which has received a First Place award from the American Scholastic Press Association. As evidenced by the numerous accolades won, the group work put into both Eastside and Demogorgon has paid off. Requiring much commitment, these organizations show students not only the pleasure of making new friends, but also the effort it takes to work in such clubs.

Drawing from her extensive vocabulary, Anna Cho ('03) types captions and roster lists for Eidolon, the school yearbook. Writing captions requires knowledge of the contents of the photo as well as the writing skills to make the captions interesting. "Trying to capture the diversity of the entire East population in one book is difficult, but in the end, it is all worth it!" said Cho.

Students involved in clubs and organizations know what perks and responsibility come in Senior year, specifically leadership. Seniors Mike Sinai ’03 and Peter Gambino ’03 had a discussion in a recent meeting of the Comic Book Club. Foremen of a club learn responsibility and discretion, and go on to become the leaders of the world. Such responsibility allows the students to become more confident in themselves, which will help them in all aspects of life.

Focusing intently on her task, Yi Liu ’05 meticulously folds paper flowers in Craft Club for the Lunar Banquet. Usually, the Craft Club donates its work to area nursing homes and hospitals. It is an urge to bring cheer to the elderly and infirm that compels these students to use their time in such a fashion.
School is not limited to the two extremes of studying and socializing. A wealth of opportunities is available with clubs. Many of these clubs are especially appealing to students when the club practices their hobbies such as photography or arts and crafts. The members of these clubs get together to pursue non-academic interests with people who have similar passions. Often, this is a way for them to ease the pressure of schoolwork, as the club brings another dimension to everyday life.

The Tai Chi club, for instance, practices this martial art because it can help build mental and physical strength. "Tai Chi is a combination of slow motions that require one to focus or her internal power, and helps to improve coordination, self-awareness, speed, leg-strength, health, and balance," said founder Yuanpu Zheng (03).

Other members have also noted this fact and also realized how interesting learning a new art is. Member Michael Purcell said, "I think it's fun... it's an experience of doing something really different.

Likewise, the Comic Book Club allows students to be in atmosphere of other avid comic book lovers. Discussions are pure enjoyment because the members engage in conversations about something that they are truly passionate about. While some may call clubs an after-school activity, it is more of a labor of love for their members.

FOP CHAIRPEOPLE: Diane Casey, Samira Farouik, Sari Fleischman, Sara Hackmyer, Perry Hwang, Jennifer Kim, Susan Millenky, Tim Rinehart, Matt Rosenblatt, Lisa Sternberg, Jeff Stomel, Kim Wiseley, Advisors: Mr. DeLuca, Dr. Vitone

Amanda Hymsen ('06), Lindsay Klein ('06), and Amy Giambanis ('03) pose with some of their elderly friends at a neighboring nursing home. Members of SHARE contribute their time outside of school to assist nursing home staff and to talk with residents. "I'm in it because I like spending time with older people and it's fun to see how much they enjoy spending time with high school students," said Klein.

Lisa Zhu ('06), Jeremy Chin ('05), Albert Lin ('05), Sue Xo ('03), and Sanaa Somailey ('05) paint a sign to advertise the Friends of the Environment Battery Drive. The Friends of the Environment club seeks to educate people about the environment and raise money to support its cause. "With the Battery Drive we hope to prevent harmful Battery pollution," said Chin.

GAY-STRAIGHT ALLIANCE: Molly Finkelstein, Marissa Fox, Max Gessman, Jen Ginn, Fay Hughes, Jess Kier, Mike Marshall, Jeanette Neuner, Julia Newman, Joan Olson, Rachel Singer, Lindsey Stone, Jim Thomas, Meg Tremble, Corey Westover, Advisor: Mrs. Varon
Concerned Citizens

Lindsey Stone ('05), Britta Snyder ('05) and Jim Thomas ('05) discuss issues facing the gay community at a Gay-Straight Alliance meeting. This club fosters discussion and acceptance among its members. "We're trying to make people more aware that it's okay to think and be different," said Thomas.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL: Anindya Basu, Courtney Cox, Beverly Hon, Sylvia Kim, Greg Laynor, Philip Osborne, Jillian Rosenfeld, Adam Sagot, Brad Silnitzer, Dan Wen, Advisor: Mr. Timothy Locke.

Selling pizza after school, AIDS Awareness attempts to raise money. The AIDS Awareness Club educates the community about the causes and effects of HIV and AIDS. "Being a member of AIDS Awareness is a great way for people to accomplish a common goal of helping others." Anna Cho ('03) said.

It's A Small World After All

While East is known for many achievements, community service stands out as one of its finest. With activities ranging from FOP and Operation Smile to Friends of the Environment and the Animals Rights Club, East students take time out of hectic academic schedules to reach out to the greater Cherry Hill community. Members believe community service is beneficial for not only those in need but also themselves. After investing a great deal of their time in various projects, students are able to put a smile on someone's face, which many describe as their ultimate goal.

FOP, for instance, organizes a holiday party for handicapped people in December. To make the party a success, much help is needed with painting posters and cutting table decorations. Students agree that donating their time to a worthwhile cause is the least they can do.

Ballroom chairperson, Samira Farouk ('03) said, "If we can make someone smile just by putting in a little time and effort, it's hard to say that the experience isn't fulfilling.

At all of East's community service clubs use their time to give back to the world, members believe that extending their aid to others is quite a rewarding experience.

Leading a discussion, the officers of JSA debate the topic of the day. They discuss national and international current events such as the progress of closing and the situation in Iraq. "JSA is an open forum for debating political and social issues," said Meenal Tripathi ('03), president of JSA.

Standing in front of their members, the Animal Rights Club officers Parth Modi ('03) and Niki Robinson ('03) lead a discussion about their upcoming events. Past events have included building birdhouses for the school and adopting an animal. "The Animal Rights Club focuses on fundraising for animal shelters and wilderness refuge and encourages respect for animals through discussion and debate," said Parth Modi ('03).

Some students do not make a dash for their buses or cars at 2:30. Others stay after school to participate in various clubs that suit their personalities. While some students may delve into student government or culture clubs, others wish to continue their interests in academics. Tailored to these students' tastes are science leagues, language clubs, and the rat lab. Extending their after school activities, these students take their love for classroom topics and use the skills learned in another way. The science leagues, for instance, take trips to other schools where they take exams, hoping to come out on top. East has been known to do extremely well at these competitions and most of the credit goes to the students who put in 110 per cent.

Also, in the Spanish club, members explore the Spanish culture through dancing, among many other activities. Similarly, the French club helps its members to discover the French culture by taking trips to French restaurants, and sometimes making delectables from French cuisine themselves. In their spare time, these students have transformed topics normally discussed only in the classroom into passions for an entire club to enjoy.

Christine Forberger ('03) practices a Spanish dance with her partner Alejandro Cotto ('05) after school at a meeting of the Spanish Club. The members meet regularly in order to share cultural experiences with each other and spread knowledge about their heritage. Forberger said, "I joined the Spanish Club because I am Spanish, and I like to do activities that explore the Spanish culture."

A student gently handles a rat from his psychology lab room. Observing the rat provides valuable information in cognitive department and other areas of psychology. Samira Farouk ('03) said, "Rat lab is a great way to learn about psychology because it allows us to see what we learn in action."

Melissa Horowitz ('04), Andrea Goldstein ('04), Jim Richman ('04), and Anna Ly ('04) review thermodynamics in preparation for an upcoming Chemistry League test. The League's members, who are only invited to participate after passing preliminary exams, show great dedication to an academic subject they love. Horowitz said, "Chem League is just like a sport — we have practice, too. We prepare for the monthly competitions by taking previous tests. And our hard work pays off!"

SPANISH CLUB: Harry Cochran, Joshua Cammack, Alejandro Coito, Christine Forberger, Sandy Gonzalez, Aliya Massey, Vicky Morales, Viviana Pabon, Jerry Pang, Advisor: Dr. Baden

College is not the only place to get a head start for the future. East is home to numerous opportunities that allow a student to get his foot in the door. Whether it is DECA, Future Doctors of America, or America’s Prospective Engineers, these clubs help students to gain a broader understanding of the professional world. With experience in high school, students will be able to excel not only in college, but in their careers as well.

In DECA, for instance, students get hands-on training in the business world. If students pass the Regional and State Competitions, they then go on to the National Competition, which has been held in California and Salt Lake City in the past. This year the DECA students are headed for Florida. Getting first-hand experience, students work alone or in pairs in a certain category. Anjal Mathur (‘03), who has attended the National competition two years in a row enrolled in the advertising category and created a medical product during her sophomore year called “MonkeyMeds,” which were sugar drops in the shape of lollipops. DECA helped Anjal to gain more insight into the world of business.

“The best thing about DECA is that I can actually make a product. It’s like I’m working in the business world already,” she said.

Future Doctors of America is another club that helps students to build a foundation for their professional futures. In this club, members speak with professionals in the medical field who help students to determine whether they would like to make this line of work their career, as do the various clubs at East that show students a glimpse of their futures.

Gesticulating, Nishtha Sodhi (‘04) emphasizes her point while practicing with the Debate Team in Little Theater. The Debate Team encourages growth in public speaking and poise, training students to speak well under pressure. “The best part about debate is during intense matches when you are arguing back and forth with the opposing team. You get so involved, focused, and charged up - it’s a great feeling,” said Sodhi.

Members listen attentively as the guest speaker lectures on the intricacies of medical professionals’ relationship with HMO’s. The FDA exposes its members to the medical field by going on field trips and inviting guest speakers to talk about aspects of medicine. “FDA is a great club because instead of just having discussions about becoming doctors, we take field trips to hospitals and we have many guest speakers. The club actually gives you a feel for the medical profession,” said Shweta Bharadwaj (‘05).

Rachel Laskin (‘04), Mike Nemehrof (‘04), and Paul Bessler (‘04) paint signs to publicize Spirit Week and to generate enthusiasm from the junior class. The Student Government Association promotes leadership and school spirit, allowing the student body to voice its opinion on school affairs through elected representatives. “As a member of SGA, my job is to encourage class spirit and help my class to succeed; we all dedicate ourselves to make spirit week as good as possible,” said Bessler.

Chairperson Diana To ('03) paints a sign for the Variety Show to draw a large audience to the event. "The Variety Show gives students a chance to display their unique talents for a good cause; half of the proceeds goes to charity and the other half goes to the SGA account," she said. "I think the Variety Show this year included more variety as opposed to the previous years. In that way, we pulled more people into it and that's why it was such a success," said To.

SGA OFFICERS: Adam Berns, Lauren Goldlust, Matt Karpf, Justin Marlowe, Matthew Sterling, George Schlesinger, Jenna Weinstein, Advisor: Dr. Vivone

MOCK TRIAL: Shweta Bharadwaj, Leena Bhatnagar, Sue Bhular, Mufal Dahodwala, Garen Eisen, Sam Elias, Ben Gross, Jamie Hacker, Janice Harlow, Rachel Karf, Evan Klein, Michael Kober, Amanda Levy, Britt Robbins, Adam Sagot, Nishtha Sedhi, Sarina Somalja, Sean Stewart, Meena Tripathi, Sunaina Varlagadda, Adam Zell, Advisor: Mr. Nation

FUTURE DOCTORS OF AMERICA: Shweta Bharadwaj, Kevin Brown, Brian Cabalo, Rich Chang, Alan Chu, Dan Chung, Nicole Cohen, Mufal Dahodwala, Danielle Dittrich, Grace Guit, Janice Harlow, Andrew Herman, Patrick Ho, Thomas Hour, Robert Ing, Andrew Kang, Yousufm Kim, Lisa Korostowski, Vipul Kumar, Ted Mokaloko, Keval Pandit, Ben Rozen, Philip Specht, Jill Steinbrecher, Josh Stirm, Mike Stin, Matt Weinraub, Sunaina Varlagadda, Advisor: Mr. Robino
Among the many things that East is well known for, diversity is one of the most apparent. To nurture a respect for other ethnicities, students have formed culture clubs that teach members about the traditions of different cultures. The many clubs, such as the Asian Cultural Society, Indian Cultural Society, Korean Culture Club, and Chinese Culture Club, help East students to better understand their friends' backgrounds.

Besides learning about cultures within one club, all of the groups combine their efforts to organize special events. The Lunar Banquet is one such event. On this day, members of all of the Asian clubs get together to celebrate the Chinese New Year by inviting teachers to sample delectables from different Asian countries. In addition to food, teachers can also enjoy the sights and sounds of different culture, as the students perform traditional song and dances. Multicultural Day is another event that brings together all of the culture clubs; this event features song and dance from not only the Asian clubs, but the other clubs as well. At these events, both members and nonmembers, are able to find common ground and understand the similarities across cultures.

Sitting at a table in Cafeteria 2 after school, Beverly Hon (’05), Yi Liu (’05), and Mary Guo (’05) play the ancient Chinese game of mahjong at a Chinese Culture Club meeting. CCC holds an annual meeting designed to teach both Chinese and non-Chinese people about this aspect of Chinese culture, "I think that the Chinese Culture Club gives students the opportunity to learn about Chinese culture first hand. We try our best to be active in both the school and also the Chinese community of South Jersey," said Hon.

Reporting the results of the elections for ACS, Christina Lee (’04) ascribes the names of the new club officers for the 2002-03 school year. Most clubs around the school held annual elections so that those seeking leadership positions could present their cases and members can choose their officers, thus showing that democracy exists even in school. Andrea Park (’04) said, "In various clubs, the members have the opportunity to elect their leaders. Officers are chosen based on speeches and leadership qualities and therefore the culture clubs have democratic procedures." Leading a discussion during an ACS meeting, officers Cecilia Louis (’01), Rachel Vaught (’01), and Monica Rauba (’01) talk about plans for the auction, which is used to raise money for ACS. While known not just among ACS members but also among the school, the annual event involves the "selling" of various members who put themselves on the auction block. However, ACS is not all fun and games. "The point is to get Asian people and those interested in the Asian culture together so everyone can become more open-minded," said Louis.

Antoinette Duffy (’03) and Mike Duffy (’04) led a relaxed discussion at a Filipino Culture Club meeting. Attracting many Filipino students, the FCC connects members to their shared background and unites them with peers of similar heritage. President Antoinette Duffy said, “As president, I’m responsible for uniting the Filipinos at East and encouraging them to get involved with the school and to interact with other culture clubs.”

Always aware of her responsibilities, treasurer Melissa Maw (’03) reviewed notes during an ACS meeting. Culture clubs often take field trips to learn more about their backgrounds and ACS is no exception; however, clubs must raise their own funds, and treasurers like Maw play an important role in achieving that goal. Maw said, “I have to be responsible for keeping track of the cash box and making sure that when we plan field trips, we have enough money.”

IRISH CLUB: Niki Ambrose, Megan Boland, Eileen Brennan, Deanna Burch, Angela Carroll, Maria Carroll, H.B. Cochran, Sarah Cochran, Ashley Craven, Meghan Daly, Steve Emerson, Max Gessman, Laura Gladney, Melissa Goldman, Laura Griffin, Jill Johnson, Kristen Kinell, Kristen Lance, Katie Lichtman, Justin Marchew, Leila Mendelowicz, Matt Neary, Ryan Neary, Hannah Pimperton, Niki Puleio, Kristina Reilly, Karishma Vohra, Katie Voskoboynik, Cindy Wen, Brian Young, Advisor: Mr. Killion

Performing various dances such as the umbrella dance and the lion dance is imperative for CCDC to raise money to buy props like fans, umbrellas, and costumes.

ITALIAN AMERICAN CLUB: Amie Adcock, Chris DiBartolomeo, Frank Gambino, Kristen Kendra, Kyung Kim, Mike Marasco, Joe Matteo, Ross Millstein, Mitch Palazzo, Tim Rinehart, Nicole Sindoni, Cody Tucci, Advisor: Mr. Gagliardi, Mr. Melograna

CHINESE CULTURAL DANCE CLUB: Peggy Chang, Grace Gui, Alice Hon, Niki Lui, Yi Liu, Elsa Ly, Diana To, Jennifer Wang, Cindy Wen, Annie Yan, Andrea Zou, Advisor: Mrs. Shuster

The drums roar. The trumpets blare. The flutes chirp. The music from D-Wing comes alive like a spirited jungle. Melodies from the instrumental groups levitate towards the peak of the canopy and slither through, emitting beautiful sounds into the halls of East.

In addition to being dedicated to academics, sports, and clubs, East students are committed to the performing arts. The narrow, sometimes unnoticeable hallway known as D-Wing is home to not only choral groups, but also instrumental groups such as Wind Ensemble, Symphonic Band, Freshmen Wind Ensemble, and Jazz Band. In these bands, students can escape from the often unbearable day-to-day rigor of school and enjoy the music.

"Band is a good way to take your mind off the tension of other classes, and it gives you a chance to meet new people," says Diana Macunias ('03), a French horn player for the Wind Ensemble.

Besides being a fun elective, however, it also allows students to apply the musical theories they learn to pieces played in class. Students also get a crash-course in composers from different cultures and generations; while one day the Symphonic Band may play a piece by Gustav Holst, the following week they could experiment with a John Philip Sousa march. This exposure to music at an early age helps students decide whether or not they would like to pursue music professionally.

Macunias says, "I'm not sure about that far in the future, but I'll most likely keep [band] up in college if I have the time."

Whether or not East's musicians want to make a career out of their interests, for now they can enjoy the sweet sound of success.

Hannah Goldstein ('06) watches Mr. Keleher during a freshmen wind ensemble rehearsal. In freshmen wind ensemble, all of the members start out at one level. Over the following years, the musicians can audition for higher-level groups that place them among upperclassmen.

Cellists Mo Yang ('03) and Andrew Kju ('04) warn up with the rest of the orchestra before the winter concert. Because of the multitude of music groups at East, one half of the groups perform on one night, while the other half perform on a separate night. The fall concert, however, features all groups on one night playing fewer pieces so audiences can see East's musical talent in its entirety.

FRESHMAN WIND ENSEMBLE: Meryl Abag, Greg Adcock, Annie An, Vikram Bhardwaj, Mike Berkowitz, Jim Boguski, Tim Boyle, Joe Brach, Pamela Chang, Rebecca Chen, Grace Cho, NoriAnna Cohen, Jaclyn Davis, Brian Deppe, Steven Dinsmore, Rick Dominis, Amy Ehrich, Ross Fishbein, Hannah Goldstein, Zhen Gong, Mark Greenfield, Jamie Herron, Ilana Holland, Jason Huber, Andy Hurwitz, Joseph Ibay, Ben Kaufman, Andrew Kendus, Jeffrey King, Eugene Ko, Mike Kober, Brian Laflerty, David Lamprou, Lauren Laskey, John Lee, Adam Lieberman, Kristen Little, Daniel Min, Naomi Mahlberg, Adam Niver, Soo Pak, Derek Podewitz, Jake Polack, Jason Reed, Andrew Satt, Todd Schefflin, Christian Shelmire, Philip Spechler, Caryn Steinbrecher, Emma Stone, Matt Tannenbaum, Liz Waslik, Matt Weiler, Marjorie Welch, Monica Yoo, Mr. Keleher (Conductor)
On stage during a winter concert rehearsal, Yasin Al-Sayyad ('03) controls his drum strokes by placing his palm gently on the tympani. Playing percussion is one of the most versatile musical positions because members of the percussion section can play more than one instrument, such as the gong, bells, triangle, snare drum, or xylophone. Although drummers may have it difficult musically, keeping in time with the rest of the band, the perk of choosing from a variety of instruments is definitely a nice reward.

During the winter concert, Jennifer Feinberg ('03) attentively watches the baton to make sure she is in time with the rest of the wind ensemble. As some students begin playing from fourth grade, the journey to high school-level music education is long, but gratifying. "One of the things I always looked forward to in high school was pursuing my love of music," said Feinberg.

SYMPHONIC BAND: Cierra Allen, Jared Batterman, Javier Bolanos, Deanna Burch, Andrea Cometz, Christina Contratatto, Lisa Chalist, Irene Chung, Chris Cicerco, Amanda Cucinotti, Kim D’Imperio, Amy Dobner, Dan Dressier, Julie Drezner, Aaron Dvorin, Peter Ehstratisades, Sal Galati, Malissa Goldman, Fay Hughes, Evan Klein, Steven Kramer, Christine MacArthur, Beth Martino, Anthony Menta, Melissa Mijares, Lauren Noce, Jill Pahmen, Kavita Pandit, Archanra Ram, Tovah Ross, Corinne Schneider, Matt Schorr, Lindsey Shaffer, Michael Sharp, Lauren Shelmire, Todd Sharofsky, Adi Shmuely, Zachary Seidman, Stacy Silverman, Ben Silverman, Julie Sobota, Fred Su, Abbey Teller, James To, James Vuong, Freddy Wang, Steven Weissman, Nana Wilmot, Ilana Worrell, Justin Wu, Andy Wyong, Gavri Yares, Jin Ah Yu, Lisa Zhu, Mr. Kelether (Conductor)

Imagine showing up to school wearing the same outfit as 200 other people. It's a prom worst nightmare, but a choir dream. The black choir dresses and tuxedos give the upper choir an aesthetically pleasing appearance, while red choir robes show poise and professionalism amongst Vocal Workshop, the entry-level choir.

Though they may dress the same, the members of the East choirs certainly do not all sound the same. After completing a year in vocal workshop and learning the basics of singing, vocalists have the option to audition for a higher-level choir. While Chansons, a women's choir, highlights mature soprano and alto voices, Concert Choir balances both male and female voices. East Singers, the most selective group, performs challenging music and performs both in and outside of school.

Through daily rehearsals and rotating lessons, the musicians prepare a wide range of repertoire to perform at the Fall Preview Concert, the winter Concert, Opera Night, the Spring Concert, and Graduation. From spirituals to show tunes, East's vocal students are exposed to a broad variety of music.

Besides developing superior vocal skills and learning music theory, choir is a great way to meet others with similar interests. Said Rachel Karpef ('03), "East's vocal department has introduced me to many kinds of music and styles. More importantly, it has introduced me to my best friends."

Awaiting Mrs. Lausi's signal, Sara Sherman ('03) internalizes the rhythm of the song as she prepares to play the accompaniment for a winter selection. Concentration is one of the most important aspects of accompanying a choir. Before playing the correct notes and keeping in time, focusing one's energy towards music comes first.

While practicing their music for East Singers, Brittany Cohen ('04), Karishma Vohra ('03), Lauren Sheehan ('03), and Marissa Fox ('03) practice in a sectional and compare notes with each other. The advantage of working in a sectional is that singers can practice with people with the same voice part. This way, they can make the most of rehearsals.

"And All That Jazz"

While many students audition for All-South Jersey and All-State musical groups, there are plenty of similar groups right here at East. These creme de la crop groups include the Jazz Band, Jazz Standards, Chamber Winds, and Brass Ensemble. While in the Jazz Band, students audition for a limited number of positions, in other musical groups, instrumentalists are chosen by Mr. Bruce Yurko, conductor of the Chamber Winds and Brass Ensemble, and Mr. Timothy Kelleher, conductor of the Jazz Band and Jazz Standards. To be selected, the musicians must practice frequently and maintain their passion for the art. While most students hurry home at the sound of the 2:30 bell, others stay after school to practice music for one, two, or even more groups in D-Wing.

One of the advantages of learning music at East is that there are a multitude of opportunities awaiting musicians. For those who play a wind or brass instrument, the Brass Ensemble or Chamber Winds groups are perfect matches. When working closely with other band members and a conductor, those students achieve a certain level of maturity that can help them in possible music careers.

Besides these groups, Lab Band offers an opportunity for those students who would like to learn jazz music, but do not play a traditional jazz instrument. The numerous ensembles indicate the school's hope to maintain musical integrity.

band rehearsal. On one level, instructors teach the students the basic fundamentals in a particular area. Most importantly, however, they also encourage students to help them become better musicians.

With the bow set gently against the strings, Gavri Yanes ('03) follows the notes on his music, bringing to life the melodious notes of the base. Members of the bands and orchestras often practice their instruments daily to perfect the music. This way, they can make the performance enjoyable for not only themselves, but for the audience as well.

Saxophonist Jackie Gerber ('05) rehearses her music for jazz band, following conductor Mr. Keleher's instruction. Among the other small music groups that put in much time after school, the jazz band is no exception. Meeting every Monday and Thursday, the jazz band puts in hours of hard work during their practices. Besides working hard at school, the musicians also perform at many competitions in the New Jersey and Pennsylvania area.

Belting out tunes on their trumpets, Dan Rober ('04) and Boris Lau ('03) keep an eye on Mr. Tim Keleher, the jazz band conductor, for their cues. Playing music is truly grounded in pace. In order to create a uniform, pleasing sound, all members of an ensemble must stay in tempo with their fellow musicians.

Awaiting the start of the concert, jazz vocalist Cristin Milotti ('03) and jazz guitarist Ben Hopkins ('03) rehearse and relax before a concert. Concerts are both a time when performers can show off their talents to the larger community. Gaining more exposure, musicians display their hard work that often seems effortless.

CHAMBER WINDS: David Baumgarten, Jennifer Feinberg, Alexandra Hill, Christine Mullin, Hannah Plimpton, Mr. Yurko (Conductor)

BRASS ENSEMBLE: Nick Acciani, Andrew Bleaken, Scott Herman, Daniel Herron, Josh Levinson, Justin Lin, Tim Plimpton, Aaron Rivkin, Mr. Yurko (Conductor)
D-wing is also home to the small vocal ensembles at Cherry Hill East. As some of East's most talented and dedicated musicians, The Belles of East, Madrigals Singers, Casual Harmony, and Celebrations not only perform at East's seasonal concerts but also year long throughout the Delaware valley. Carrying East's name through the community, they frequently perform at Elementary schools, nursing homes, and other spots of interest. One can see, for example, the Belles of East caroling through historic Haddonfield during Christmas time.

Because of the varied styles that these groups offer, East always puts together an exciting show. While the Madrigal singers represent the Renaissance era in both repertoire and costume, Casual Harmony stages comical presentations of its music, always pleasing the crowd. The Belles of East, one of three hand bell choirs in the nations, sing and ring at the same time! Members find the entire small group experience both musically and personally rewarding. With numerous concerts and rehearsals, they gain a deeper appreciation for music as an art form. The pleasure, however, that the members find in performing at out-of-school locations goes beyond a sheer love for music. "It's really satisfying to perform at all the different places. It's nice to know that by singing, we're helping to make someone's day a little brighter. Music is amazing that way," said Samhita Bhargava ('03), a member of the Belles of East.

With popular repertoire, striking attire, and harmonious voices, these vocal ensembles grace East and the surrounding community with their performances.

Andrea Goldstein ('04) and Stacy Silberman ('04) perform with Celebrations, a group that plays the English hand bells. Because the girls must coordinate the notes of the bells with the rhythm of the music, intense concentration is crucial. "It takes a lot of work, but it's a lot of fun, too," said Silberman.

Gathered around the piano, the Belles of East practice voice parts for "Mr. Sandman," a piece selected for the competition in Washington D.C. with 14 female voices, the group must maintain a perfect balance and pure tone. Although many of the selections have sweet harmonies with their own tune, others, such as "Mr. Sandman," have a clashing but jazzy twist.

BELLES OF EAST: Anmie Adcock, Samhita Bhargava, Anny Chan, Charlotte Chong, Britanny Cohen, Christine MacArthur, Eve Michaleski, Sarah Parker, Alison Seibert, Sara Sherman (Officer), Elizabeth Sobkow, LeAnne Spino, Holly Warshauer, Sarah Waxman (Officer), Mrs. Lausi (Advisor)

MADRIGAL SINGERS: Jeremy Banett, Brian Cabalo (Officer), Shirley Fan, Rachel Karpf, Rohini Khillan, Susan Ko, Daniel Kober, Beth Martino, Kim Pejidak, Danny Rose, Amanda Ross, Amber Shernooff, RJ Weaver, Claire Wesley, Debra Winter, Kyle Wislocky (Officer), Mo Yang, Mrs. Lausi (Advisor)
Rehearsing in the auditorium, the members of Casual Harmony perfect their spring music. Casual Harmony consists of 13 males who perform everything from ballads to pop tunes. These men are known for their liveliness and comical performances, paired with excellent musicianship.

Brain Cabalo ('03), Ben Gross ('04), and Dan Chung ('04) rehearse with a piano in the vocal room for Casual Harmony practice. Becoming a member of a select ensemble requires each member to put in much time and dedication. Apart from rehearsing every morning during homeroom and once a week after school, these musicians make time out of their busy schedule to rehearse and perfect their concert music at home. "We can't skip Casual Harmony for a doctor's appointment or to make up a test. Every voice counts," said officer Danny Rose.

Kimberly Pajdak ('03) and Shirley Fan ('04), both members of the Madrigals, perform the song "Carol of the Bells" at Longwood Gardens. During the Christmas season, Longwood Gardens holds holiday celebrations that include a variety of performances from many local schools. Amidst the glowing lights and beautiful trees, the singers' voices resound through the Gardens and provide entertainment for the entire audience. "It was one of the highlights of the year," said Mrs. Lausi.

CASUAL HARMONY: Seth Alamar, Jeremy Bennett, Brian Cabalo, Daniel Chung, Garen Eisen, Benjamin Gross, Mike McNelis, Danny Rose (Officer), Adam Sagot, Joshua Spechler, RJ Weaver (Officer), Evan Weiss, Kyle Wislochky, Mrs. Ferguson (Advisor)

CELEBRATIONS: Keisha Biount, Sarah Cochran, Andrea Goldstein, Alice Hon (Officer), Christine Kim, Elizabeth Luk, Christine MacArthur (Officer), Leila Mendelowic, Catarina Pien, Stacy Silberman, Jennifer Shpion, Ruiann Takanashi, Ilanna Worrell, Mrs. Ferguson (Advisor)
"It seems we're going to have a real old-fashioned Christmas," promises a character in George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart's American comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," which East performed this fall. The play revolves around the hilarious events that ensue when Sheridan Whiteside, a famous critic, celebrity, and lecturer, is forced to spend Christmas with a typical American family in a typical American town.

The performers put in much hard work and many long hours to make the fall show a success. But, before the show is under way, there is bound to be some apprehension. Any seasoned performer has pre-show jitters. Right before the curtain rises, an anxiety, whether small or large, seeps into the minds of performers, making some excited, others nervous, and a few nauseous. Although the fears seem menacing at first, they are only temporary. As the stage lights turn on and the show begins, the actors put in 100 percent to have the best show possible. The goal of any performer is to conquer that initial nervousness and turn that energy into liveliness during the show. Besides the actors, a good portion of the rest of the production is done by the stage crew, who help to build sets and make sure the show runs smoothly. They also may have a degree of anxiety as their set designs and props must embellish the production itself. Although performers, whether musicians, stage crew, or actors, may anticipate "The Big Night" with some fear, the end product makes these students realize how worthwhile their efforts were.

Cristi Milioti ('03) enacts an emotional scene during the fall show, playing the character Lorraine Sheldon. Actors must delve deep within themselves to often recreate an emotion. While this may seem difficult, many of East's actors do it with utmost ease.

Playing Sheridan Whiteside, R.J. Weaver ('03) performs in the play "The Man Who Came to Dinner" along with Sarah Parker ('04) and Matt Williamson ('03). Requiring much time and effort, the fall show means that the actors and stage crew must put in 100 percent. However, when the curtain raises a surge of excitement tells these performers that all of the effort was worth it.

"Les Mis Biz"

Les Miserables, the highest grossing Broadway musical of all time, came to East with a bang this year. The production started work earlier than usual to accommodate the operatic nature of the show and the intricate sets.

The story of Les Miserables is one of love, courage and redemption, and is delivered through song. Because of the challenging and immense quantity of music, the musicians had to devote much time and effort to ensure perfection and often sacrificed other activities.

“I definitely had less time to do my homework because the show took up so much of my time. It was my only after school activity for a while,” said Cara Davis ('05), who played Cosette, the daughter of Fantine and wife of Marius.

In addition, creating the sets was a tedious effort in itself. Over 30 students were needed to handle the technical portion of the show. This particular production required the construction of a revolving stage, an aspect that was essential for the success of the show. The numerous members of the stage crew worked intensely to make sure that this part of the production went off without a hitch.

While the entire production process called for more preparation than usual, the show was one of East’s finest because it created a new standard for high school musicals and made a large profit.

Street urchin Gavroche, played by Dan Amerman ('06), attempts to climb the barricade before being killed during battle. Besides featuring high school students, East productions also offer parts to students in elementary schools. Les Miserables, in particular, featured many students from various Cherry Hill elementary schools.

The unrelenting Javert, played by Brian Cabalo ('03), towers over prisoner Jean Valjean, played by Kyle Wislocky ('03). One of the advantages of having many students get involved with East productions is that the cast rotates so that more people have an opportunity to play different parts. The experience of playing different characters enhances the way in which a performer reacts to other cast members.

Singing “Lovely Ladies,” some female cast members play prostitutes during one of the scenes in Les Miserables. Unlike other East musicals, Les Miserables provided more people with more stage time. This enabled much more of the cast to spend time together in front of the audience.

Les Mis was the most rewarding experience I’ve ever had! - Rachel Karpf (’03)

Sarah Waxman (’03), who played Fantine in the red cast, sings about a hope that has died in “I Dreamed a Dream.” Fantine’s main solo. The role of Fantine required much command over the singer’s voice, as it ranged from mellow alto tones to high soprano vibrato.

“It’s great to have a show that the entire school and community got excited about and enjoyed.” - Kyle Wislocky (’03)

Playing the convict Jean Valjean, R.J. Weaver (’03) belts out his solo, “What Have I Done?” on opening act. Because the production is still fresh, opening night can arouse many jitters. By the last show, however, the sets change fluidly, the musicians are well acquainted with their music, and the performers take a part of the character with them.

The old saying, “Practice makes perfect,” seems to be in the genes of East’s performing arts students. Every year, optimistic singers, musicians, dancers, actors, and artists practice to earn a spot in one of East’s elite arts groups. For some, they have been playing for quite some time, and their talents have been nurtured throughout the years. “I began playing when I was six because my siblings played … [and] I felt it was really awesome,” said Richard Chang ’04, a violinist for the orchestra, who also made it to All-Nationals this year with flutists Jennifer Shipon ’04 as well. Shipon began playing when she was eight years old, as her fascination with the flutists at a camp talent show inspired her.

To make it to these elite groups, students go through a rigorous audition process and hope that they have done their best. However, many students do not let the pressure get to them. They understand that music is rooted in having fun. Shipon said, “Everything about music retains a certain degree of ‘funness’ for me, otherwise it wouldn’t be worth pursuing.”

Within school, the Performing and Visual Arts Society, simply known as PAVAS, enables students to become a part of a group that honors artists who have contributed to the arts during their high school careers.

Still there are many groups at East that do not have out-of-school audition processes, like the Mime Company and Studio II. In the Mime Company, members perform for small children at elementary schools and hospitals, hoping to brighten a child’s day. Also, this year, Studio II performed the controversial play “The Laramie Project,” which focuses on the murder of Matthew Shepard. Above all, motivation has driven these students to obtain the highest honor of excellence.

March Madness

"Detail! Atten-Hutt!" announces drum major, Brian Cabalo ('03). Rallying the members of the marching band, Cabalo, along with assistant drum major, Christine MacArthur ('03) begins to lead the marching band during a football game.

The cheerleading squad is not the only group to energize and invigorate the crowd at a football game. Au contraire - the members of the marching band are also known to pump up the crowd. But before they can boost the energy at the football games, members must attend band camp in August to help them learn the techniques, music, and marches.

The camp lasts for one week and rehearsals take place every day from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Once camp is over, the musicians have learned their music and are ready to hit the field. During the football season, they practice three days a week with color guards. The practices may be grueling at times, but once the season is over, many begin to miss all the fun that was had.

Drum major Brian Cabalo ('03) says, "I like being able to work with such great people. I feel comfortable around them."

Performing at each football game, the group travels to different venues for competitions or simply to game to excite another crowd.

Concentrating on keeping a steady tempo, drum major Brian Cabalo ('03) conducts the marching band. Being a drum major entails many responsibilities, such as leading band rehearsals after school and arranging music. "This role requires a great deal of musicianship and leadership," said Cabalo.

Following the drum majors, the band members march onto the field to play their show at a football game. Besides performing during the halftime, the band entertains the crowd in the stands. They have a vast repertoire of popular music such as "Rocky," "Louie Louie," and "Cheeseburger in Paradise."

Striking his bass drum, Matt Weiler ('06) helps maintain the rhythm for the marching band. Ensuring that all band members march at the same pace, the percussion section is a vital part of the ensemble.

"When we perform in parades, even in between songs the drummers still have to play cadences so everyone can march properly," said Molly Finkelstein ('04).
Against All Odds

In position to keep a free hit from penetrating Cougars' territory, Sarah Devlin ('03) stays low to keep the ball from reaching her goal. Mental and physical toughness must be present in the field hockey player. Such toughness, determination, and team unity brought the team success this season.

Captain Alaina Gregorio ('03) leads the squad in a cheer at a football game. Cheerleaders put all of their effort into every routine. Their enthusiasm is contagious as it spreads through spectators and players.

FIELD HOCKEY: Billie Birnbaum, Mia Bushman, Amanda Cucinotti, Gabrielle DeCrescenzo, Sarah Devlin, Samira Farouk, Michaela Gorman, Lauren Guida, Brittany Hoffman, Courtney Hummel, Jennifer Kim, Katherine Klausner, Meghan Retilly, Allison Segal, Marissa Swayne, Amy Townsend, Daryl Wander, Colleen Zinn, Ms. Der Pilbosian (Coach), Ms. Laura O'Driscoll (Asst. coach).

FOOTBALL: Gamal Aibona, Chad Armstrong, Eric Azcona, Taj Biney, Matthew Brooks, Clark Carter, Michael Carter, Joseph Comforth, Jared Ettinger, Brian Fishman, Kurren Frazier, Johnny Fulton, Andrew Gentzaro, Christian Gibbon, Aaron Graybill, Raymond Hooey, Thomas Kavanagh, Christopher Longo, Michael Marino, Steven Markos, Justin Matthews, Nicholas Mitchell, Ronald Overton, Jeffrey Palansky, Anthony Prescott, Spencer Prescott, Sean Satchell, Stephen Scarnato, Jason Scarnato-O'Donnell, Nicholas Scarlett, Daniel Timko, Benjan Titus, Frank Tucci, Alessandro Valentine, Travis Williams, Jack Womack, David Woo, Maria Cattarbone (Manager), Lauren Gurfinkel (Manager), Mr. Wood (Coach), Mr. Radbill (Coach).
Playing their rival West on Thanksgiving Day, East offensive linemen try to keep the West defenders out to protect their quarterback. Football players must keep standing, and also be constantly moving. Players must be focused and keep their heads in the game.

Trying to keep the ball in play, Cougars, Amy Townsend ('03) dashes full speed to the ball. Field hockey players like Townsend dedicate their time after school to grueling practices to improve all aspects of their game. Only after practice can the team taste the sweetness of victory.

Trying to keep the East crowd pumped, the cheerleading squad keeps the fans entertained with exciting cheers. The cheerleaders practice hard after school to keep the football team's spirits high as well as the fans.

HIGHLIGHTS:
Field Hockey: 2002 Captains: Billie Birnbaum ('03), Amy Townsend ('03), Colleen Zinn ('03); Accomplishments - Lauren Guida's ('04) goal against Eastern breaking their streak since 2000; 2nd Team All Conference: Billie Birnbaum ('03), Amy Townsend ('03), Amanda Cucinotti ('04); Hat trick against Pennsauken: Amy Townsend ('03); Winning and scoring more than last year; 1st game of the season against West.
Cheerleading: Accomplishments - 2001: 2nd place at Audubon Competition; 4th place at States; YCAA Champions; 1st place at Sterling Competition; 2002: Regional Champions; Attended Nationals in March 2003.
Danielle Thurston ('03) makes a quick move around her opponent. Possession and control of the ball in soccer are crucial in soccer, allowing offenders to score against the other team.

Dana DiBruno ('04) sprints past her defender to the ball. DiBruno is only one of the many fast runners on the team. This year, the team's speed helped carry them to the state tournament.

Samantha Shafer ('03) prepares for her next stroke as she awaits her opponent's return. Concentration is key in tennis. The combination of concentration, practice, and talent led the team to success.

Dedicated cross-country member David Koslow ('03) runs towards the finish line. Koslow, like the other runners, spends his time after school running to stay in shape for upcoming competitions. With dedication like Koslow's, the team had a great season.

HIGHLIGHTS:
Boys Cross Country: Accomplishments - 4th place at Disney Classic; Placed at Camden Country Championships; 2nd Team All Conference: Adam Colle ('05), Chris Corey ('03), David Koslow ('03); 4-year Varsity runners: Kevin Desrochers ('03), David Koslow ('03) ... For The Love Of The Game

Kirby Chin ('04) attempts to outrun his opponent and looks to finish strong to end the race. Determination in the runners was a key ingredient to their great season.

Christina Contrafatto ('04) warms up before a tough match. Practice paid off for the team this year as the girls earn the Group IV State Title.

Using his speed and endurance, Adam Coile ('04) tries to outrun his opponent. East cross-country runners practice daily during the week, running long distances. Their work ethic has earned great achievements for the team.

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY: Michael Adler, Harris Berlinsky, Kirby Chin, Adam Coile, Christopher Corey, Sean Corey, Brian Deppa, Kevin Desrochers, Steven Dinsmore, Steven Gao, Alexander Goldman, George Henahan, Zachary Herrmann, Jason Huber, Evan Klein, Ethan Knecht, David Kosal, Ryan Kusan, Jacob Leh, Dave Londres, Justin Markowe, Jarrett Radlitz, Steven Reisman, Jordan Rosenberg, Michael Rotella, Kunal Sharma, Christian Shehmir, Brad Silnutzer, Zachary Silverman, Silvio Zappasodi.

Going All Out

Samantha Foss (05) receives a hard hit ball from the other team. Passing is the key transition from defense to offense. A good pass leads to a good set, and ultimately a powerful hit.

Leaping into the air, goalie Michael Danyo (03) saves the day for the team. Goalies must work hard under pressure, but Danyo seems to be having a good time in what he’s doing. With Danyo’s kind of diligence, the boy’s soccer team had a great season.

Sisters Kelly Longa (06) and Kristen Longa (03) run side-by-side, making long distance running look easy. The team practices hard after school. Because of tough practices, the girls can show off their high endurance and stamina at meets against other schools.

Samantha Inselman (05) hits past the block. Just in case her hit is blocked, her teammates are around her for coverage. Volleyball players must work together and trust each other to win.

GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY: Merissa Bernstein, Dale Burton, Melissa Friend, Jill Greenfield, Laura Herron, Alexandra Hill, Beverly Hon, Kelly Longa, Kristen Longa, Leigh Mccurdy, Stephanie Mikitish, Holly Moeller, Laura Neff, Lauren Scarpato, Rebecca Sobel, Kate Van Brunt, Kimberly Wiseley, Sumina Yarlagadda, Jane Zucker, Mr. Musemeci (Coach), Mr. Russo (Coach).

BOYS SOCCER: Sean Borkowski, Paul Caracccolo, Steven Chew, Patrick Clancy, Michael Danyo, Christopher DeVirgillis, Blake Edelman, Greg Gein, Keegan Gein, Jack Keyes, Christopher Kralls, Gregory Lichtman, Michael Miracola, Mitja Mueller, Matthew Robinson, Troy Sattin, Steven Steinberg, Matthew Sterling, Daniel Wu, Alex Zaslow, Mr. Moehmann (Coach).
Holly Moeller ('04) looks for a comfortable pace in the middle of a race. For many cross-country runners, running is a way to relieve stress. Though competitive, many runners simply enjoy a long, peaceful jog.

A pack of East Cougars perseveres as the girls continue on a lengthy run. These talented members of the girls' cross-country team need physical and emotional strength. Although running a race is an individual accomplishment, unity and cooperation are needed for team success.

The desire to win must be in every player's heart. Players must try their best before, during, and after games. Keegan Gosick focuses sharply as he crisply passes the ball to a teammate. As soccer is a game of fast footwork, each kick has to be well placed.

Trying to dodge the defensive player, Paul Caraccio ('04) runs after the soccer ball, hoping to lead the team to another victory. Requiring both mental and physical agility, soccer is quite a challenging sport. After putting in 110 percent, both the player and team can enjoy their win.

Reaching high, Barri Sarowitz ('03) spikes the ball, scoring yet another point for the team. Hitting requires a lot of coordination and time. Killer spikes are impossible to return.

Poise Under Pressure

The cheerleading squad practices a cheer for an upcoming competition. Although the cheerleading squad cheers for the football and basketball teams, they also participate in various competitions. Due to their extreme sense of teamwork and commitment, the cheerleading squad has been extremely successful.

Jeff Polansky ('03) squares up against an opponent as a wrestling match begins. Squaring up and preparing a strategy is key to success in wrestling. The success of the wrestling team can be attributed to quick planning and alertness.

Braving the cold weather, George Heneman ('03) runs back to Eau from a weekday practice. Sometimes runners must deal with adverse weather conditions. Many runners agree that the best thing to do is dress appropriately.

Boys Winter Track: Christopher Baillargeon, Philip Blackmer, Jeremy Blum, Henry Chan, Kevin Chang, Philip Cheuk, William Cheuk, Alan Chiu, Adam Coile, Brian Di Bartolomeo, Omari Douglas-Hall, Ryan Gutman, George Heneman, Matthew Kauth, Dustin Kuan, Derek Podowitz, Toby Steinberg, Michael Thompson, Alessandro Valenti, Christopher Williams, Chung Yen Wo, Mr. Ceslick (Coach).
Releasing the bowling ball from his grip, Herb Fishman ('03) intently watches the ball as it sways back and forth the lane, only to make a strike in the end. Bowling involves both good form and technique to be successful. Often, these two skills are best when a bowler combines mental and physical capabilities.

HIGHLIGHTS:
Wrestling: Captains: Jason DiNapoli ('03), Justin Ensign ('03); Accomplishments — 1st Team All Conference: Jason DiNapoli & Justin Ensign ('03); 2nd Team All Conference: Bryan Klumberg ('03), David Koper ('03); Jason DiNapoli ('03) & Justin Ensign ('03); 1st Place at Districts; Bryan Klumberg ('03) & Justin Bonnittas ('06); 2nd Place Districts; Michael Lustier ('06) and David Koper ('03); 3rd Place at Districts ... Cheerleading: Captains: Laura Davis ('04), Alaina Gregorio ('03), Meredith Karpf ('04), Julia Wacura ('04); Qualified for EOA Nationals, 1st Place at Audubon Competition, 3rd Place at States; 5th Overall; Olympic Conference; Performance at Sovereign Bank Arena for States ... Boys Bowling: 2002 Captain: Herb Fishman ('03); Accomplishments — Records: 701 1st Place High Series & 266 2nd Place High Game — Herb Fishman ('03); 3rd in Patriotic Division; 1st Team All-Stars — John Evangelista ('05), Justin Baratz ('03); 2nd Team All-Stars: Herb Fishman ('03), Scott Frank ('04) ... Boys Track: Captains: Omar Douglas-Hall ('03), George Henenhan ('03).

In a heated moment of the match, wrestling co-captain Jason DiNapoli ('03) attempts to pin down his opponent. Wrestling, a sport in which even a millisecond can make a difference, depends on the agility of the wrestlers. Quick thinking and being able to act on the second makes wrestling quite an intense sport. Michael Rotella ('06) and Greg Whitten ('05) practice before an upcoming meet. Intent on lengthening their strides and effectively sprinting to the finish, practice is important for the runner's muscles and preparation for races. Working side by side, the runners challenge themselves and each other.

WRESTLING: Alexander Baratz, Travis Becker, Daniel Berger, Jorden Berjua, Austin Blaker, Justin Bonnittas, Alexis Breisler, Maria Catrambone, Bryan Cole, Jennifer Cole, James Daisy, Jason DiNapoli, Justin Ensign, Evan Garonzik, David Gonzalez, Lauren Guri, Marc Hlywiak, Clark Hoffman, Vasilios Kalavrouziotis, Bryan Klumberg, Dimitry Kodes, David Koper, Jordan Ludwick, Michael Lusiera, Ross Millstein, Nicholas Mitchell, Matthew Pezzato, Jeremy Ruiz, Matan Shmuel, Benjamin Shore, Maria Catrambone (Manager), Lauren Guri (Manager), Mr. Wright (Coach).

Britney Vespe ('06) concentrates on the hoop before making her foul shot. Although basketball is a team sport, when making a foul shot, all eyes are on one player. The pressure may seem high, but because the players have practiced these types of shots often, it is nothing but net.

Kate Van Brunt ('03) turns for a quick breath as she approaches the end of her race. Unlike any other sport, swimmers are not required to practice with the school team. If they are already on another team, swimmers can just go to their team's daily practices.

HIGHLIGHTS:
Girls Bowling: 2002 Captains: Nicole Robinson ('03), Accomplishments — 2nd in Patriotic Division; 1st Team All-Stars: Rachel Herman ('04), Christine Duncombe ('04), Nicole Robinson ('03); Girls Swimming: 2002 Captains: Natalie Deal ('03), Amy Townsend ('03), Kate Van Brunt ('03); Accomplishments — Record: 1-2-2, Beating Shawnee: 1st Place at Swim Fast Relays; 4th Place at South Jersey Swim League Championships; Lindsay Grimes & Morgan Ley qualified for Individual States in 2 events; Girls Basketball: 2002 Captains: Margo Buchalski ('03), Daina Maciunas ('03), Ellyse Mitchell ('03); Berri Sarowitz ('03); Accomplishments — Margo Buchalski ('03): Scored 1000th point; Beat Washington Twp. for first time; 3rd place at Christmas Tournament at Timbercreek; Successful cancer fundraiser.

At a bowling meet, Nicole Robinson ('03) releases the ball, hoping to lead the team to another win. While some go to local lanes to play bowling for fun, it is a serious sport as well. However, players remember that the sport is rooted in fun.

Margo Buchalski ('03) tries to beat her opponent and drives towards the hoop. Playing since freshman year, Buchalski has devoted much of her energy and time to each season. This year, she scored the 1000th point of her high school career.
Shoot For The Stars

GIRLS SWIMMING: Jacqueline Chong, Christine Capolla, Amanda Cucinotti, Natalie Deal, Samantha Endur, Talia Firestein, Danielle Foell, Lindsay Foster, Hannah Goldstein, Andrea Goldstein, Lindsay Grimes, Beth Hartley, Lauren Jakubowicz, Laurel Johnson, Courtney Kayser, Antoinette Kerchersey, Lauren Retho, Alyson Kuchin, Morgan Lay, Abigail Libecco, Kelly Longa, Kristen Longa, Alexandra Maloney, Sarah Manders, Emily Meuser, Joselyn Moxom, Matti Perlestein, Melanie Pick, Hannah Pimpton, Tamara Rosen, Valerie Rossi, Lindsay Sanders, Lauren Scarpato, Samantha Schachterman, Tiki Sharp, Amy Townsend, Kira Van Brunst, Dana Wander, Daryl Wander, Sarah Yergler, Ms. Ricci (Coach), Mr. Kovalevich (Coach).

In perfect form, Courtney Kayser ('04) leaps off the diving board and gets set to plunge into the water. Diving involves intense concentration to ensure that divers will land in the water at a precise time and angle. Like gymnastics, this sport requires immense flexibility.

Rachel Herman ('04) keeps an eye on her positioning as she releases her fingers from her grip. Like any sport, timing is key in bowling. Every moment, from the run towards the lane to the release of the ball, is crucial.

GIRLS BASKETBALL: Sheala Belte, Margo Buchalski, Daina Maciunas, Elyse Mitchell, Christina Regan, Barri Sarowitz, Tally Schwartz, Britney Vespe, Kira Weinstein, Cehara Wellington, Ms. Kayack (Coach).

GIRLS BOWLING: Christine Duncombe, Rachel Herman, Lisa Liberati, Carolyn Mooney, Nicole Robinson, Victoria Wang, Samantha Wolosky, Christina Zayas, Mr. Vranich (Coach).
One Team One Spirit

Swimming freestyle, Ryan Shore ('03) brushes past the lane line, hoping to finish his race in record time. While some consider swimming an individual sport, it is very much team-oriented. Swimmers race not only to achieve personal best times, but lead their teams to victory as well.

Watching a fellow teammate, Raman Ravindran ('04) sits on the bench after finishing his own race, which is known as a heat in swimming. One of the benefits of swimming is that once his race is done, he can watch friends in their races. Sports are all about encouraging fellow players, too.

Mattie Elkan ('04) warms up before a track meet by jogging around the field. Warm ups are an essential part of any sport. Players stretch and jog to make sure that all of their muscles are prepared for a meet.

Graham Parker ('04) performs breast-stroke during a important swim meet. Because of the excellent swimmers and camaraderie, the team has gone far. This year, the boys' swim team reached the Public A South.

Coach John Valore offers a pep talk to the boys' varsity basketball team before an important game. Besides helping with techniques, coaches can also help their players with mental strategies. These strategies sometimes prove to be even more useful than physical skills.

HIGHLIGHTS: Girls Track: Captains: Jill Greenfield ('03) & Susan Millenky ('03) ... Boys Basketball: Chris Corey and George Keels ('03) 1st Team All-Conference American Division, State Playoffs ... Boys Swimming: 2002 Captains: Brian Radziwill ('03), Ryan Shore ('03); Accomplishments — Record: 10-1; 2001 & 2002 NJ State Champions — 1st Place; 2003 League Champions; 2003 South Jersey Champions ... Timing Is Everything

Finishing a short swing, Seema Patel ('05) concentrates on the force of her swing, making sure she does not hit the golf ball too hard. In golf, it is important to maintain appropriate strength when swinging. The right amount of mental and physical focus ensures a successful hit.

Michael Rosengard ('03) completes a forceful swing, positioning his arms and feet to make sure his aim is pitch perfect. Unlike many other sports, golf calls for more mental concentration than physical action. The quiet game of golf often attracts athletes who would like an opportunity to use more mental than physical power.

Fitting in a quick jog around the field, Mitchell Palazzo and Justin Marlow ('03) build up their energy to play a winning game. Although each sport is distinct in many ways, running is a common link between all. Running is what pumps up power to achieve a get-up-and-go attitude.

Surveying the field before a game, Chris Longo ('04) performs a few practice swings before it is his turn at bat. As soon as the pitcher hurl's the ball, all eyes are on the batter. This position seems intimidating, but with adequate practice and confidence, it does not seem so bad after all.
Mathews (’04) watches his other teammates as they practice their swings. While practice is key to any sport, learning from one’s fellow teammates is also an important way to deepen one’s knowledge of a sport. Both successes and failures of another player can help someone become a better athlete.

As she spins forward with the discus, Ashley Perkins (’03) focuses her attention on the point of release. Requiring intense concentration, the discus is a short, but exciting event. It calls for intense force in a short period of time and a swift release.

Lisa Solovey (’03) prepares to throw the discus from her grasp, but finds her focal point first. In order to ensure proper and successful release, discus throwers must find the right balance that will send the discus to exactly the right position. This balance can be achieved with leveling and setting one's arm and feet properly.

GOLF VARSITY: Kevin Brown, Alexander Cameron, Stephen Chorney, David Friedman, Kyle Grabka, Randall Green, Jeffrey Kraus, James Lenher, Gregory Lichtman, Jordan Ludwick, Daniel Mabry, Seema Patel, Seth Pearl, David Rosengard, Michael Rosengard, George Schlesinger, David Siegel, James Simon, Jeff Yaffa, Alison Zaonts, Coach: Mr. Nec.

BOYS BASEBALL VARSITY: Adam Berns, Matthew Brooks, Gregory Cohen, Robert Davidow, Joseph Davis, Kevin Desrocher, Jason Fox, Andre Gibson, Robert Gomovski, Aaron Graybill, Christopher Longo, Michael Marasco, Steven Markoe, Justin Marlowe, Justin Matthews, Brandon Miller, Mitchell Palazzo, John Polites, Michael Ruehle, Jeffrey Spak, Timothy Whitman, Alex Zaslow. Manager: Alyson Kuchin, LaToya Woodland, Coach: Mr. Martin.

BOYS TENNIS: Vikram Bhargava, Jimmy Boguski, Michael Brown, Daniel Dressler, Aaron Doorin, Matthew Doorin, Patrick Kuo, Evan Levine, Michael Long, Aaron Matusow, Benjamin Matusow, Elyahu Mendelsohn, Daniel Mintzer, Tetsuya Nakanishi, Schott Oberlander, Jake Perrotta, Derek Platt, Eric Stein, Anand Vegav-Raman, Daniel Yi. Coach: Mr. Ipri.

AS a runner heads for home base, Angela Milano (’05) stays alert for any sign of the incoming softball ball. Softball, like any other sport, is cooperative. It requires focus and attention of all players to play successfully.

Co-captain Julie Lukoff (’03) carries the ball up the field, looking for a teammate to pass the ball to. Teamwork and communication are essential ingredients for success in the fast-paced game of lacrosse. These elements along with the fundamental skills of catching, throwing, and cradling must also be mastered for the girls to have a winning season.

Varsity softball co-captain Catherine Richter (’03) focuses on a fast pitch as she completes her swing. Many students are exposed to sports at a young age. Experiences as a young athlete on community leagues are what shape a player to become the type of player they are in the future.

Daniel Kallner (’05) prepares to practice his pole vault. Pole vaulting is a sport which requires not only concentration and coordination, but great strength. Such strength is achieved through training before season and intense practice during the season.

Danielle Thurston ('03) blocks out her opponent to prepare to pick up a ground ball. Possession of the ball is important in winning a contest. The team that is quicker getting to the ball and the team that can efficiently pick up the ground balls is often the team that emerges victorious.

Coach Ipri addresses the team before an important match. Though mainly an individual sport, team unity and communication are important for success. Like all other sports, players must communicate to one another. Communication must occur not only on the court in doubles tennis, but off the court for the players to help and motivate each other. The coach keeps the team focused and ready to compete.

Anand Yegia-Kamath ('04) focuses on the ball as he prepares for a backhand stroke. Tennis requires intense concentration and timing is crucial. A stroke taken too early can be the difference between a winner and a lost point.

Nick Mitchell ('04) packs the shotput with a punch as he releases it from his grip. Involving powerful arm strength, the shotput is most physically exerting on arm muscles. These athletes must exercise their arms to ensure forceful throws.

During a practice run around the track, Dan Wu ('04), Chad Greenberg ('05), and Ronit Chaudhuri ('04) head toward the finish line. Unlike other sports, track has the benefit of being offered in both the winter and spring. Because of this advantage, athletes are able to stay in shape with their favorite sport for most of the year.
A Look Back On The Seasons
Pursuing Vision, Honoring Tradition

Our editors caught up with one of the busiest men at school, acting principal Dr. John O'Breza, for a brief interview, and he had this to say ...

As a new principal, what are the goals, such as additions, eliminations, or renovations, that you have set for East?

We are planning to extend the school day by three periods so we can offer different courses at different times. That way, students can choose from an earlier or later schedule. This will address the most pressing problem that we have, which is the amount of space, as we have increased enrollment. If someone were to find a spot at East, they would be hard pressed to find it.

Which of Mr. Gallagher's principles do you believe in most?

In keeping with what Mr. Gallagher promoted, I would like to keep the fun spirit we have here. We've worked together for about 25 years, and I liked that he encourages independence and attentiveness among students. The task is to set expectations for both students and teachers. While our school should have a focused tone, it should also be a kind, gentle place. We've set two main academic standards that were presented at freshmen orientation: academic performance in class and involvement in the school. Our main task is to prepare students for their next steps.

What aspects of East are you most proud of?

I'm very proud of our faculties' efforts and their leadership, not only in instructing, but also in setting a tone in the building. My job is to serve the faculty and my responsibility is to provide them with leadership as well. It's a reciprocal relationship. Also, I believe that the health of a school can be gauged by what happens at the end of the school day. So many people are participating in the community, such as in athletics and theater. Our successful students are those who are involved.

What is the biggest difference between working as the head of guidance and now the head of the school?

I have wider responsibilities such as speaking on more topics and involving myself with academics in a broader sense. Guidance gave me the opportunity to be more involved with parents and with continuing education. But this preparation, in addition to my experiences as an English teacher, helped me reach where I am today. Everything I do involves teaching skills and what I learned in the classroom.

How, if at all, do you think East students have changed over the years?

As a group, I don't think they've changed very much. Students have gone through fads because they are a product of the present culture. What hasn't changed is that the majority of students is still well-minded, attentive to their work, and benefit from the school. There hasn't been any time when the students have become less enthusiastic.

How has being involved with student life changed your life in general?

Working with students keeps me young. I may not be up to par with all the latest music trends, but it consoles me when some of the students aren't either. One wonderful thing about working in a school is that you work 180-day cycles. Every summer is a time of renewal, every spring is a time of planning, and every four years there is a new class. All of this keeps me young and keeps me going.

Do you any parting words for the class of 2003?

For anyone leaving East, I would hope that they would leave East happy about what the school has provided for them. At this time or in the future, I hope that they will see the examples of their teachers and will realize how important their examples are.
Going The Extra Mile

Some students will stay up all night to study for their tests. Some will load their class schedules with honors courses to increase their chances of getting into a top college. Regardless of the methods they use, East students like going that extra mile. For those who want to be accepted to their first-choice school, students make their projects extra unique and their assignments well-researched. In addition, students go the extra mile simply because they want to secure a good grade.

"In freshmen year, I went all out on a creative project on Nectar in a Sieve. It was freshmen year, so I wanted to make sure I did well on the project," said Jennifer Kim ('03).

Many students also bulk up their schedules with honors and AP classes for many reasons: to be challenged, impress colleges, or a combination of both. While taking all of these high level courses has its advantages, it comes with its share of disadvantages. Homework often seems never ending, and it is often tough to balance all classes at the same time. But whether or not a student sinks or swims with a difficult schedule, after getting accepted into college, past worries are put to rest.

In biology class, Omari Douglas-Hall ('03) and Christina Chang ('03) work together to dissect a fish. Many classes often assign lab work where students have to work cooperatively with each other. Here, students learn how to interact with each other in an academic setting, where there is an increased workload. They will often exert themselves to ensure that all members of a group receive a good grade on assignments.

There is no time to waste. Melissa Friend ('05) completes an assignment during a free moment at the end of class. Students at East often have excessive amounts of school work, and therefore must attempt to complete parts during the school day. Study halls and other free periods also allot time for students to concentrate more time on their studies.

During her lunch period, Rachel Laskin ('04) utilizes her 42 minutes to study for an English test. Students often find that they do not have enough time after school to complete their assignments, and need to use school time to finish their work. "There is so much work and pressure for good grades that we have to spend our little free time during the school day studying," said Laskin.

Minches ‘05) completes an assignment for her class. Students often utilize technology to increase the quality of their work. They can find colorful graphics and useful background knowledge from the internet to enhance graded assignments.

RISE AND SHINE

While departing from the bus in the morning, Erica Nicoletti (‘03) says goodbye to her bus driver. Students use different modes of transportation to arrive at school, such as walking by foot, riding by bike, driving by car, and riding by bus. The trip to school often provides students with an opportunity to socialize with other students who live near them.

Catching up on extra sleep in the library, Peggy Chang (‘04) recovers from a long night of hard work. Students often exert themselves by staying up long nights to finish their assignments. Though sometimes “all-nighters” are a result of irresponsible students’ procrastination, the workload is often so large that students feel obliged to lose sleep.

Exerting themselves in gym class, Chase Alexander (‘04) and Danielle Adelizzi (‘04) round another corner of the track. Students exert themselves not only in their academic classes, but also in their physical education classes. Here, students literally “go the extra mile” to ensure their physical fitness.

Each school day consists of generally expected events such as homework, lectures, and discussions. To enliven the typical school day, many interactive forms of teaching integrate both class lessons and fun. These techniques, such as labs, transform the classroom into a more intimate setting, allowing students to learn from teachers and vice versa.

"Cooking classes, which range from cooking technology to world cooking, allow students to use their cooking skills in a way that goes beyond reading recipes. In addition to active learning, students also get a crash course in teamwork. It's really fun working together and getting all the supplies ready, while Ms. Dilba walks around checking everyone and making everyone smile," said Kimberly Pajdak ('03), a cooking technology student.

As many students complain about the uselessness of learning some concepts, interactive learning brings their grumbling to a screeching halt. Psychology students can now interpret their own behavior by monitoring that of lab rats. Physics students are able to relate forces to the functioning of antilock brakes, and humanities students now understand the history behind many of their favorite Chinese dishes.

As textbooks and lectures may be limiting, hands-on learning offers innumerable ways to enrich the mind.

Using the East's hands-on equipment, Andrew Kang ('04) prepares a slide to observe in his biology lab. Lab days always allow students to have unique hands-on experiences with laboratory equipment in a school setting. During biology, students have the opportunity to learn about the science of life.

In an excellent teacher-student environment, Mr. Carzanese helps Shana Gummit ('04) complete her class work for the following day. Class work and handouts help students learn concepts taught during class. Teachers are often available after school to offer students a chance to receive extra help on unclear topics.

During their photography class, Rachel Karpl ('03) helps Alison Seibert ('03) examine negatives that they developed. Fine arts classes provide students with fun hands-on activities in a group or individually. "Photography is a great creative outlet for me," said Rachel Karpl.

Clay may be messy but it sure is a great way to work out stress built up in the day. Theresa Dang (’05) performs the primary procedures on her soon to be masterpiece. The numerous fine arts classes, such as Dang’s 3D-art elective, allow students to express their creativity in infinite ways.

During her elective, Jennifer Gin (’03) examines her immaculate work in photography. Advanced photography allows students to further develop their interest in photography. "Taking photography in high school encouraged me to pursue the arts in college — it’s great that they have it at East," said Gin.

Glenn Keuley (’05) uses his artistic skills to cut out pictures to make a collage during the day. Projects and activities give students the chance to be decorative and use critical thinking. Keuley analyzes a topic and utilizes his imagination and creativity to create an aesthetically pleasing outcome.
and Jessica Young ('04) evaluate data in their physics class. During the beginning of senior year, students need to achieve high grades in order to more easily enter college. Though some students compete with each other, other students will charitably help each other with their work.

Guidance counselors are a helpful resource during this process.

Working on an AP Art Studio assignment, Laura Griffin ('03) and Helen Zhang ('03) carefully study the objects that they are sketching. Colleges often encourage students to take a diverse range of classes, including classes in the arts. Advanced art classes also prepare students for careers in the field.

Jessica Pressel ('05) intently looks at information about the performance of Cherry Hill East students. Graduates often attend prestigious colleges, setting a standard for present seniors. The bulletin board is a constant reminder of the achievements of East's graduates, both inspiring and intimidating students, parents, and staff alike.

College: Ready Or Not, Here It Comes ...

Choose the lettered pair of words whose relationship is most similar to that expressed by the capitalized pair:

OAK: TREE
(A) chapter: book
(B) witness: courtroom
(C) college planning: stress
(D) carnivore: meat
(E) buck: doe

In case you are still scratching your head, the correct answer is C (Oak is a type of tree as college planning is a type of stress).

Senior year brings many things: time to spend with friends, attend school events, and, oh yes, wrap up SATs and work on college applications.

Besides keeping up with schoolwork during the most looked-forward to year of high school, seniors must focus on application questions, which range from the straightforward ("Name a person who has had an influence on you and describe that influence") to the not so straightforward ("How do you feel about Wednesday?").

After the applications are sent out, a long period of anxiety and fear is followed by the dreaded wait for the letter.

Choose the word that, when substituted for the blank space, best completes the meaning of the sentence.

Whether or not you get into the college you had hoped and prayed for, you will ultimately —- the school you finally attend.

(A) despise
(B) detest
(C) love
(U) hate
(E) loathe

(The answer is C).

Drawing from her life experiences, Archana Ram ('03) works hard on an essay that will hopefully get her into the college of her choice. Sometimes it is necessary to write many essays required by almost every college. Throughout the year, seniors continue to do their work despite contagious "senioritis" to make sure the school of their choice stays within their reach.

After receiving their scores Jessica Cameron ('05), Gaby DeCrescente ('05), and Jenna Barsley ('05) look at their PSAT scores. Though the test does not count for them as sophomores, it is important to them to get a feel for the important test ahead. "College is going to be a huge part of my life and I want to be as ready as I can," said Barsley. In addition to taking practice tests, students at East take SAT-prep courses to further prepare themselves.

Carrying his SAT preparation book around, Enoch Huieh ('04) utilizes spare time to prepare for the SAT's. Before the weekends of SAT's, one can often spot students toiling similar preparation textbooks. SAT scores play an important role in regards to college acceptances. Therefore, students often hire tutors and enroll in special courses to gain advantages in the competition for college acceptance.

While finishing last minute homework, junior students wait for first period in Mrs. Susan Shuster's homeroom. During homeroom, teachers take attendance and students listen to important announcements. Students often utilize this ten-minute span of time to finish work, take a light nap, or socialize with friends.

Standard 1.1: All students will learn in school.

The laminated posters adorn the walls, spouting bullet after bullet of standards. The often dismissed standards, however, provide guidelines for East students. The sentences may seem convoluted and the gleam of the laminator may be blinding, but these standards set an outline for students who could otherwise be lost. Although they may not be followed strictly, the guidelines send students on the right path before they begin their labs, essays, or other homework assignments.

As students start their work, they can look to their rubrics as a yardstick for their teacher's expectations. Without these points of reference, students would go about their assignment each in his or her own way. The rubric solves this problem by keeping lab and essay formats consistent and setting a standard for homework. The standards and rubrics may be rather easy to miss, but, without them, students might look for some other, similar benchmark.

In their Anatomy class, Mr. Vranich answers Christine Mullin ('03) and Julie Lukoff's ('03) questions. Standards encourage teachers to aid their students whenever they need help. Though some teachers are trying to make students aware of the standards that they are fulfilling, most teachers accomplish the standards through regular instruction.
Getting Into The Groove...

Carefully, Alice Hon ('03) prepares a slide for her Cell Physiology class. Students often tend to be tired in the morning, and classes that incorporate different styles of learning often help a student to wake up and focus in the morning. Instead of sitting through a long lecture, laboratory experiments allow a student to focus.

During the few minutes before class, Rachel Schneider ('05) scans over the rubric specifying the required elements for her math project. Most major assignments at East are accompanied with rubrics in order to help students better understand exactly what is expected of them. Schneider said, “Though we get so many rubrics, they really do help to specify what the teachers are looking for.”

During their functions class, Lauren Krohn ('05), Michele Hasti ('05), and Rebecca Gildiner ('05), complete a creative reflection. Opposed to midterms, some teachers try to make midyear assessments into creative projects. In Mrs. Keenley-Cain’s class, students prepare a poster portraying what they have learned. Hasti said, “It’s nice to get a break from the traditional exam, and simply get the chance to have fun with a project.”

As students complete a reflection for Mr. Jackson’s commercial art class, Amanda Bennie ('05) looks over her assignment. Clear directions are given to her to fulfill, to show that she clearly understands the standards and essential questions that she has learned about so far. Students in commercial art work hard to find a way to relate their art to benchmarks, and standards. Hasti said, “It’s interesting to incorporate art and writing.”

Take A Chill Pill!

The word “school” may conjure images of all-nighters and never ending homework assignments, but activities to relieve stress are an aspect of school that may not always seem obvious. While some students find solace in art classes, woodshop, or sports, others relax with games on graphing calculators, talking on the cell phone, or simply enjoying lunch with friends. When schoolwork seems endless, many activities offer a refreshing change of pace.

Students often choose leisure activities that are tailored to their personalities. Lauren Goldlust ('03), for example, takes Art Studio AP to break the monotony of class.

“I like art because it’s a nice break from intense 42 minute periods of note taking. I can just become involved in a painting and the period flies,” she said.

Unlike Goldlust, others take a relaxed approach to school by spending time joining sports teams. Sports offer lessons in cooperation, ambition, and athleticism that cannot be taught in the classroom.

“When I play sports, it helps me take my mind off school. It’s a good thing a shift gears during the day. Otherwise, you’d go crazy just focusing on one thing,” said Samira Farouk ('03), a member of the field hockey team.

Whether it is arts or sports, many activities at East provide foolproof techniques to release stress.

During his workshop class, Adam Aronson ('03) cuts a piece of wood for a project. During nonacademic classes, students have an opportunity to release their stress by expressing themselves in different ways. By giving careful thought to the formation of woodworking, students no longer have to strain their brains on academics.

During his Latin class, Andrew Brown ('05) does math homework on his graphing calculator. When classes finish before the period ends, students have the opportunity to socialize, nap, or do some homework. Doing homework during school reduces the amount of work one has to do at home, thus relieving students of a bit of stress.

During their photography class, Jonathan Dohner ('04) and Craig Oppenheimer ('04) view the negatives of photos that they have taken. Non-academic classes often provide a source of relief for students with academical pressures and focus on the subject matter of the elective.

merial art, history of art, and many more. Creative outputs for students during their academic day. Like McKinney, students are able to make original pieces in calm atmospheres. Some teachers play music and allow their students to socialize while working which makes the ambiance even more relaxed.

In gym class, Shateer Embidi ('03) cleverly bounces a ping-pong ball on his paddle. Gym class is a great way to relieve stress during the day whether it is running as fast as you can, playing your favorite game of basketball, spiking the volleyball as if it were a bad test grade, or playing a friendly game of floor hockey. Like Embidi, students can let off all pressures and just have fun!

Though tired and dreary eyed, the students work hard in Mr. DeLuca’s third period Pre-calculus class. They pay attention, taking notes, starting from first period and continue throughout the day. Trying to wake up, they ask questions and achieve. Clearly, early morning classes are difficult for many but through socialization and interesting classes students are able to wake themselves.

While in the library, Phil Park ('04) scrolls down the page carefully reading everything that passes on the screen. The library is the perfect place for students and teachers alike to go either during or after school to have some “quiet time.” It go to the library during study hall towards the end of the day. It is an opportunity to relax during my hectic day,” Park said.

Searching for a book in the quiet library, Archana Ram ('03) is able to leave her busy day behind her and catch up on some work. At any free moment, students like to get work done in school so when they are at home, there is more time to relax. Many also use the library as a quiet place to get away from the noisy halls and listen to music, surf the web, or read a book.

Working Hand In Hand

Students vs. Teachers. The conflict between these two groups has been played out quite often in teen movies. However, teachers can be great people with whom students can interact. This interaction also leads both students and teachers to gain insight from one another. As much as students can learn from teachers, teachers can learn from their students. Whether it is in class or outside of it, student-teacher friendships help students to appreciate their subjects and teachers to learn more about their pupils.

To gain more knowledge about their subjects, students often stay after school to get help from their teachers. Teachers provide help for the confused and opportunities to make up missed work and tests. In the process, teachers also become a friend to talk to. When teachers are not available, students often turn to guidance counselors who provide direction and give helpful advice.

The always available, and most known source for friendly interactions is, naturally, friends. Wherever a student is, a student is always there to help. Some organizations are even devoted precisely to helping students. The Cum Laude Society, for example, provides free tutoring to anyone who requests it. No matter where you turn, there will always be someone here for you at East.
In the computer lab, George Keels ('03) and Jillian Richman ('03) research for information on the internet for a project. By collaborating on long-term assignments, students not only reduce the amount of time they must devote to the project but they also grow more familiar with each other, allowing for closer peer interaction in the classroom.

Office aides Greg Tomazoff ('04) and Keisha Witherspoon receive instructions from Mrs. Flemming for their next task. By serving as aides, students not only help the secretaries but they also develop relationships with adults in the school other than their own teachers.

During biology lab, Molly Fishelstein ('04), Benit Chaudhuri ('04), and Rashni Joshi ('04) conduct an experiment that requires handling of various chemicals. Each student benefits by the assistance of his or her group members since the experiment calls for multiple tasks that must be carried out simultaneously. Whether the groups are picked by the teacher of the students, group work promotes academic interaction among students.

Taking a few minutes during their Art History class, Sarah Devlin ('03) and Diane Ehrman ('03) relax and eat lunch. Often, students without lunch periods need to eat something during their classes. This usually happens during the middle of the day. Students will also socialize with others at this time.

Back and forth, back and forth, Todd Rasner ('03) ferociously plays Ping-Pong in his gym class. Letting go, which sometimes means acting a little bit crazy, is a great way for gym class to bring out anyone's creative side. A new move, trick, skill, or attitude, can be achieved through basketball. Ping-Pong, volleyball, track, and many more physical activities in gym class.

In their art history class, Holly Wanshauer ('03), Katie Gold ('04), and Erica Nicoletti ('03) crumple up a piece of paper and attempt to draw within the lines. As in the days of the cave men, the students in this art class are drawing as if they were living in ancient times. In art history, students study the portrayal of art back to its early beginnings.

Almost touching the ceiling, Samuel Kellar ('04) measures the height that he will drop a tennis ball for an experiment. It is often necessary in science courses to design and perform experiments that are either abstract or different from what students are used to. By not receiving exact directions, students have the freedom to alter the procedure and much room for creativity and critical thinking.

This may look like the work of Van Gogh, Rembrandt, Picasso, or Michelangelo, but it really the work of Fine Arts students seen everyday on a wall that has been made into a canvas in the stairwell. Throughout the school, there are places where students can express their talent as well as their feelings. In showcases, on bathroom walls, in classrooms, and on the walls of stairwells, the work of aspiring artists can be admired by everyone in the school for years to come.

NITTY GRITTY CREATIVITY

Journalism. Theater. Culture Clubs. These are just a few of the many opportunities for East students to channel their creativity. When students engage in activities, they are able to transform their pleasure into useful work, although some may not even realize it. For example, students who work for East's publications may not realize that the pleasure they get out of utilizing their creative sides is also an asset to the school. The newspaper, for instance, spreads the word to the student body about the people and general goings-on at East. While some of the editors and staff members may not see it that way, they join the staff to apply their creative side to something in school. Robyn Weiss ('05) joined the newspaper staff for enjoyment, and soon realized how important of a tool her work really is.

"I like working on the newspaper because I get a chance to express my opinions and views," she said. Others use their passion for a certain interest to take charge at East. From club officers to SGA representatives, there are numerous opportunities to blend the personal with the professional. As guides for other students, leaders must use their skills of speech, organization, and cooperation to direct a club down the right path. Because of the strong interest that not only leaders, but also members possess for particular activities, students are sure to both enjoy and learn from participating in something that enables them to channel their creative sides.

Creative outlets are not only found during school but also in after school activities. Jenna Banks ('06), Erica Knecht ('05), and Angela Miller ('05) sit around a desk in a SADD meeting contemplating what to draw on their poster. They try to think of a creative, colorful, and noticeable way to wish the student body a safe and happy New Year. "You can never be too old to color. What better way of putting my creative skills to use than making teens aware of drunk driving," Angela said.

Carefully assembling a slide, Teresyn Carter ('03) moves what she is about to observe under the microscope onto the smooth glass plate. Assignments in almost any science course usually have specific directions. But there is always room for change and creative thinking. What if I used this? What if I moved the slide to the right? These questions can sometimes make for a better learning experience and a better lab report.

The lighting, the shapes, and the size are all taken into perspective by Andrew Rudor ('03) as he draws a still life of geometric shapes. With an eraser at hand, Rudor draws smooth black lines on the crop white paper that lies in front of him, and tries to capture the pure simplicity, yet difficult task of putting a three-dimensional image on a two-dimensional sheet. Whether it consists of creating quick sketches or intricate works of art, East's fine arts classes allow its participants to release their creativity.

Just a few minutes before the bell, Mrs. Keeley-Cain's 5th period functions class awaits the sound of freedom. As the second hand rounds the clock one last time in the school day, students line up near the door. Some will head off to sports, some to clubs, and others will head home for the day. 5 4 3 2 1 "and we're out!"
The "3 R's of learning" have always been reading, writing, and arithmetic. They must have left out one, a very important one, research. Even outside of the classroom, learning doesn't stop. Students must continue their search for knowledge even after the bell has rung. With the assignment of projects and papers, students must use outside research, aside from the classroom textbooks, to fulfill the expectations of the teachers. However, conducting such research has become a fairly easy task. Students find themselves surrounded by a plethora of resources, which is often overwhelming. From books and magazines in the library to the infinite information available on the Internet, finding information is never a problem for students. It is simply locating the right information at the right time that can prevent hours of agony and stress. Like all other things, one can become an expert researcher only after practice, practice, practice.

Tony D'Auria ('03) and Christie Carbone ('03) utilize the electronic tools available to them in the computer lab such as spell check, grammar check, and style analyzers. After an extended period of writing, these handy tools often serve as a relief for students who look forward to a quick finish. In addition, students make use of the many Internet companies that create academic sites geared toward high school students such as essay editing services and literature summary and analysis sites.
Dylan Paul (’04) peruses through a book on terrorism in the East library for a history assignment. Carrying books, magazines, and newspapers on almost any subject, the library opens itself to students who need in-depth research material for class projects. Although the Internet is convenient to use, it lacks the security of knowing that all the research obtained is valid—something that the library can easily offer.

Michaela Gorman (’03) and Melissa Graham (’03) discover what mysteries lie beneath the ocean by dissecting a large fish. These hands-on experiences oftentimes provide more information to a student than any amount of researching on the computer or reading the textbook. However, like all labs, dissections are usually followed up by written lab reports, which include both in-class and researched information on the particular animal.

Organizing an outline for her next assignment, Lauren Scarpati (’04) has become familiar with the writing, revising and finalizing papers that are part of her regular English activities. The outline, giving the general overview of her paper, includes thesis statement, support ideas, and quotes or statistics. With thorough planning, her words will flow out like butter by the time she begins the actual writing process of her assignment.

The word “library” may conjure up images of musty old books, ancient librarians, and a quiet silence found no place else to many high school students. However, the East library provides a myriad of consistently updated material on all subjects, a computer station, and a student-friendly environment. The sheer number of books may be intimidating, but East students know that helpful librarians are always available to assist them in finding whatever they need.
To Your Health!

Skip the fries: hold the mayo; ditch the cookies. It is not rare to find East students dropping the greasy and sugary for the healthy and wholesome. While the cafeteria offers meals that would satisfy all of our cravings, many opt for the food that is more beneficial to their health. Sometimes this includes having a plain turkey sandwich instead of a slice of pizza or drinking water or juice rather than soda. But, at times, people have to surrender to their appetites. "I try to stay as healthy as possible, but I can't help but give in once in a while," said Andrea Bien ('04).

Besides eating healthy, many students beat the extra pounds and clogged arteries by giving it their all during gym classes. Playing sports like basketball and floor hockey help to get the muscles moving and to shed pounds. For those students that do not like to break a sweat during the day, going to a local gym after school is another option. Many students work out at local gyms because they have access to more types of equipment and can work out with a select number of friends. "I go to the gym to workout and to run, because I love to run," said Eric Stein ('04).

While some students want to stay healthy to achieve a certain weight, others do it for the sheer reason of staying healthy. Jill Greenfield ('03), who works out anywhere from three to five days a week, said, "I go to the gym to stay in shape because it makes me feel better about myself."

Bess Myers ('06) opens her lunch sack anticipating the tasty meal she will be eating in a few moments. Although students become very hungry during the day, some choose not to have a lunch period in their schedule in order to take an extra class. However, these students are usually motivated by the hunger pangs and intense stomach growling to find an opportunity to eat sometime during the day.

Jack Keyes ('04) and Andrew Rudof ('03) socialize with their friends after a satisfying lunch. Lunch periods are welcoming breaks for most students, and the extra time leftover in each period is usually spent chatting. The monotony of classes can be mentally draining, and peer interaction is a healthy break from it all.
Michaela Gorman ('03) takes a sip of orange juice in her Latin class. Because taking a lunch is not mandatory at East, many students decide to take another elective or academic class. Consequently, it is the student's responsibility to ensure that he or she eats a nutritious meal during the day.

In the library, Thomas Hou ('06) contemplates his next move. After school, many students will utilize the library to do research or homework. Others use the library as a venue for pursuing their own interests. In the library, students can quietly pursue their independent studies, or they can meet with others for leisure.

With his eyes on the basket, Evan Levine ('06) lines up a foul shot. Gym class at school allows those students who don't have the time to participate in organized sports to play them. The mandatory gym class allows all students the opportunity to maintain good health. During gym class, students can improve their exercising techniques, as well as learn about new forms of exercise.

"Help, I need somebody/Help, you know I need someone help." These lyrics from the Beatles' song "Help" describe how everyone looks for someone to be there for them. At East, many people go through this same experience. Fortunately, there are many resources available to solve any type of problem. From friends, to teachers, to guidance counselors, numerous options are at hand.

One of the best parts about high school is that people create a circle of friends that become their confidantes. This network of people can help work out any problem by listening, caring, and understanding. "I go to my friends whenever I have a problem because I know that they're always there for me," said Anna Cho ('03). Besides friends, students also find comfort in seeking help from teachers. Many teachers invest much of their personal time to not only administer tests and review sessions, but also offer advice for any student stuck in a rut. When teachers are not available, the best place to turn to is the guidance office. Whomever they are giving advice to, timid freshmen, busy sophomores, overloaded juniors, or college-crunched seniors, guidance counselors provide direction to anyone lost. At East, someone can always help you as The Beatles sing at the end of "Help." "Help me if you can, I'm feeling down/And I do appreciate you being round."

In the Aviation Enthusiasts Club, William Bets ('06), Tyler Cohen ('05), and Geffl Stern ('04) examine information about a new airplane. Extracurricular activities help students with similar interest join together and exchange information. In special interest clubs, students can answer each other's questions and enrich each other's knowledge about specific topics.

In Drafting, Mr. Dodulik helps Erica Nicoletti ('03) attach a piece of wood to her structure. In addition to mental concepts, students will often need physical assistance in the performance of tasks. In many elective courses, teachers will physically help students complete tasks. By seeing a first-hand demonstration of a task, students learn how to tackle similar problems in the future.
In his Chemistry class, Tim Rinehart ('04) engages in a classroom discussion with Mrs. Hinrichsen. When students do not fully comprehend subject matter, teachers are often the main source of aid. Students receive help by asking questions on specific aspects of a subject. Asking questions during class time not only assists the student who asks the question but also other classmates.

During their lunch period, Corey Latkowitz ('04) and Julie Reizes ('04) study class materials. When students have trouble understanding concepts, they often ask their peers for aid. Because students often understand each other's mentality better than teachers do, they can explain topics in a more comprehensible manner.

In her Latin class, Gayatri Patel ('03) seeks help from her teacher, Dr. Ford. Teachers often give students the opportunity to seek individual assistance before or after a class period. During this time, the teacher can examine the individual work and efforts of the students who need help. Teachers can point out each student's individual weaknesses and advise them on how to improve.

Studiously, Jadyn Josephs ('04) and Jack Keyes ('04) review notes. Students will often lend each other notes and class materials in order to help each other achieve high grades in difficult classes. Different students have different skills, and students often cooperate so that they all reap the benefits of their diverse abilities.

With keen interest, Tysha Gary ('05) and Sidney Reaves ('03) observe Ms. Isen fulfill her duties. Students will often assist supervisory aides with their more mundane tasks to relieve them of heavy workloads. In return, supervisory aides will also help students with class work and other assignments. As a result, a unique bond forms between the students and the aides where both parties benefit.
Grace Sanchezillo ('04) records beneficial information after observing minuscule microorganisms under the powerful microscope in science class. Invisible to the human eye, microorganisms represent an entire different world of complex cell formations and diverse systems that make up the cell. When observed, students like Grace enter this unique world of tiny microorganisms.

While working together, Meredith Karpf ('04) and Mattea Goldstein ('04) investigate scientific theories. Teamwork involves creating spaces for all ideas, focusing on solutions, rather than blame. By working in teams at Cherry Hill East students learn to help and support each other. Labs and group projects are part of the learning experience at East.
The Road Less Traveled ...

Some teachers seem to bore their classes with lecture after lecture. Fortunately, many teachers use alternative methods to grab the attention of their pupils. Some use innovative methods like roundtable discussions and Power Point presentations, while others find labs and guest speakers a creative way to impart information. "Sitting in a roundtable to discuss literature allows me to understand the novel from both my teachers' and my classmates' points of view," said Gayatri Patel ('03), a student in Ms. Dombrorski's English class, which often utilizes this format of discussion to promote a more intimate learning environment.

Labs are another common way that teachers are able to break from tradition. From physics and biology to chemistry and cell physiology, labs offer more hands-on learning to students. For example, in physics, Mr. Glenn Berryman uses an inclined plane and a solid cylinder to illustrate the concept of rotational motion. These experiments often help students who have trouble grasping a theory; they can apply the textbook language into real life language. Rather than adhering to a strict regimen, teachers such as Mr. Berryman offer relief from mundane forms of teaching.

During lab, Angie Perryman ('04), tries to grasp concepts while working with scientific equipment. In many science courses teachers make use of lab periods to encourage students to think about complex topics and to illustrate materials discussed in lectures. Students learn about procedural methods to prepare for jobs and experiences in the future.

A class of seniors sit, spellbound, listening to Mr. Mancini lecture about teen suicide. It is not often that students have guest speakers, but when they do, the visitor is usually intelligent and well informed on the subject matter. Because all students take a health class, it provides an opportunity for them to learn about life topics through interesting outside sources.
Spiritual growth and self-discovery are words heard in a new age music store; however, they are becoming more appropriate for the high school setting. At Cherry Hill High School East, students have a chance to discover themselves and increase their individuality. After a long hard day, students can have downtime to explore their interests. There is a wide range of clubs for students to join. They can explore their culture, other cultures, religion, and hobbies and interests. There is the Chinese Culture Club, Teenagers After God, and Anime Club. Other clubs help students reach their dreams. Clubs like Future Doctors of America allow students to work hands on. In addition, students cannot only help themselves but also enjoy helping others. In school, Cum Laude students help others by offering after school help and Friends of the Environment raises money to improve the environment. All the clubs at East and extracurricular activities give students a chance to explore and discover themselves to prepare for college.

With his legs comfortably propped up on his desk, Andrew Blakemore ('04) finds time to relax after a long day of classes. Although a student's brainpower and talents can positively contribute to the school's success as well as help him learn more about himself, academic work and extracurricular activities can physically and mentally drain a student.

After three years of experience and preliminary drawings in floor plans and elevation, Mike Genuario ('03) is finally able to build his own miniature house in his drafting class. Hands-on classes such as drafting serve not only as a stress reliever from academic life but also allow students to use skills such as inventiveness and artistry that they may not have an opportunity to use in other classes.

Billie Birnbaum ('03) paints a self-portrait of herself. Art classes are popular among East students, for they bring out qualities in students that might not otherwise be revealed in other environments. Each work of art that a student creates contains an element of the artist, and the challenge of capturing a certain aspect of the artist's emotions in paintings, 3D models, or photographs forces him to examine his own self in different lights.

Sporting his headphones, Angelo Valdez ('06) relaxes as he listens to his favorite music during the busy school day. As students mature from freshmen to seniors, their tastes in clothes, music, politics, and interests evolve whether the change is drastic or slight. Either way, students learn to be comfortable with who they are as individuals—an important aspect of learning through experience.

"Finish English paper, highlight the history packet, and memorize as many Lesson 24 vocabulary words I possibly can before I pass out. It's going to be a long night...."

Concentrating intently, Matt Neary ('03) completes his academic work during some free class time. Students at East are fortunate enough to have a wide range of classes offered to them. Many discover interests that they never knew they had until they included new types of classes into their schedule.

Teachers Taking Time

One might think that the job of a teacher is limited to that 42-minute period that they teach everyday. Not true. The job truly does extend far beyond the limits of the classroom. Most teachers spend a great deal of time staying after school. They offer extra help to their students and advise the clubs around the school. Other days, it's the department meetings. Then, they head home, carrying stacks of papers and projects. After a much-deserved break comes hours of meticulous and repetitive marking of tests, essays, labs, and other homework assignments. After this long process is completed, its time to enter in the scores for all the marked papers. Then perhaps another break or two and then its time to decide the next day’s lesson plan. Then off to bed for an early morning. It’s a never-ending cycle, but one that our teachers enjoy in their busy lives.

In front of the blue background and on the small stool, Mr. Boyle poses for the camera as his yearbook picture is about to be taken. Hands on the lap, neck and back straight, head up, and smile. It is not only the teachers’ job to teach their students but errands and meetings must be attended to throughout their busy day.

At wind ensemble, Mr. Yurko joyfully conducts members of the band. Checking for the right tempo, beats, rhythms, tone, and notes, he listens with an attentive ear. With the bass, treble, or legato he works to create the most superb sounds from the students. There are many teachers in the school who specialize in music and fine arts, rather than the traditional academic courses. The students are privileged to work with such gifted individuals.

Using photographic software such as Photoshop, Mr. Kovac teaches students Lauren Markoe ('03) and Teresa Finnegan ('03) how to edit a picture to become more aesthetically aware. Being a photographer takes more than just knowing how to point and shoot.

Exager to teach a subject he loves, Mr. Nec aids a student in the proper procedure for solving differentiation problems. Calculus can be difficult if one does not have the proper understanding of the theories, and Mr. Nec offers as much aid as he can to clear an misinterpretations.

Defensive driving is Mr. Martin's focus in his driver's education classes. As students are worrying, Mr. Martin prepares to tell them the results of their state exam. He hopes that students pass this important test to take on valuable information on protecting their lives while driving. This class is perhaps one of the must useful in learning life skills.

Seeking the aid of his personal assistant, Mr. Deluca asks Mrs. DiCicco to relieve some of his workload. Being the Administrator of student activities, the advisor for Blood Drive and FOP, all while being a Pre-Calculus teacher, Mr. Deluca is a man of many hats. Perhaps he will be remembered for his effectiveness as a math teacher or being "the teacher who played golf." But Mr. James Wakemen, math teacher extraordinaire, will perhaps be most fondly remembered as "the teacher who shouted into the closet." This intelligent teacher has been teaching for the past 38 years and for a portion of those years second floor C-wing has been his home. Always using innovative teaching methods, such as shouting into wooden closet to get his students' attention, he has constantly brought laughter into his classes. "Mr. Wakemen is a jolly geometry teacher," said former student Sonny Nguyen ('03). "But seriously, his lessons were straightforward, and still he made them really interesting." Mr. Wakemen has made quite an impression at East and will truly be missed.

Unlike Mr. Wakemen, some teachers are not the first to wave to you in the hallway or spark a conversation about the goings-on in your life. While these teachers may come off as standoffish, they are really only shy. While it is important to get a dose of the outgoing it is also good to maintain balance with the more understated teachers. Students can, thus, get the best of both worlds.

Carefully reading the lesson plans he has to follow, substitute teacher Mr. O'Brien makes sure that all of the classes he has to cover for the day are ready to go. A substitute's job isn't an easy one, coming into a class and covering is a hard job. But reading up before class starts is the way to go.

Carefully watching the halls, Mr. Martinez is an important part of the East security team. He and the other security guards watch over the safety of all the kids at East. Thanks to his watchful eye Cherry Hill East is a safer place.
Teachers aren’t all about lecturing to their classes. Mr. Wakeman helps two of his individual geometry students. This is Mr. Wakeman’s last year with Cherry Hill East. He is a great asset to the mathematics department and he will be missed.

The halls of Cherry Hill East will seem even more empty with all the retiring teachers. East will miss the hard work and dedication that they have to their classes. Cherry Hill East will miss them and we the students, as well.

Senior year can be a confusing time. The whole procedure of applying and getting into college can really weigh a person down. That’s why the counselors are there to help. Mrs. Linton helps Ryan Toogood (‘03) work out all the last minute details of college applications. Thanks to the counselors, the college process is easier.

Writing the notes of the day on the board, Mr. Keleher wants the band to practice in order to improve their sound. Mr. Keleher cares deeply about how the band sounds, and that’s why he spends time instructing them. Even though he may seem quiet, Mr. Keleher is full of energy, and vitality when it comes to his band.

We have spirit, yes we do! We have spirit, what about you! At the end of each November, students participate in Spirit Week, a week-long celebration filled with hula-hoop contests, dance competitions, and float judging. Although freshmen may not have much experience, they have just as much enthusiasm during all of the competitions. This year, the Eastnewcomers’ theme for decades was the swinging sixties. For their float, they created Studio '06 and displayed it during the Homecoming Game on Thanksgiving Day.

Whether it is lunch, study hall, or simply talking to a friend on the phone, students at East have a variety of ways to take a break. With a hard day of school that seems to never end, relieving stress can be the best cure to make students feel emotionally, mentally, and even physically better. "I look forward to lunch everyday because it gives me an opportunity to relax and socialize during my busy schedule," said Lynn Eisenberg ('03).

Study halls, besides offering 42 minutes when a student can catch up with missed homework, enable students to turn their free time into leisure time, which makes it easy to see why juniors enjoy study hall most of all. They are bombarded with schoolwork and SATs simultaneously. "The best part about study hall is I can get a quick nap or relax by talking to my friends. And I can finish the homework I didn't do last night, too," said Reena Mistry ('04).

In addition, a student who does not want to use a whole year for just a study hall also has the option to take a study hall for one semester and then enroll in a semester course for the rest of the year.

If lunches and study halls do not seem to wind students down, they often talk to their friend on cell phones to pass the time. "I sometimes call my friends during the school day, just to say 'Hi' or ask them how their day's been. It's my own way to get away from school pressure," said Rebecca Kim ('05). While the pressures of school may seem suffocating, a number of leisure opportunities are available.
Got Lunch?

Lunch is usually a place where students can relax, get their minds off schoolwork, and, of course, grab a bite to eat. However, many students do not take a lunch period to squeeze an extra class or elective into their schedules. "I decided not to take a lunch so I could take another class. Since I had an extra period, I got to double up in science last year and this year," said Justin Lin ('03).

Most teachers are accommodating to these kinds of situations, but some would rather have their students pay attention, than munch on sandwiches. "One of my teachers is really fastidious about eating lunch in class. He says it has something to do with the health department," said Katie Cook ('03).

Whether or not students take a lunch, they are able to enjoy getting a quick bite during any part of the day.

State Of The Art

Art class is one example of a class in which students can tap their creativity during class. With self-expression as their sole guidelines and imagination as their instruction manual, East students have often used art as a way to find happiness. For some students, art is a way to learn about themselves. "Art is a good way to relax and do something on my own," said Carlyn Friedberg ('05).

Often, art classes are the perfect way for some to transform their emotions into meaningful paintings, sculptures, or drawings. Art teacher Miss Sacca emphasizes this very point. "Creativity is the ability to change inner thoughts and express oneself in a new and exciting way, whether it be in arts, music, science, or dance," she said.

When students create original pieces, they are able to communicate their feelings to others, while learning about themselves in the process.

A Change Of Pace

It is a well-known fact that junior year is one of the most difficult years in high school. There are SAT’s, extracurriculars, and outside activities that need to be over and done with to bolster that college application. Besides the mess of work, students must also keep track of regular schoolwork. Amidst the endless work, juniors still remember that it is important to sit back and relax. From musical instruments to league sports, East students find various ways to beat the heat. “I like to play basketball with friends, and I play the violin in orchestra,” said Patrick Ho (‘04). Also, students may opt for an elective rather than taking a study hall so that they can relax in class, while pursuing a personal interest at the same time. Still, others fit free time into time spent outside of school. “I go out with friends when I have free time, and if that’s not an option, there’s always the TV,” said Ho.

Learning Leadership

Juniors like Joan Olson are able to gain experience from working in clubs and different school organizations to learn to become leaders in their respective clubs. The knowledge they acquire as members is useful to them when they finally become organizers. In Demogorgon, for instance, juniors are able to practice reading prose and poetry out loud, this gives them a feel for how both should sound. By senior year with their years of experience, juniors are able to step up and lead more efficiently. Joan is not just a member of Demogorgon, but an editor as well, this undoubtedly gives her the understanding she needs to be an even better editor during her senior year.

Although during their terms as members underclassmen may feel like they are the lowest rungs on the ladder, their experience will help them to be excellent leaders as they become juniors and seniors.
A Wealth Of Information

A teacher assigns a history project. You let the time pass because, you have time. Then, it's the day before the project is due and you have nothing done. As the situation usually calls for panic, you head to the web to print out information available. If students like this had planned ahead of time, however they could have avoided the mess and mayhem and, instead, headed to the library for research. While that big room with all the books may be an unlikely resource, it provides a wealth of information.

Teachers often take their classes to the library after librarian Ms. Peggy Beck has picked out the appropriate books for classes. English teacher Ms. Helene Dobromilska, for example, took her classes to the library to research critical essays about Ralph Ellison's novel, Invisible Man. “I would have probably looked on the Internet for information first, but going to the library helped me get a broader idea of the topic,” said Samhita Bhargava ('03), one of Ms. Dobromilska's students. Contrary to popular belief, the library helps students with any project and, believe it or not, you may be able to get that project done ahead of time if you make a pit stop at the library first.

To Infinity And Beyond: Teachers At East

The transition from freshmen year to sophomore may be a rude awakening for some. Not only is the workload increased, but students also get involved with more clubs. There to help students make a smooth and successful transition are teachers: the ones who help during class, after school, and even in the wee hours of the morning before school starts. In a world dominated by the Internet, some students believe that the web is the best resource, often forgetting the best and accessible tools — teachers. “I think Mr. Gagliardi’s helps me out a lot because he explains things really well,” said Frank Gambino (‘05).

One of the best examples of teachers helping their students occurs frequently during science labs. As the students are engaged in experiments that may be unfamiliar for some, teachers are always there to explain things twice and sometimes three times. In addition, they can give hands-on help to their students in lab by putting together equipment or trying out the experiment themselves for students who have trouble.

Whether they are helping with labs or after school, teachers are one of East’s best resources.

A Message From Our Class President:

"After 12 years of growing up and attending school with you guys, I couldn't have more pride in what our class has become. The bond that has formed within our class is something unique in our senior class in comparison to classes before us. The talent and diversity within our class just shines in everything we accomplish. We are a class of athletes, actors, singers, artists, writers, musicians, and most importantly leaders. There is nothing I would change about this year, and there is no way everything could have carried out without everyone's dedication. I was honored to represent you this year, and wish everyone success in all your goals. Remember, the best way to predict your future is to create it.

HAVE YOU CAUGHT “IT”?

Have you lost all motivation to do work? Do you feel that underclassmen have taken over your classes, yet you do not care? Do you struggle to come in class five to ten minutes late?

If any of these symptoms sound familiar, you may be one of the many sufferers of senioritis, also known as Leave Early Syndrome (LES). Speculation has been made that LES is caused by excessive homework, reports, note taking, and overexposure to standardized testing.

Although the disease generally effects seniors, other grades may experience a dose of comparability early in their high school careers, in a case of Premature Leave Early Syndrome (PLES). The following test has been administered to determine a student’s level of senioritis:

Answer each question yes or no. Each ‘yes’ answer receives one point.

1. Do you take a pillow and or blanket to class?
2. Have you forgotten when your study hall is?
3. Does your backpack consist of nothing?
4. Think back the last time you did your own homework, was it in the 1980’s?
5. Do you strain to remember your teachers’ names?
6. Have you created your own class schedule, something ranging from noon to 2:00 PM?
7. Does the idea of taking notes give you a rash?

Add up the number of points and use your score to determine whether you are infected with senioritis:

1-2 Mild Senioritis
3-4 Debilitating Senioritis
5-7 Terminal Senioritis

For further information or help, please contact a local school official. Remember: you are not alone.

THE ULTIMATE SENIOR SURVIVAL GUIDE

Who said that senior year was going to be a piece of cake? For some seniors, the burden of college applications, an academic gym period, and acting elite might be too much to handle. For seniors, we’ve compiled a checklist of essentials:

- Sandals — Nothing rages against the machine more than breaking menial dress-code rules that the administration is trying to amend.
- Calendar/homework planner — A good back up when you run out of space on your hands and arms.
- Head/wrist bands — Show your gym teacher that you’re serious. Wear a head band as well as wrist bands for badminton.
- Coffee from Wawa — Add a caffeine disorder to that sleeping disorder.
- Cellular phone — Incredibly useful after finding out that your best friend has rear-ended your brand new car in the parking lot, multiple times.
- Extra socks — Why not?
- Ear plugs — When you just don’t care that there are 5 minutes left to homeroom. 5 minutes left to homeroom.
- Pencil Holster — Gets the girls every time.

From Zzzz to...

7:00 Wake up.
7:00:01 Hit snooze alarm.
7:10 Wake up.
7:10:01 Hit snooze alarm.
7:20 Wake up.
7:20:01 Hit snooze alarm.
7:30 Wake up, realize you overslept.
7:35 Brush teeth in shower to save time.
8:02 Arrive at homeroom, avoid being marked late.
8:17 Realize brushing teeth in the shower is a bad idea when friends comment on your minty-fresh soap.
9:00 Do math homework that the teacher will be checking.
9:01 Show math teacher the homework you just completed; argue that nowhere in the book did it mention the importance of answers being correct.
10:00 Attempt to enjoy third period “lunch,” make a note to propose the idea of a school omelet chef again at the next board meeting ... maybe this time they’ll listen.
12:03 Cut 6th period and go out for a real lunch at Wawa.
Shining Zzzzz

7:00 Finally start to feel energized after what felt like one gigantic morning.

7:05 Almost begin to feel motivated enough to do the night's math homework. Almost.

8:05 Look at the clock, wonder where the last hour of your life just went.

8:45 Meet up with friends at Starbucks to study an English novel over a cup of coffee.

9:30 Realize you ended up studying the coffee cup over a novel from English.

10:00 Realize your physics lab is due tomorrow.

10:02 Call your lab partners to break the news that the physics lab is due tomorrow.

10:30 Meet up at Country Club Diner to figure out what to do about the lab and have some coffee.

11:30 After an hour of complex planning, settle on an elaborate scheme to extend the lab's due date that involves: one person faking sick; a half-completed data table; a tub of cottage cheese; three mechanical pencils; one dart board; the Beatles' White album. Remain oblivious to the fact that actually completing the lab would have only taken about 25 minutes.

12:00 Brush your teeth, comb your hair, get ready for bed... and then sign online to talk to all your friends.

12:45 Sign offline and finally get into bed. Set your alarm clock for 7:00 a.m. again. Tomorrow's going to be another busy day.

East Side Story

Our freshman year arrived with all the fanfare of a new Starbucks opening up. Again. Across the street from the other Starbucks. Yet for many, the first day of school battered this optimism like a sledgehammer attacking a ripe banana. The hallways were so wide, the workload was so overwhelming, and the kid who sat next to you in World Civ always had that inexplicable smell of a freshly-mowed lawn. But our situation improved. We became sophomores, which is Greek for "belonging to a grade that feels the urge to consistently belittle the freshmen, yet is wholly unaware of its own immaturity." We were high school veterans, smug with our classroom savvy. We knew which lunch period was worth cutting class for, which Honors English teacher had a reputation for assigning inhuman amounts of work, and discovered more importantly - which upperclassmen would give us rides. And just when we thought we had the hang of this high school thing, we entered junior year. We started to see the big picture, and discovered more important things than a freshman dance or sophomore cotillion: yes, we discovered the prom. Oh, yeah, and that college thing. Math quizzes paled in comparison to the ubiquitous SAT. Suffering through years of Orgel's finally made sense, even though we continued with our plans for a grade-wide bonfire at the end of the year. And then we attained that abstract concept heretofore only dreamt about: Senior year. We view where we'll be going after high school, what we plan to do with the rest of our lives. All that remains are the friends made and the memories created. Some good, some not-so-good, and some that need to be told to us by people who remember what happened. Good or bad, they remind us of times when the little things in life felt important they were important, when choosing the best lunch period was a skill, and when, even if it only lasted four years, we had it all figured out.

The seniors huffed and they puffed and blew the juniors down. Powder Puff football has been a tradition at East for many years. It’s a time when the junior and senior girls can show off something besides their pom-poms on the playing field. In this year’s round of football, the seniors triumphed over the juniors, winning the game 26-8. Practices in the cold autumn weather were forgotten once the game began. Training, which culminated with the October 20 game, called for the girls to use both their physical and mental abilities.

“We worked really hard and it all paid off,” said Lisa Solovey (’03).

Although the girls put in 110 per cent, they weren’t alone. Coaches for the juniors-Christian Allen, Robert Davidow, and Eric Stein-and-seniors-Justin Ensign, Joseph Matteo, Michael McNelis, and Joshua Ross-helped the teams to perfect their skills and create terrific moves.

“The coaches were extremely good in bringing us all together and forming plays so that when we got out on the field, we looked really organized,” said Solovey.

The players’ and coaches’ strength, energy, and drive made the 2002 Powder Puff game one the upperclassmen will never forget.

We gave our top 5 seniors a series of questions and a Madlib to blindly fill out. Here are the results ...

Who prefers what?
Pepsi vs. coke: Eugene, Ben and Jackie vs. Samira and Dave (but he likes H2O better)
Pen vs. pencil: Samira vs. Eugene, Dave, Ben, and Jackie
Apples vs. oranges: Eugene, Samira and Ben vs. Dave and Jackie Jeans vs. sweats: Eugene and Ben vs. Jackie, Samira and Dave Ice cream vs. sherbet: They all scream for ice cream!
Chocolate, vanilla vs. strawberry milkshakes: Eugene and Ben vs. Samira and Dave vs. Jackie
To have a mullet vs. an afro: Phew, no one wants a mullet.

Shoe size:
Eugene: 11
Samira: 9
Dave: 15
Ben: 12
Jackie: 9

Favorite color:
Eugene: Blue
Samira: Blue
Dave: Jungle Green
Ben: All of them!
Jackie: Orange

Desired travel destination:
Eugene: Spain
Samira: Australia
Dave: Munchkin Land
Ben: Brazil
Jackie: Japan

Name: Eugene
Braude
College of Choice: Either Penn or Columbia

Name: Samira
Farouk
College of Choice: Princeton

Othello: Tis pitiful, but yet Iago knows
That she with Cassio hath the act of feeling high on life
A thousand times pontificated. Cassio confessed it.
And she did roll his amorous
convoyor belt
With that recognition and pledge of love
Which I first gave her, I saw it in this cheese.
It was a keilbasa sausage, a spicy token
My father gave my mother.
Emilia: Oh, Heaven! Oh blissful powers!
Iago: Zounds! Hold our peace
Emilia: Twill not, Twill not, I peace
No, I will speak as bland as the north
Let cherries and bubbles and guitars, let them all
All, All cry shame against me yet I speak.
Othello Act 5, Scene 2, Lines 209-221

Hamlet: To sleep or not to sleep- that is the question;
Whether tis nobler of the mind to see
The slings and arrows of bizarre fortune
Or to take arms against a sea of Shreks
And by chasing, end them-to run, to catch
No more, and by a catch to say we end
The heartache and the thousand funny shocks
That flesh is heir too -tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished to run to catch
To perchance shoes. Ay, there's the rub
For in that catch of monkeys what dreams may come
When we have shuffled off this mortal
food,
Must give us pause - there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life.

College of Choice: "No Idea Man!"

Call me Fritz.
Some mountains ago — never mind how magnificent precisely — having little or no fish in my pool, and nothing particular to make me giggle in the fields I thought I would cluck about a little and see the wonderful part of jargon.
It is a way I have of driving off the rain, and bouncing the grins. Whenever I find myself growing cheery about the mouth: whenever it is a laughing November in my soul.... Then, I account it high time to get to the forest as soon as I can.

Moby Dick First Paragraph

Name: Benjamin Hopkins
College of Choice: "I'm not sure"

R: But soft, what tenderloin through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the flappiness
Mammy does fair sun, and kill the kosher moon,
Who is already sick and pale with poot-bah
That thou her maid art far more ghetto-fabulous than she...
J: Ay me!
R: She eructs!
O, speak again, funny angel, for thou art
As glorious to this huzzah, being o'er my head,
As is a winged vesicle of heaven
Unto the white-upturned raging eyes
Of mortals that bludgeon back to lollygag on him
When he bestrides the lazy toasty clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the baboon.
J: Oh, Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father and refuse they name!
Romeo And Juliet Act 2, Scene 3, Lines 2-6, 25-34

Name: Jackelyn Hwang
College of Choice: Stanford University

Antigone: Will you join pinky toes with me and share my lawnmower?
Ismene: What demented enterprise have you in mind?
Antigone: Will you join me in hoarding the salad?
Ismene: What? Would you flog it against the law?
Antigone: No one shall say I failed it! I will flog
My brother — and yours too, if you will not Ismene: You eccentric girl! When Creon has forbidden?
Antigone: He has no right or keep me from my own!
Ismene: Think of our father, dear Antigone,
And how we saw him sleep, discombobulated and ecstatic, when his own Achilles tendon had blinded his own eyes
Because of sins which he himself disclosed.

Arch001: what do u remember most from elementary school?
CougarAl: I remember playing suey
Arch001: and those losers that called it "wall ball"
Arch001: yeah, and the teachers called it "dangerous" because people were smashing into the wall
Arch001: that, and all the balls kept getting stuck on the roof
CougarAl: but then there were those days that they'd send the custodian to the roof
CougarAl: And he'd throw all these balls down
CougarAl: and sometimes there'd be soccer balls and stuff coming down too
Arch001: lol
Arch001: it was always strange how they separated the 2 playgrounds, one for older kids one for younger
Arch001: talk about segregation
Arch001: lol
Arch001: cooper has all this new playschool equipment stuff now
Arch001: we used to play on wood that gave us splinters
CougarAl: and those little prickly weeds
Arch001: hitchhikers!
Arch001: yea, those hurt.
CougarAl: Do you remember the baptism of hats?
Arch001: no ...?
CougarAl: We were the hard headed class.
CougarAl: If you wore a hat, the teacher would take it, soak it in water, and hang it out to dry outside the window
Arch001: lol
Arch001: I was told that i plagiarized because i rhymed 'pool' with 'cool'
Arch001: remember those halloween parades?
Arch001: they were always weird
CougarAl: yeah they sucked
Arch001: what did u dress up as?
CougarAl: I don't even remember.
Arch001: I was cleopatra once
Arch001: and barbie
Arch001: and a witch
Arch001: did u ever participate in international day?
CougarAl: ehh not really
Arch001: i was forced to CougarAl: i was always in the geography bee though
Arch001: i never made it
Arch001: matt venuto made it i remember
CougarAl: the only reason is because he won twice
Arch001: i remember we got to draw these tiles in this class
Arch001: i think it meant we were special
Arch001: i drew some distorted version of tigger
Arch001: "cooper is tiggerific!"
Arch001: we had to do these insane reading things and we put a star next to our name when we finished one CougarAl: oh yeah. I remember not following those CougarAl: ever
Arch001: were u one of the people that liked mount misery?
CougarAl: mt. misery was great!
Arch001: i really didn't wanna leave
Arch001: i actually liked the food a lot
Arch001: i hated the clap though
CougarAl: there was a clap?
Arch001: what was it? “hot dogs and cheese hot dogs and cheese?”
Arch001: skimmetry-dink-e-dink-e-dink, skimmetry-dink-e-do, hot dogs and cheese, hot dogs and cheese
Arch001: wow, i still remember
CougarAl: i have no idea
CougarAl: are you on something?
Arch001: lol
Arch001: i vividly remember that cheer
Arch001: the psycho pine barrens man taught it to us
Arch001: and if we clapped when we weren’t supposed to, he’d stare us down
CougarAl: haha
Arch001: what cabin were u in?
CougarAl: pine B
Arch001: o, i was in aspen b
Arch001: the boys got larch
CougarAl: and you guys got rats.
Arch001: yea, that was nasty
Arch001: i never say one myself though
Arch001: i fell off the bed twice
Arch001: people said larch switched between girls and boys each year
Arch001: i have a seeing they just said that to shut the girls up
CougarAl: Hah. Larch was the biggest, but it wasn’t that great Arch001: true, it had a iv, but i’m not sure it even worked CougarAl: oh it didn’t
Arch001: did u go to alligator alley?
CougarAl: oh no
CougarAl: i remember RJ did
CougarAl: and he came out completely soaked
CougarAl: and some people didn’t get wet at all
Arch001: i didn’t go, i went to Hanukkah celebrations
Arch001: But i did go on a trip with the pine barrens guy, and he extracted a piece out of a tree for me
Arch001: it was … cool
CougarAl: i remember that we did some fun stuff
CougarAl: and that hike to the bogs
Arch001: and that animal food chain game
Arch001: i was a bug or something low on the chain
CougarAl: oh i was a quail
CougarAl: that was stupid
Arch001: i got my foot stuck in a bog there
Arch001: it wasn’t pleasant
CougarAl: ew
Arch001: o there was a midnight hike
CougarAl: that was good
Arch001: i dont think i ended up going though
CougarAl: and he pretends that we get lost CougarAl: but it’s great because once you get to an open field, you can see the stars really well
Arch001: you were mesmerized
CougarAl: i sure was
CougarAl: i saw shooting stars.
Arch001: i forget why i didn’t go
Arch001: wow, that’s actually pretty cool
CougarAl: that reminds me of those classic TV shows
CougarAl: salute your shorts
CougarAl: david the gnome
Arch001: that was the best
CougarAl: Hey Dude!
Arch001: maya the bee
Arch001: but that might've been too girly for you
CougarAl: No, I watched it
CougarAl: I remember there was this one episode of Maya the Bee
Arch001: Alanis Morissette was on that
CougarAl: where Maya got so steamed that she took out her stinger
CougarAl: but she didn't sting the boy
Arch001: "aw"
Arch001: clarissa explains it all
Arch001: I wanted her room
CougarAl: haha it was a cool show
Arch001: ferguson
CougarAl: I liked when she played video games
Arch001: yea, she was pretty smart to make those
CougarAl: yeah
Arch001: I liked when sean came over
Arch001: that music came on CougarAl: and they played that chord
CougarAl: remember how back in elementary school sweatpants were so cool?
Arch001: I had sets of sweatpants
Arch001: matching sets
Arch001: turquoise, purple, maroon
Arch001: now I wear them to sleep
CougarAl: oh, I wear these gap pj pants to sleep.
CougarAl: and no underwear
CougarAl: *wink
CougarAl: (can that go in the yearbook?)
Arch001: lol
Arch001: I dunno
Arch001: it may be "risque"
CougarAl: I remember a carwash to save the rain forest.
Arch001: I... don't
Arch001: I remember buying a baggy shirt that said "shoot baskets, not bullets"
CougarAl: yeah
Arch001: I used to think that changing for gym would be weird, but if you think about we were sweating and then going back to class
Arch001: and we actually DID gym then
CougarAl: gym was fun
CougarAl: I hate juggling and square dancing.
Arch001: juggling scarves rocked
CougarAl: I hated it.
Arch001: I could cascade like no other
CougarAl: oh I was a "master juggler"
Arch001: me too
Arch001: square dancing wasn't fun
Arch001: those gym teachers bribed us with echelon skating rink passes
Arch001: were u ever a safety
CougarAl: uh
CougarAl: I was the lieutenant
Arch001: o
Arch001: you suck
CougarAl: hehe
Arch001: that was the best job
CougarAl: Were’n’t you the hallway person?
Arch001: ... then I was hallway monitor in 6th grade
Arch001: what did u do during recess
CougarAl: I was a kickball fiend
CougarAl: and I played football too
CougarAl: and sometimes I played basketball
Arch001: I played on the wooden stuff
CougarAl: I’m sure you enjoyed your splinters. I remember playing Captain Planet in the first grade
Arch001: o yea they made up a character for me
CougarAl: hahaha they did that for the entire class
Arch001: did u get the ring?
CougarAl: I got a bunch of rings
CougarAl: James got to be Matee, the planeteer with the Heart ring
CougarAl: I was usually the one who played Matee with them, they sucked.
Arch001: u were betrayed
CougarAl: I know!
Arch001: I remember when people couldn’t say “you didn’t do the homework? why didn’t you DO IT” hhehehehehe
CougarAl: homework was silly back then
Arch001: what DID we have for homework?
CougarAl: umm ... a page of problems?
Arch001: one time we mumified a chicken
Arch001: that was weird
CougarAl: oh I never did that
Arch001: do u wish u were back in elementary school
CougarAl: no
Arch001: I drive now :-(
Arch001: that’s true, but we have more work
CougarAl: but we’re smarter now
Arch001: I don’t know, each has its advantages and disadvantages
Arch001: advantage: gym was fun
CougarAl: well gym was fun depending on the teacher
Arch001: disadvantage: the playground was made of wood
Arch001: pickle ball is fun
CougarAl: a lot of stuff was fun.

Lariss – Wow! What can I say? You are amazing. Thank you for showing me what a true girlfriend is. I’ll always remember the times we’ve shared together. I will always remember the first time I saw you and will never forget your beautiful face. I love you with all my heart and in every sense of the word. You are a wonderful girl and will always have a place in my heart.

Love always and forever.
Jay

Jay- You are the first true love of my life! You are not only my boyfriend, you are my best friend. You have given me a friendship that will last a lifetime and happiness that will complete me forever. You have taught me so many wonderful things, and showed me the rewards of having a boyfriend. We have so many memories, the list is infinite. Through the good times and the bad times, we’ve been through it all together... You have the biggest place in my heart that is irreplaceable, and I LOVE YOU ALWAYS AND FOREVER!

Dear Remy,
In the blink of an eye,
You've grown so fast,
Your college dreams
Are here at last

Continue to strive
Always reach for the sky
You've left your mark
Now it's time to say goodbye

We wish you lots of love
Much luck and happiness too
But above all, remember
How much WE LOVE YOU!

MWAAH!!!!!!!!!

Knowing I have a genuine friend like you, who I can always count on for everything, is so meaningful! You make me laugh, you make me smile... and best of all we live so close that if we can't see each other in person, you are always just a phone call away. You are so special and you will always be my best friend! I love you! - Lariss

LAM- It started in 3rd grade, and it's been nothing but laughs and smiles since. You've always been the first number I've dialed, and that will never change. CHELSEA~

I must be very lucky because not only are you MY SISTER, you are MY BEST FRIEND as well. And to go from seeing my best friend every, single day, to just talking to her on the phone everyday has been a very tough adjustment for me this year. But you know what... I think that me being away at school has only made us closer. Chels, you are the best sister I could ever ask for. You have helped me out a lot this year, and I thank you for that, and I hope you know I will do the same for you next year. I will always be here for you no matter what. Chels, I love you.

Congratulations to you because you deserve it!
GOOD LUCK!!!

Love always,
Brittany

It was always my dream to begin highschool with someone in my family. It was an even bigger dream to begin it with someone like you, my big brother. I love you Todd so much, and I wanted you to know that. Even though we only had one year together, that one-year was enough to fulfill my dream. You mean everything to me and I wish you the best in everything that you do. You are my best friend and my one and only brother. I could go on and on about our relationship but I unfortunately have to stop sometime. Don't ever forget how much you mean to me and I love you with all my heart.

Love you always,
Lulu

Todd
How much can I say? I promise I could go on forever about everything you mean to me even though we've had some disagreements, which we both know from past experiences are pointless and meaningless in the end. Many people don't have the opportunity of living with you 24/7, consequently not having the time to see within the real you, too bad it's their loss and my gain. I love you so much and nothing in the world can change my mind about how I feel. You are the funniest person I know and your dreams of whatever you want to be will definitely come true if you just stay focused and have your mind set on a certain destination. May your future be amazing and even more amazing with me being your sister and friend. You do have 2 sisters but remember I will always be the very first sister you will ever have. And you should have no regrets of our many amazing memories from the past. I wish you the best of luck Todd, strive to your fullest baby! I will always be here for you; if you need me you know where to ring.

We'll always remember:
Christmas mornings and waiting at the top of the stairs, losing Mac on the first night we got him, cream chip beef on toast with mint chocolate chip ice cream, N-A-P time, shady stuff a Chanticleer, "Do you have the camera case?" feeding the ostrich at great adventure, Montezuma's castle, me driving the speed limit (it's ok, I don't really remember that either), accidents in the Probe, photos with Santa, me calling you from every bathroom of every bar in Maryland, calling you from my formal causes. I just don't want to talk to my date, you getting in trouble for what I do, projectile vomit in Europe, me kicking you out of your bed when Jordan and I broke up, DMB and cops on horseback, was its really precision in that cup, Benihana and your friends who look 40, Drives to Key West, bowling on van colors, Daytona flea market, Disney World, the beach, ping pong in the basement, green milk, scrambled eggs in the microwave with food coloring, ADIDAS bag fight, late nights, mano cart, Life, Cranium, Wizard fires in Va., riding Suzy, buying guzzies at Bill's, "What's up?" the best water ice in South Philly, taking me out of tattoos and piercings... or at least trying, Sakura, mom's stash, dad's impressions, getting the Christmas tree, Tonki, "Protect the Walls..."

Buzz,
I am so proud of all you have done and I am so eager to see all you will do. You will never cease to amaze me in the way you deal with people and the way you always put others needs before your own. If there has been one constant in my life that never lets me down and understands each time I frown - it's you. You were always there for me when I needed you and we were the one I knew would always drop everything to listen to me. I love you, Buzz, and thanks for being you!

Love,
Jenni.

Kim,

We've had the best times together. We've laughed, we've cried, but through it all, you've been there for me. You're like my sister, and even though our past has been fun, I bet our future will be even better. Thank you so much for being the best friend that I've ever had.

Love,

Vickie

Vickie,

We've known each other since Mann, but became best friends in 9th grade. We've been through a lot and I'll never forget a moment we've spent together. Through everything, you've always been there. You're the sister I never had. No matter how far apart we are, we'll always be best friends forever. I can't wait for the memories we'll create in the future.

Love ya lots,

Kim

Nay-Nay,

I can't even thank you enough for all you've done for me through the years. You have been a great big sister, and you have taught me so much. I couldn't imagine anyone having a better relationship then what we have together. Having you as my older sister and my best friend, is the greatest thing that I could ever ask for. I am going to miss you so much when you leave for college next year. I love you more then anything, and I am always here for you no matter what. I wish you the best of luck in college and in everything you do! I'll always be your "chicky." I love you so much!

Our Sweet Dana Leigh

Today is for celebrating you-

All you've been
All you've become
And
All you've yet to be...

Pursue your dreams;
Remember, if you love what you do,
Everything else will fall into place

CONGRATULATIONS!

Love Always,
Mom, David, Dad, Stefanie, Harrison,
Mom-Mom & Pop-Pop
(Razzie & Daisy too)

We love you, we are proud of you,
And we know you will be a great success.
May luck, love, and happiness follow you all the days of your life.
Dana

From the first moment we saw you, we were enchanted.

We've watched you grow from an adorable baby into a beautiful, confident and kind young woman.

You were always so eager to please even if it meant trying something you hated.

At age three you danced... and you cried

At age four you swore, and you cried

At age five you tried soccer, and... you cried

At age ten you soared across the ice with grace... and you loved it

Now it's time for you to conquer new things that you will love.

We have always been so proud of you. We'd like to think it's because we've done something special or wonderful in the way we raised you.

But the truth is,

You'd be spectacular no matter what

While you are off on this new adventure in your life, always remember

If you need us, we're right where you left us.

Congratulations D.J.

We love you.

*A friendship kept secret from the start,
true words spoken from the heart.
We hold something that no one else does,
secrets and feelings of our pasts—exactly how it was.
It matters not whether people know, it only matters that we do, together, even in the hardest times we know we can get through.
We'll be best friends forever...wait, that's too easily said,
TRUE FRIENDS THROUGH IT ALL, how bout that instead.*

"Are you Karen’s cousin?” was the first line I said when I first met Antoinette, my true best friend. Even though when I needed her she was never home. I was sure with her, I’d never be alone. She was the smart one making good grades while it would be a miracle if I got any A’s. We haven’t had any classes together since 8th grade. My house, her second home, is where she usually stayed from family vacations to our sweet 16’s. Our fun pictures on "King Henry’s Feast" key rings. Cooking her pasta was a fun treat until she got sick & couldn’t get off her feet. We made up vocabulary when we were bored. Her mom always forces her to pray to the Lord. The year of 2002 brought us behind a wheel. Antoinette got in an accident she didn’t even feel coming out of her house. I’d always smell like fish her auntie is always cooking up some funky new dish though college may bring distance and keep us apart we will always be together deep in our hearts.

Horoscopes:
9/12/02 — Vin — Your relationship is worth so much to you. You wouldn’t trade your lover for anyone else in the world. In your intense happiness, you’re creatures of light and heat. Love is the answer to all the questions you’d ever ask.

Jess — You look at your significant other with new eyes, remembering what attracted you in the first place. You still like what you see. There may be others in the world that you appreciate aesthetically, but you’ll never leave someone who’s so right for you.

9/20/02 — You’re together because you believe in each other. You’ll never get tired of gazing at this lovely face.

Romance is a constant in your lives. Neither of you would want it any other way.

10/29/02 — Vin — This is the best relationship you ever had. And probably the last you’ll ever need.

Jess — You’re so lucky to have someone who’s this devoted to you.

We've watched each other grow up, and luckily we haven't grown apart. No matter what happens in the future I will always be here for you. Our memories are unforgettable, and thank you for all that you have done. I can't tell you how much you mean to me, and I truly do love you with all my heart. You will always be my bestest friend. Love- Chrissy

Christine- When looking beyond you hitting me, kicking me, and completely torturing me I will always love you. You once said to me (in one of our little convo's) that no matter where I was or how far away I would be and no matter how much trouble I was in you would be there for me right by my side. That was six years ago and it has proven to stand true. You are the best description of a best friend and what all friends that are really friends should be like. You are very special to me and I love you. O yea I almost forgot, if anyone ever messes with you girl all ya gotta do is pick up the fizzozone and someone will have two broken legs. Kate,

You are the best sister in the world. It's been so awesome living with you for all these years. Even though I told Mom to take you back when you were born, I'm so glad she didn't. I could not have asked for a better person to be my little sister. No matter what, you are always there for me, and I'll always be there for you. Good luck next year at college. I know you'll do great.

Congratulations on four great years at East! We are so proud of your accomplishments, but most of all, that you have matured into such a wonderful person.

We love you so much! Mom. Dad and Andrew

Amy, never let anyone get in the way of your dreams! You can do anything you want to do. Set your goals high, and strive hard because in the end, I know that you will all ways succeed. Always remember your friends and family because we will always be here in the end.

Love, Nicky
A Forever Friend
Sometimes in life,
you find a special friend;
Someone who changes your life
just by being a part of it
Someone who makes you laugh
until you can’t stop;
Someone who makes you believe that there really is good in the world
Someone who convinces you that there really is an unlocked door just waiting for you to open it.
This is a Forever Friendship
Your forever friend gets you through the hard times, the sad times, and the confusing times.
If you turn and walk away,
your forever friend follows.
If you lose your way,
your forever friend guides you
and cheers you on.
Your forever friend holds your hand and tells you that everything is going to be okay.
And if you find such a friend,
you feel happy and complete,
because you need not worry.
You have a FOREVER FRIEND for life,
and forever has no end.

Love: Mom, Dad, & Lindsay

It's been an unbelievable pleasure and privilege to accompany you on your journey to young adulthood. Watching you experience, learn, and ultimately master everything you undertake with your unique focus and drive has truly inspired not only us but all of those you have touched. As you prepare to embark on this next phase of your journey, we know you will continue to pursue your goals with that same focus and dedication. Our hope is that your future holds even greater promise and joy and that you look back on these early years with fond memories to which many more will be added in your long, healthy, happy, and successful journey.

We have been through sooo much together over the past 14 years. From play fights to real fights we have done it all. I am going to miss you when you go off to college. As much as I hate to admit it, it's going to be weird not having a sister around the house to talk to whenever I need a friend. I LOVE YOU!!

YO BRO, we've come a long way. We've been thru the bad & good. Not only do I consider u my brother, but ur truly like my bestfriend, my other half. When I go away to start a new beginning in life, I'll worry bout u man! I'm always gonna b here 4 u, and anytime u need ur big sis, I'll b ther! And jus remember when things get tough, never EVER give up. (take that advice from a pro, bro!) Never 4get me, I <3 u!!!

TRUE, true we came a long way, we've been through so much 2gether, since we were itty bitty babies till now. When u go away u don't have 2 worry bout me, jus stay focused on ur goal in life. I'll miss a the dayz & nights we CHILLED, sum how i'll get by. If u ever need me u kno where 2 find me (til i'm 18' LOL) I'll always b here 4 u sis! So... have fun & keep in touch. Love, ur brother
Connie Melissa Rachel

“What is a friend? It is a person with whom you dare to be yourself... She does not want you to be better or worse. You do not have to be on your guard. You can say what you think so long as it is genuinely you. She understands those contradictions in your nature that lead others to misjudge you... You can avow your little vanities and envies and hates and vicious sparks, your meannesses and absurdities and, in opening them up to her, they are lost, dissolved on the white ocean of her loyalty. You can weep with her, sing with her, laugh with her, pray with her. Through it all and underneath—she sees, knows and loves you... What is a friend? Just one with whom you dare to be yourself.”

The Friendship Has Always Been the Same!!

Karishma and Susan

The Free Floaters

In Forchion's class we met & on a magic journey we embarked- lost on 295 with food on our laps- muffins and dumplings and water ice! Boys were intimidated & children ran away.

But armed with Asian-ness, we took the world by storm. Dream on sister. Dream on. PSYCH!

To John

we have always been so proud of you.

You were a wonderful child filled with energy and excitement.

And you have grown to become an even more wonderful young man- looking to the future with that same energy and excitement.

Every moment with you has been very special.

As you prepare to move on, remember that "The future is a world limited only by ourselves."

We wish you peace, health and, above all, happiness. Love, Mom, Dad, Catherine and Paddy

"A friend is someone who can bail you out of jail. A best friend is one sitting beside you saying, 'Damn, that was fun.'"

Dear Jen,

Well 17 years later we are still here. It is so great to be able to stay friends with someone you have known for so long. We have had so many great, great times (Ret. 92; Shady, boot shopping trips, Sex and the City, and sleepovers to name a few) and I know the fun has to continue. There have been some hard times in both of our lives but I think that is what has made us stronger people and more importantly, better friends. We may have our "stuff" at times, but no matter what happens or what anyone may say, I always look out for you and be your friend. The best is yet to come!

Love Always,

Sami

Dear Sami,

Wow, 17 years later and still best friends. It is so hard to find a friendship like ours and I value your friendship so much. You are always there for me whenever I need you, no matter what the situation. From 5 year old sleepovers to 18 year old sleepovers you have always been there. From fun times like Route 42 and our "senior wrist" times when I have just been there to cry with me. Over the past 17 years you have shown me what true friendship means. You're an amazing friend and I love you.

Love Always,

Jen

You have always been pretty on the outside and beautiful on the inside. May you continue to be strong and faithful and salt and light. Congratulations on your graduation. The best is yet to come.

Love,

Mom, Dad, & Kelly
What do you get when you stick sixteen teenage females into one cramped room, supplied with cropppers and layout paper—CHAOS!—that and this year’s yearbook staff. 2003 truly was the year when females dominated and estrogen levels clearly outnumbered the testosterone. Yet, our only representative of the male sex (Carr) always found a way to make his presence known whether it was by dancing to a song by a certain infamous rapper or by making glamorous rock star poses.

First off, we would like to establish that we, who call A022 our second home, are not part of a club. In essence, we are just “yearbook”—NOT yearbook club.

So you may ask who exactly is this powerful group of women. Well, some of us have trouble telling the difference between different colors. In an effort to show our yearbook pride, we had our first annual PINK DAY—courtesy of Mr. Carr who in the end did not wear the long awaited pink polyester suit. Still, when you ask a group of fairly intelligent women to wear pink, you don’t expect shades or orange, purple, or maroon.

In spite of the daunting task of 380 blank pages facing us, we managed to maintain our sanity with our “I love you Santa” and indulging ourselves in breakfasts consisting of chocolate chip cookies and rice crispy treats made by Yearbook’s personal chef, Perry. We survived despite our lack of listening skills and a surprising discovery of the diabolicalness of certain Asian girls as well as the eccentricities of our advisor. We do have some flaws but we also have many positive aspects. Some of us, for instance, possess wonderful artistic skills. We like to decorate our photographs with markers while using our caption writing skills to “positively” enhance pictures.

Now we cannot forget to thank those who helped us along the way. There are Yogi and Barb, our faithful computer companions, and more importantly, our photographer, Mr. Yellen, without whom, Yearbook would be lost, and of course the man who is always there when we need him: Mr. Carr. All in all, the “pink” ladies of yearbook have toiled to create our greatest work of art—Eidolon 2003—while making some great memories.

LOST: Timur Dykhne. Misguided child who frequently wanders into A022. Spends more time in the yearbook office than some of the editors. Needs a home... because yearbook sure isn’t his.
Gray New Balance Sneakers. Size 6. In Fair condition. Come to yearbook office to claim them because they have been here forever.

NAME: Matthew Carr

OCCUPATION: English teacher, yearbook advisor, French linguist, advocate of the anti-technological movement, philosopher, rock star

FAMOUS FOR: Liking Moby Dick

DISCOVERIES: Multitasking is bad for you.

QUOTE: “I don’t like to be quoted.”

ROLE: Thread that holds yearbook together.

Mr. Carr, after about two decades as the yearbook advisor, we would like to say on behalf of the 2003 yearbook staff and all past staff: Thank you. Thank you for the long hours. Thank you for your patience. Thank you for your dedication. You truly are the backbone of this “club.” You will be missed.
