Chooberg cafeteria. Steven Krallis (‘06) purchases a bottle of water from a vending machine in the cafeteria. Throughout the school day, students exercise their freedom to choose, including choosing what they want to eat during their lunch periods. The variety of foods offered in the cafeteria allows each student to meet his own dietary needs.

In her 3-D Art class, Amy Cheung (‘04) meticulously perfects her project. Choosing classes is one of the choices that all students make, formulating their daily schedule. “I’m glad that I took 3-D Art,” said Cheung, “it gives me a break in my schedule filled with heavy academic classes.”

Solemnly, Dan Nagelberg (‘04) salutes the flag. A morning ritual at East, the Pledge of Allegiance reminds students of their patriotic duties. The democratic nature of the United States is reflected in the freedom of choice granted to East students. Students have freedom in expressing their national, as well as school, pride.

Erica Silberstein (‘04) and Lisa Wang (‘04) choose among the plethora of cakes available for purchase. Students use their individual creativity to design the cakes and have free reign as to the design, thus making each cake a unique masterpiece. A fundraiser for the French department, the cakes appeal to many students and each customer can find one to fit his own desires.

4 Student Life
Despite the complicated concepts being explained in class, Lauren Krohn ('05) still finds the chance to sit comfortably. The metal bar that stretches across many East desks provides a convenient resting spot for many students' feet, tired from walking around the school all day. However, one can also choose to sit with both feet on the floor— a product of the gift of freedom.

Working cooperatively to finish a math worksheet, Allen Chiao ('05) and Querida Lindsey ('04) mull over a problem. Even though East does enforce a dress code, students still have the freedom to choose their own attire. Hair color and unique accessories can distinguish the dress of one person from that of another.

Free to be you and me... Despite the seemingly restrictive list of rules and standards to which all students must conform, one can still find hundreds of courses and activities in which to immerse oneself. The Guidance Office is filled each spring with students switching from Physics to Environmental Sciences, from Eastern Humanities to World History. Internally and externally they debate between hundreds of academic courses and electives, taking advantage of East's academic diversity. Even after school, students have the freedom to participate in as many clubs as they can handle, riding the 4:15 late bus almost every day.

Programs and different activities not only bring out the unique qualities of the school but they also help students go above and beyond the regular curriculum. Freedom of the press lives on, as only whim dictates how Eastside and Demogorgon contributors express themselves. When other students disagree with their articles, they are free to give feedback. To spread publicity and show spirit, sports teams and members of the drama department dress up together, but individual flair also abounds in the hallways and classrooms. On the walls are murals created by the Art club, designed from suggestions or from scratch. Cooking from scratch attracts hungry students as delicious smells waft through the air. Strains of music constantly flow from D-wing as students practice and compose.

With the freedom to be you and me, we can be a happy community.

In her science class, Jaclyn Greenstein ('04) concentrates on her multiple-choice test. Despite its common derogatory moniker of "multiple guess," choosing between the different answers often poses a challenging obstacle for students. Teachers also have the difficult task of choosing among the various testing formats, such as short answer, essay, take-home, lab practicals, and of course, multiple-choice.

Focusing intently on her photograph, Melissa Horowitz ('04) wavers among the techniques she can use to modify the print. In Photography, students have the opportunity to learn more about photographic maneuvers while enjoying themselves. "I have the freedom to express myself with the shots I make and develop in class," said Horowitz.
Meandering Down Memory Lane

Contrary to what Zack Morris had us believe, high school does not consist of concocting crazy schemes to avoid tests, organizing ways to exploit the resident nerd to make some extra cash, or sabotaging a college interview to help a friend get into college. Reality is, in fact, much different. However, there are certain events that we have all come to experience throughout our four-year journey. We all remember having to stand up to make an in-class presentation, usually for that one subject that we’re not quite sure we understand. While we’re up there, we stand divided between trying to (1) sound like we know what we’re talking about; (2) avoid looking at that pesky student in the front row who keeps making funny noises; and (3) read the teacher’s facial expressions. There are also those all-too-familiar nights where we stay up working into the wee-hours, when there’s nothing but infomercials for the “Amazing Dice ‘N Chop” on TV. The next day, we invariably fall asleep in that one class where the teacher drones on and on, usually only to be awakened by the sound of the bell at the end of the period. However, we do experience our share of fulfilling times as well. From acing that test that promised to be a doozy, to finishing that book report ahead of time, to finally getting the hang of a very difficult concept, there are many times when we can just sit back and think “Oh yeah, I’m good...”. So, unlike Zack Morris, though we have never destroyed the plumbing system in school in order to avoid a test, we all have occasionally pleaded with the teacher to have it moved back a few days. Then again, Cherry Hill East is a long ways from Bayside High.

Discussing academic coursework, Brett Robbins ('03) learns from Mrs. Small. Students often meet with teachers on a one-to-one basis, whether to seek extra help on a particularly challenging topic or to discuss issues of intellectual interest. Instead of being annoyed by students who seek extra attention, teachers are often pleased to elaborate on their areas of expertise.

Hungry, Sarah Mandes ('04) purchases French fries from the school cafeteria. Many East students will attest to the fact that their favorite food from the cafeteria is the French fries. Whether à la carte or included as part of the meal, French fries are an extremely popular dish.

Jack Reyes ('04), Chris Rivera ('04), and Lindsay Grimes ('04) work together to produce the best images. In all disciplines, students benefit from each other’s comments and criticisms. Though East is often labeled a competitive school, its students have a tendency to help, rather than hurt, their peers.
Animatedly, Michael Duffy ('04), Paul Caracciolo ('04), and Tim Rinehart ('04) discuss physics concepts together. Though academics are often extremely challenging and taxing, students still find the time to relax and laugh together. Often, a light-hearted joke or gesture can brighten the day of students under large amounts of stress.

Enthusiastically, Julie Sobota ('05) turns the sheet music as she plays her handbells in Celebrations. A large portion of East students participate in a variety of after-school activities, including musical groups such as Celebrations. The wide variety of student interests typifies a large school like East.

Lauren Lopilato ('04) puts her head on the table and gets some much-needed rest. At East, the large workload forces many students to sacrifice sleep for good grades. They compensate for this sleep deprivation by snoozing in a few classes.

Confidently, Brandie Sullivan ('07) delivers an oral presentation in front of her classmates. Many students are nervous about speaking in front of their peers, but discover that after repeated public speaking experiences, they become more and more sure of themselves. East incorporates varied types of learning in its curriculum, giving students an opportunity to teach their peers.
A Smorgasbord Of Opportunities

Try finding an empty spot in the East parking lot at nine o’clock on a Wednesday morning. Chances are, you won’t have much luck. Come back at four in the afternoon, a good hour and a half after the last class has ended. Chances are you still won’t find that spot. Surprised? Don’t be.

For many East students, the day starts after the final bell. From playing for one of the more than fifteen different varsity athletics, to matching wits on the Debate team, to even kicking around a beanbag in the Hackey-Sack Club, there is something appealing to every student.

The various activities provide more than just something to do on a given afternoon. They act as a release from the everyday stresses of normal class. After taking three exams in a single day, what can be more relaxing than singing a tune from “Grease” with fifteen of your friends? Or discussing current issues in the Animal Rights Club? Or interviewing a classmate for the newspaper? The point is that no matter what the appealing activity happens to be, it allows students to separate from the mandatory class work and partake in an activity of their choosing.

In addition, East also offers many extra opportunities for seniors, such as the senior-option program. Students leave school early and intern at a variety of different places, depending on their study of interest. From interning at a financial firm to doing research in a medical laboratory, students are able to gain a more hands-on, real-world application to the subjects they have studied in school.

It is those students who make the most of East’s opportunities that truly succeed. In a 1979 speech, Woody Allen said, “It is clear the future holds great opportunities. It also holds pitfalls. The trick will be to avoid the pitfalls, seize the opportunities, and get back home by six o’clock.” Six o’clock? The parking lot will still be full.

During an intense practice session, Kate Malanut ’05 cracks the tennis ball back to her opponent. Requiring talent and dedication, sports teams enable students to compete against others while training them both mentally and physically. Students also use sports as an outlet for pent-up energy.

As one of America’s prospective business leaders, Roshni Joshi ’04 gets hands-on experience in customer service at the school store. There, students can buy necessities like pens and pencils or even frivolous items such as teddy bears and candy bars from their friendly, business-minded peers. “Life is so much more than memorizing equations,” said Joshi, “working at the school store gives me a chance to learn more about the real world.”
section, Steven Kramer ('04) and Melissa Horowitz ('04) prepare their section on the computer. Getting involved in extracurricular activities provides students with a chance to explore non-academic interests. The yearbook offers a work-like environment in which students can hone their organizational and leadership skills.

Animately conversing during their lunch period, Danielle Shindler ('04), Laura Horowitz ('04), Ben Gross ('04), and Paul Boyle ('05) find time to relax in a busy school day. Many students take advantage of free periods such as lunch to catch up with friends and get a break from their hectic lives. Sometimes, those forty-two minutes are the only time in which East students can sit down and not worry about tests, projects, or other concerns.

concentrate on the music during a Wind Ensemble rehearsal. East's elite musicians play a diverse repertoire extending from the arcane to the archaic, learning the characteristics of each musical genre. With Performing Arts, musicians, vocalists, and actors have the opportunity to express their artistic leanings while learning about their respective fields.

Fish in his Vertebrate Anatomy class. In many science classes, lab periods provide students with the opportunity to apply concepts that they have learned from class instruction. Lab periods also familiarize students with laboratory procedures and tools, skills which will prove to be useful in many science careers.

Poring over an Eastside layout, Laura Herron ('05) designs some pages of the next issue of the newspaper. Eastside provides East's journalists with the opportunity to express their own opinions about their school, their local community, and world issues through writing.
"Be civil to all, sociable to many, familiar with few, friend to one, enemy to none."

-Benjamin Franklin

A Whole New World

Each year, hundreds of freshmen enter the doors of Cherry Hill East, not knowing what to expect. Yet the freshmen learn to adapt quickly to the differences in high school. For instance, Melissa Chiu found that “getting used to the different crowds of friends and the demands of each of my courses proved a challenge at first, but I love high school.” For most people, high school is a refreshing change. Students can meet new people with similar classes and interests. High school classes can also be a rude awakening to some students because Cherry Hill East is well-known that it is difficult. Another freshman, Sara Ryer, comments that “One of the changes I liked most was being able to carry a backpack so I didn’t have to go to my locker as much.” Students take advantage of being able to carry backpacks in the halls. In such a large school, backpacks are very useful to students who only pass by their lockers once a day. Additionally, East seems to hand out exceptionally large textbooks, which are much easier to lug around the building with the convenience of backpacks. Although the Class of 2007 received the ideal place for lockers, right in the middle of East, they still have a long trek to their freshman classes.

As freshmen, they have many older peers that they can ask for advice. Freshman year is the time for decisions. For once in their lives, freshmen can choose their own classes. Everyone has the opportunity to explore his or her own personal interests. Furthermore, in Freshman year, most students are given the first chance to participate in after-school activities other than sports. At East, students can choose from a plethora of clubs which may interest them. By the end of the year, freshmen begin to see East not only as a school but also as a second home.

Instead of common health topics, such as sex ed. and diseases that students deal with each year, sophomores begin the year with an intense course in driving. After surviving the huge transition from middle school to high school, the new sophomores feel ready to deal with whatever challenges face them. Yet nothing could have prepared them for driver's education. The first semester of sophomore health is devoted to teaching students what to expect on the road. Classes are led by East favorites: Valore, Martin, and Sheppard, who have been providing humorous anecdotes for over thirty years. Students love to attend class because the teachers add an entertaining element to what could have been a long, boring forty-two minutes. By decorating the lecture hall with road signs, the teachers provide a unique learning environment in the class.

However, first and foremost, the teachers emphasize to students the great responsibility that accompanies a driver’s license. They quickly learn that driving is a privilege that cannot be taken lightly. In class, they pay attention so that they will be safe on the road. The class not only teaches valuable information for the written test but also offers tips on smart driving. Yet the state of New Jersey realizes that nothing can replace experience on the road. Driving is the first step towards independence. Unlike other classes, driver’s ed. teaches students valuable life skills that they will use everyday for the rest of their lives. At the end of the semester, each student leaves prepared to pass the written test given by the New Jersey Department of Motor Vehicles. So exactly how effective is East’s driver’s ed program? Just look out at the parking lot packed with student drivers.

CLASS OF 2004

TELEGRAM FROM TERRANOVA

Dear Members of the Class of 2004,

Our time together is approaching its final stages. During the months and years that followed our first meeting, in August of 2000, we have shared many memorable events. Some were joyful and others were tragic. Each one helped us come together as a class. We supported one another and we learned from one another.

As your assistant principal I have learned from you and I know that you have grown and developed as well. I hope I have contributed to that process.

Each of you has a unique contribution to make to this world. Remember to do whatever you choose to do with all your energy and to the best of your ability. Do your job. Respect yourself. Respect others. Act responsibly.

May the Lord bless you and keep you. May his face shine upon you and be gracious to you.

May he give you peace!

Mr. Terranova

CORRESPONDENCE FROM THE CLASS PRESIDENT

Dear Class of 2004,

With our high school graduation, the final stage of our metamorphosis from juvenile caterpillars into mature butterflies commences. Once we grow our wings, we will fly off in a thousand directions, free of the protective cocoon in which our friends, parents, and teachers have sheltered us in for so long. That concept is equally tantalizing and terrifying to many of us, who wish to fly solo but do not know our final destination.

The solution? Following our bliss.

The best way to see through the haze of the future is to let our passion be our pilot. We must discover what makes us happy and then pursue that relentlessly. With the one opportunity we have to live this life right, we should make every effort to ensure we live well and we live happily.

If that means changing a major, change it! If that means transferring colleges, transfer! To live a life free of regret, we must exercise our heart’s will and not let anything get in the way. So ‘Think High, Vote...’ nah, just get ready to spread your wings.

Thank you so much for the opportunities you have given me and may everyone find happiness in the future.

Sincerely,

Brendan Lowe
Class of 2004 President

John F. Kennedy is dead. JFK, Jr. is also dead. JFK Sr. was president; JFK, Jr. was not. As this obviously proves, the senior is far more important than the junior (and, of course, the sophomore and freshman). We’re seniors now. We all should’ve learned about the unfortunate death of dear John Fitzgerald Kennedy Sr. at some point in our high school careers because after all, US History is a required course. Now that we’re done with History and World Civ and Geometry and puberty, we can delve into our personal interests with electives only open to upperclassmen like I Humanities and Photography and Art History.

In fact, if we’ve gotten our required courses under control, we can take as many electives as we want. It’s not uncommon for seniors to have more electives than actual classes.

Applying to college should be a course in itself. It involves making ourselves look appealing to institutions of higher education. We get to fill out lots of forms, delineating our entire lives on a few pieces of paper. We also finally get to learn our social security numbers and school CLEP code (310223), by the way. We try to cram our entire personality into a two-page essay about “why catfish are my favorite sea creature” or “how my great uncle in Ohio taught me about the under-appreciated art of sculpting jelly” or “that time I taught illiterate adults how to read in order to look good for college and how it was meaningful to me.”

Being a senior also means an end to our long and perilous journey through the wonderful world of standardized testing. We have the freedom to come into school late while all the underclassmen suffer through early morning bubble-filling in testing sessions. We are finally rid of tumbling into school on Saturday mornings for a mind-numbing three hours of SAT fun. We can even avoid finals. If we have an A in a class, then we’re free to not take the final and go party down the shore or at Wawa instead. We’ll have been accepted to college by then, so the less thinking about high school we have to do, the better.

However, this can also lead to the suffering of that great disease officially and unofficially known as E. Senioritis coli. It’s better than dysentery, at least. Senioritis is an air-borne disease known to strike at any time (even in the middle of sophomore year). Its main breeding season is second semester. Its main symptom is lack of interest in anything remotely related to East. Other symptoms include frequent trips to Wawa and forgetting that first period even exists. There is no known cure for Senioritis, but it generally ceases as graduation.

We may not remember which members of the Kennedy clan are still alive, but at least we are. We are seniors. Let us rejoice.

Purchasing Privileges

Teachers often tell their senior students that this is the year in which the proverbial “gates of the real world” start to open. Though this may prove to be true, it turns out that the “gates of the checkbook” start to open a lot faster. From the much-anticipated parking spot to the memorable senior yearbook, the list of purchases a senior makes is endless. However, seniors relish the opportunity to partake in these senior privileges, and coming up with the extra cash does not always seem like that tall of a task.

The first check of the year is sent to the Campus Police office. Fifty dollars ensures seniors more than a place to park their car; it also promises an end to taking the bus each day. From running to the bus stop early each morning to waiting for the late-buses after school, the big, yellow limousines that all students are familiar with have worn out their welcome. Next come the payments for the senior portraits and senior sweatshirts. More than just memorabilia, these items distinguish seniors from the rest of the school. After all, for a graduating senior, are there many things as humiliating as being confused for an underclassman?

Now that senior year is over, it’s not time to close the gates of that checkbook yet. In fact, it’s time to open them a lot wider...college is right around the corner.

Inviting Events

Halley’s Comet approaches the Earth about once every 75 years. Senior prom occurs once every year, but our own senior prom occurs only once in our lifetimes, so technically that counts as being rarer than Halley’s Comet. Except for those of us who die before we turn 75. But 75 or not, all of us will have been able to partake in such once in a lifetime events as the senior trip, senior bowling and roller-skating, graduation and the proceeding project thereof, a yearbook signing, and the big American dance party we call prom.

Indeed, senior year brings with it a myriad of monumental events. Disney World is the epitome of a Cherry Hillian vacation. It’s only appropriate that this also be the senior trip location. Most of us remember our elementary school skating parties, complete with worrying if “that cute boy/girl who picks his/her nose will ask me to skate with him/her.” Besides reminiscing about our glorious childhoods, maybe this time we will actually get to skate with that cute boy/girl who hopefully by now doesn’t pick his/her nose anymore. Maybe we can even take that boy/girl to prom and stare at the pretty fish while we dance. The New Jersey State Aquarium is the ideal location for prom. After all, nothing says prom like penguins. Then comes graduation; it may be lacking sea creatures, but at least it’s at the same place the Trans-Siberian Orchestra played. And then comes Project Graduation where you get free stuff and hang out for one last time as a class. Everyone likes free stuff.

Senior memories consist of more than just times and places, more than just signed yearbooks and stylish tassels. These senior events—OUR senior events—are more than just routine clichés. This is our time to remember. We will remember our senior events. We will remember them because they are not just scenes from the teen movie du jour, but because they belong to a fundamental point in our lives. We, like that popular soap opera, have only one life to live and one senior year to complete.

Summer School for Smart Students
by Molly Finkelstein

As a reasonably well-informed teenager, I should know who the governor of New Jersey is. And I do. It's Jim McGreevey, for now, at least. The only (and I mean only) reason I know this is because I went to Governor's School. They didn't actually emphasize the importance of the governor or really anything related to him at Governor's School, but I figured if I was going to his school, I might as figure out who he is. Being the governor of New Jersey is a position of leadership. If you want to learn lots of exciting things about leadership, go to Rotary or Girl's/Boy's State. If you would rather learn about the environment, engineering, science, public issues, or international issues go to their respective Governor's Schools. If you want to hang out with really talented artsy kids and write poetry (or sing or dance or paint or draw or act or play the cello/saxophone/piano/trumpet/etc. or make films), then go to the Governor's School of the Arts.

I was one of the twelve creative writing scholars. Every day, we had a seminar-style class in which we discussed, wrote, and critiqued poetry and prose. We learned from the poetic masters, as well as each other. Our teachers, all published writers, gave us challenges such as having to incorporate three metaphors using broccoli, the word "insouciant," the name of a typewriter brand, and a line of The Taming of the Shrew unobtrusively in a short story or poem. Later, of course, we were allowed to edit out the obscene amount of broccoli references if we wanted to. The point was to make our minds go beyond their normal thought processes, to create ideas we never normally would have considered. Governor's School introduced me to an artistic world I never knew could exist, while simultaneously showing me how I relate to that world. And of course, I learned who the governor of New Jersey is.

Interview with Dr. John O' Breza

What do you feel you have accomplished this year?
I think we have a couple of things that we have done pretty well. We have the beginnings of a mentoring program through the in-school support program and Mr. Loretta. We also did a great deal with the smaller learning environments. We have four smaller learning groups as of now. That has been very helpful. And one of the things that I am most proud of is the initiative that Mrs. McLeester and Mr. Terranova have taken in working with Mrs. Beck, and the Cum Laude Society have made a lot of headway in the tutoring program. I think their conduct is exemplary. Also, I think currently as well we’ve made some changes in the library which I think make that very accessible to students. Throughout the year, we’ve increased the number of computers in there and really we’ve invited people to spend free time in there and to use it productively and respectfully as a place to work. It is a large space with a lot of opportunity.

What sets apart the students at Cherry Hill East?
I think that they focus on high expectations. They expect a lot from school and they expect a lot of themselves. They clearly have a record of achievement and accomplishment in all areas. When I think of the academic areas, our high school profile speaks for itself. And in athletics as well, we’ve seen what the girls’ tennis team and girls’ volleyball team has done. The boys swimming team has done extraordinarily well. The boys’ basketball team. I think there is good spirit here and really we’ve been fortunate to have people, teachers involved in these activities, that really have gone beyond what is common at other schools.

How have the students at Cherry Hill East affected your life?
Well, they’ve given me a great opportunity over the years to work with an accomplished student body. They tend to be very accepting even when they don’t understand why we may be doing something in the building. I think through the example particularly in the student body they’ve been very helpful, particularly two occasions I know such as back to school night, the students really showcased the school. They did so again this month again when we had the open house for eighth grade. Those who were called to showcase athletics, clubs, the academics, I think they had a lot of fun and rather than having adults talk about the school, I think they really showed the spirit, what a student here really looked like and thought.

If you could sum up your goals for East in one phrase, what would it be?
My goals for East are to be of service to East families, the east community. I operate by the motto “service to others”.

What Does A Teacher Do... Exactly?

Conventionally, everyone thinks that a teacher simply stands in front of a classroom everyday just to teach, but teachers do far more than just teaching. They affect many aspects of a student’s experience at Cherry Hill East.

Without teachers, I don’t think that Cherry Hill East would be such a wonderful environment to learn in. I really like the feeling that I know that I can turn to any teacher for help,” says Beverly Hon (’05).

When any student is in turmoil, he knows that he can ask his understanding teachers for help. Truly at Cherry Hill East, the faculty has created a comfortable atmosphere for the students.

In addition to academics, teachers frequently involve themselves in Cherry Hill East’s extra-curricular activities. From taking part in Cherry Hill East’s bi-annual blood drive to coaching the various sports offered at Cherry Hill East, teachers hold Cherry Hill East together as a whole. Behind every student at Cherry Hill East stands the hardworking faculty.

Without teachers to guide students through high school to college, students at Cherry Hill East would not be as prepared as they are when they leave Cherry Hill East for college.
Daring a physics lab, Mrs. Hinrichsen helps Mike Brown ('04) achieve the objective of the lab. During physics lab periods, teachers guide students with genuine laboratory equipment in order to prove the material taught in class.

In English, Ms. Kelly helps Alison Green ('05) fix her grammatical errors. In English class, students write several essays during the year. Teachers teach students correct grammar usage for a portion of each school year to maintain the students' grammar skills.

The Astute, Ardent and Arduous

Students at East work diligently inside and outside of school. Somehow, the mountains of homework that teachers pile on each night are completed before the next day of school. Teachers expect students to give 115% every day. In order to achieve high grades, students devote themselves to spending time preparing, studying, and practicing before tests. Students do not see this as a sacrifice but as a smart investment into the future.

At Cherry Hill East, because all of the staff members encourage students to try their best, students always go above and beyond. Unlike most other high schools, East offers a wide array of AP level courses that prepare students for college. Many already obtain college credits before they even leave high school. In the past few years, East has had to add additional courses such as in foreign language for gifted students who have completed already existing levels.

In addition to studies, students participate in numerous extra-curricular activities. From volunteering to clubs at East, they always seem to be on the run. With such an impressive resume, it is no wonder that many students head off to world-renowned universities to finish their education.

East students are gifted in non-academic areas as well. In East, breathtaking art pieces decorate the corridors created by students. Also, the spectacular sounds that fill the hallways are attributed to the skilled musicians at East. Let's not forget the uncountable number of trophies that line the cases in the halls.

No matter what a student's forte may be, he can achieve his best at East.

Kurt Wesner ('05) and Seth Pearl ('05) utilize a test tube and thermometer in Chemistry to perform an extensive experiment. Chemistry is one of the numerous science classes that Cherry Hill East offers. Students interested in the science field have a chance by performing weekly labs to become accustomed to the laboratory environment and equipment.
While sketching on a blank sheet of paper in art class, Joshua Wilcox ('04) spreads his creative mind onto the page using a pencil. Art electives allow students to enjoy different forms of expression using different mediums.

Physics, one of the most challenging courses Cherry Hill East offers. Physics students use protractors and rulers to fathom various quantities, such as velocity, force, and momentum.

Dennis Walter ('05) focuses on keeping straight edges and lines in drafting class as he works on his newest project. Drafting is one of the numerous drawing classes Cherry Hill East has. In drafting, students learn to sketch the technical aspects of designing complicated mechanical parts such as pumps.

Mrs. Muller assists her student, Rob Gorzynski ('04) with his work on the computer. East faculty's pedagogical skills flourish in the classroom. Mrs. Muller has received numerous amounts of recognition for her superior teaching, including an honorary Lifetime Achievement Award at DECA, and a New Jersey Marketing Education Award.

Mrs. Monsale, a Latin exchange teacher from Colombia, has had the chance to teach in a different cultural environment. She says, "What Cherry Hill East has taught me is to be open-minded to different ways to teach and learn. Mr. Carr guides Tim White ('05) in his English class, directing his attention to the lesson. Mr. Carr often wins the Humanities Teacher of the Year Award because of his extensive knowledge on the subjects that he teaches. His lessons expose students to a wide range of ideas related to English and the Humanities.
Honorable Teachers

Everyone at Cherry Hill East recognizes the faculty's hard work. Walking through the hallways, visitors are able to see the awards that the students have won over the years.

Not only are the students at Cherry Hill East exceptional, but the teachers are also honorable as well. Teachers give their time and effort into producing the world's next leaders. However, out of two hundred staff members at Cherry Hill East, there are a few teachers who have been specially recognized for their dedication to higher learning.

This past year, Mrs. Diane Muller, a business teacher, has won two awards for her arduous teaching business education. She was acclaimed the Marketing Business Teacher of the Year. Also, at the DECA State Conference, she received the Lifetime Achievement Award. Teachers such as Mrs. Muller create a lasting mark on Cherry Hill East's reputation.

Not only is it imperative to recognize the achievements of the students, but also it is imperative to give recognition to the teachers standing behind the students. Without honorable teachers, Cherry Hill East would not be as successful as it is.

Mrs. Hager organizes paperwork after teaching a class. In addition to teaching in class, Ms. Hager also assists in academics outside of class. She has been a New Jersey DECA State Officer Advisor for the past five years. As a advisor, she leads DECA officers, helping them campaign and assisting them with speeches.

There Is No "I" In "Team"

It's the old cliché, there is no "I" in the word "Team". This wise old saying applies especially well in terms of the way that students at East work in groups. Not only does working in groups create a strong individual, but it teaches students to work cooperatively as well. Thus, working in groups is an essential part of being successful as a student. Every single student finds himself or herself working on a group project whether in History, Math, Science, or English.

Working in groups has many benefits. Students learn to accept constructive criticism and to compromise with their peers. In any career, it is essential to work cooperatively with others. Preparing for the real world starts here at Cherry Hill High School East. Students can experience the triumph of working together as a unit. Once East students leave for college, they will have the experience of working cooperatively.

"I feel it's very important to work together. You have so many opportunities that way," said Eric Jeng ('05). Sometimes, the workload is too much for one person; working in a group helps relieve the stress. Not only can students help each other relieve stress, but they can develop leadership skills required to become a successful adult.

Aside from high school memories, life at Cherry Hill High School East teaches all students the essential skills of life.
Timothy Rinehart ('04) helps out classmate Caitlin DiPonziano ('04) with a physics problem. Teamwork and consideration for fellow students make the study of a challenging subject, such as physics, more enjoyable for everyone.

Often parallels are drawn in history between the past, present, and future. Staying true to the cliché, "History repeats itself," Y. Liu ("93) is able to apply what she learns in history class and to further analyze the current events.

Physics is a class that has many applications to life. Besides learning in the classroom, students apply what they have learned to daily life. In class, Li Zhe ("93) has the chance to apply the theories of physics to tangible phenomena in labs.

In English, Adam Cohen ("04) presents Midsummer in a new way. At first it appears to be music class, but students are using music to get in tune with the further meaning of the text. It is possible for students not only to understand the figurative language of the author through reading the text, but also understand the text through music.
Multi-disciplinary Learning Rocks East

While Cherry Hill East students’ days are divided into eight discrete periods, similar concepts are explored and redefined in seemingly unrelated classes. The first step a few years ago was the combination of World Civilizations and Freshman English classes. Students explore different ways through which different cultures define their world; utilizing historical information, literature written during, and various societies. For instance, a lesson on the feudal era of Japan is supplemented by a reading of 47 Ronin, a fictional account of Samurai who proved their honor during that trying time.

Other courses incorporate different types of learning by different means. Humanities courses have focused on allowing students to use their own talents to explore history and literature through enrichment projects. Likewise, science and math courses are starting to assign projects and writing assignments for the right-brained student. Thus, the mathematically driven student can do enrichment projects on the various sequences of color imagery in Moby Dick, while the artistic student can draw a detailed picture of cells under a microscope.

Multidisciplinary learning is the future of education, and East’s dedication to promoting this form of learning proves East to be a progressive institution.
In art class, Rebecca Chai ('07) and Jily Kuan ('07) explore their art talents by using watercolors to express the beautiful texture of seashells. The many electives offered at Cherry Hill East gives students a good chance to explore their personal interests and talents.

In three-dimensional art, Shweta Bharadwaj ('05) and Niyati Doshi ('07) use clay to create artistic sculptures. In three-dimensional art, students use a lot of different mediums such as clay, wire, paper-mâché, for example. Hence, students truly interested in pursuing art can determine which medium they like best.

Showing a true artist's focus by concentrating intently on her work, Amy Schwarzer ('07) carefully forms a beautiful clay sculpture in three-dimensional art, the only class of the day that lets her relax from analyzing to sculpure her personal interests and talents.

In her art elective, Sabella Sparano ('04) blends colors for a beautiful seashell painting. Watercolors allow artists to blend colors to any range of colors. Through the art electives, students learn to portray and capture the beauty of nature as many professional artists have done.

Finding the Prodigy In You

High school is not only the time to achieve academically, but also the time for students to find their creative side. Cherry Hill East offers many electives that students can utilize to find their non-academic forte. Cherry Hill East features large art, music, foreign language, theatre, and industrial arts departments, through which students may discover a love for ceramics, Latin, play-directing, woodwork, or whatnot.

Taking an elective at Cherry Hill East is similar to having a job. Students are required to complete projects by set deadlines. Also, taking electives allows students already interested in one of the elective departments to choose a specific field within the department. For example, a student interested in visual art may decide to major in photography.

By the end of a student's four year experience at Cherry Hill East, he will be on the path to finding the prodigy within himself.
On a bright sunny day, Julie Maggioncalda ('05), Lauren Minches ('05), and Ashley Kessler ('05) enjoy lunch out in the courtyard. The layout of Cherry Hill East was specifically designed in quads, giving students the chance to have lunch or class meetings outdoors. On a warm day, Cherry Hill East offers an alternative to mediocre classroom walls.

When the bell rings over two thousand and two hundred students are on the move. Despite the size of Cherry Hill East and the number of students, five minutes between classes is enough time to get from one room to another. Often, students have enough time to chat with a friend along the way.
Whatever Floats Your Boat

Everyone has it; some know it, and others don’t, but either way, stress is a major factor of every student’s life. Although it may be unavoidable, there are plenty of ways to lessen the load and reducing this immense strain that many students have because of school can have a positive impact.

There are a few things that East can do to help students within the school, and although they may not seem like much, they really do help student life.

Friends are probably the basis of stress relief, for a student can confide in a friend any problems he may have and also just have a good time; it is surprising how helpful a good laugh can be once in a while.

Gym periods, study halls, lunches, and hall time are all things that people take for granted, but they are the highlight of the day for many students. Any way that the school can integrate fun with academics is an excellent way to alleviate the pervasive stress that harms students. After school activities are important for getting together with friends and doing something constructive at the same time. Another option is group projects; although many students have difficulty coordinating schedules, it is a great learning tool.

Too many over-worked students become "burned-out" after some time of constant work and lack of sleep, and this can have drastic effects on a student’s performance in school.

Thus, it is important for students to reevaluate their schedule and try to incorporate some time for themselves, for even if it seems like a waste of time, it will pay off in the long-run.

In gym class, David Lenkey (‘04) and Jen DaCena (‘04) play a game of ping-pong. Ping-pong is a favorite during gym classes, permitting students the chance to work on their motor skills. Students have fun so much fun competing each other, they are reluctant to go to their next class.

Rachel Shin (‘04), Annie An (‘06), and Grace Min (‘07) use study hall to take a break from class to relieve stress. Study hall in the cafeteria gives students a chance to catch-up on group. It also allows students some stress-free time away from the academic rigors of the classroom.

Jen Onua ('97) uses a calculator to help her achieve advanced standards. Instead of conventionally taking notes, students use technology to help them solve problems. Many times, new technology saves the students time, while allowing them to do further extrapolation and interpolation of data.

Textbooks are the ultimate resource for all students. Kathy Cornforth ('84) reads from the textbook to find useful answers. Textbooks help the students get information, but more importantly, textbooks help students pick out important information when preparing for tests or taking notes.

Moses Park ('05) carefully sorts flies in Biology III. Mr. Robino makes sure that students such as Moses correctly sort flies by sex and trait. This process takes a lot of time and a lot of concentration; for even a small mistake could distort Moses' data. Moses' observations will contribute to one of the many difficult labs that he will perform in this class.

Standards, standards, and more standards... Why do teachers stress them so often? Students see standards posted in big bold letters all over the school, and the numbers of the standards are ingrained in student's heads, but what is the true purpose of standards? Without knowing it, students use standards everyday in class and out of class. Cherry Hill East supplies many technological appliances for students to use in a variety of subjects. Without teachers stressing the standards every second of the day, students apply them in every thing that they do in class. CH 1.22 The student uses various information sources, including those of technological advances, to accomplish specific tasks. Also, when students do group work, they use cooperative skills mentioned in the standards list. Constructive criticism, cooperation, and collaboration are practiced by students weekly in group work projects. CH 1.15 The student works well with others who are "different" and does so in diverse situations. Thus, standards simply restate the life skills taught at Cherry Hill East.
As Jonathan Wang ('07) takes notes in class, he must comprehend the material. Students at Cherry Hill East are tested often to keep up their studying habits. Often in the more rigorous classes, students have tests every week, so students must attentively take notes and carefully comprehend all the material.

Rashad Norzad ('07) takes notes as he listens attentively in his social studies class. Paying attention in rigorous history classes is a crucial part of learning the material. Students must concentrate on the material to earn a good grade on challenging tests and document based questions.

In class, Josh Sosnin ('05) completes a worksheet for class. Often the extra materials that teachers hand out help prepare students for tests. Although a worksheet may seem like busy work, the worksheet should be treated as a test because the questions often test the student’s knowledge of the material being studied.

Brad Silviaier ('05) blissfully listens to his teacher’s lecture. In class, Brad enjoys learning topics that he enjoys. Often, students comprehend information better when it keeps their interest. Thus, teachers use different teaching methods to ensure that students fully comprehend all the material before a test.

Measuring Up

At Cherry Hill East, teachers measure a student's knowledge of a subject primarily with tests.

From students taking advanced placement courses to students taking electives, all study intensely to make sure they know their material. But what makes it all worth studying?

Although tests may seem as a nuisance to many students, they are simply a hill that students must pass. Many times, students clear their hurdles easily because they work hard.

Especially at Cherry Hill East, students receive many benefits from taking tests. Taking tests are a measure of their knowledge; therefore, students have a chance to get high marks in any class.

Also, students at Cherry Hill East have the chance to take early college-level tests. The plethora of advanced placement courses offered at Cherry Hill East gives students a chance to test themselves before they enter the college atmosphere. Also, taking a college-level course in a high school setting is much more difficult and stressful than taking the course later on in college, but many students at Cherry Hill East take the college-level courses, yearning for a challenge.

In the end, tests may seem to be pointless, but they truly do measure the knowledge of a student. For all students who work hard and receive high marks on their grades, measuring up to standards at Cherry Hill East feels very rewarding as they put in the effort.

Taking a test is concentrated work. Intently, Joe Oliver ('06) focuses on achieving a high grade. Since students study as hard, a test merely tests the depth of a student's understanding.

Not only do students take notes in class, often, notes are taken on the computer. Stephanie Scarpita ('07) uses the computer to study. Nowadays, computers give students a chance to neatly organize their notes and prepare for tests. Also, students often use private chat rooms to test each other and prepare each other.

For the majority of students at Cherry Hill East, the next chapter in their lives is college. SAT’s, AP, and GPA are acronyms swirling in the minds of seniors, juniors, and even sophomores and freshmen. The next chapter for students leaving Cherry Hill East marks the beginning of becoming an adult with a career. Some students have prepared for days, months, and years for the end of March, when college acceptances arrive in their mailbox.

During the course of students’ careers at East, they encounter a wide range of opportunities to prepare themselves, both for acceptances into colleges and for life after high school. These opportunities include a plethora of subjects to suit each individual student’s interests and a variety of difficulty levels to suit each student’s abilities. Competitive students attempt to enroll in the most difficult classes while achieving the highest grades at the same time. They participate actively in class discussions, trying to procure positive recommendations from teachers.

With college always looming in the background, students work their hardest to prepare an impressive application when fall of senior year rolls around.
In business class, Jeff Stomel ('94), Leigh McCurdy ('96), and Paul Bressler ('94) use computers to compile information and type their reports. The business department at Cherry Hill East offers a vast array of classes for students to choose from. From economics to marketing, students can take an in-depth look at the operations of any business. Truly, Cherry Hill East offers many options for the future leaders.

Between periods, Alex Busch ('94) mounts the stairs hauling a heavy load of books. Like the ladder of success, East's stairways often seem insurmountable, but eventually, one climbs to the top. Slowly but surely, students here at East pull themselves up the metaphorical ladder, winding up in the halls of higher learning.

Listening attentively in class, Andrew Wysong ('94) knows that he must study hard to do well in school. Copying copious notes is one skill that successful students must master. As a senior, Wysong ('94) has grown accustomed to the workload at East, which will prepare him for the junior one in college.

Chemistry is a good example of a class where students must practice using caution handling dangerous chemicals. While performing a lab, Eric Jerg ('05) and Jeremy Chin ('05) use a toothpick to stir chemicals. Eric must be careful not to transfer the contents from one portion of the glass dish into another portion, because each section has a different concentration of the mixed chemicals.
Getting Down and Dirty

Sometimes school activities require a student's complete attention, and in the process the student may get dirty but in the end, the result makes it all worthwhile.

Especially in electives, students have a chance to use dangerous tools and materials. With careful instruction from the teacher, students always stay safe.

In three-dimensional art class students sometimes break tiles with a hammer or use dangerous equipment.

In three-dimensional art, Niyati Desai ('06) uses a power drill to drill a hole into a special notebook that she made in class. Desai concentrates intensely, so that she does not hurt herself with the power tool.

Whatever the project, the teachers advise the students to use safety equipment and the teachers always go over the correct instructions on how to use the materials in a safe manner.

In academic classes, students also learn the rules of safe equipment use and material handling. For example, in the chemistry classes, students are required to answer a questionnaire on lab safety and get it signed by their guardian.

Although some school activities require students to get down and dirty, students always do it in a safe and appropriate manner.
Taking the Initiative

Although many students may not realize it, after four years of a successful high school career at Cherry Hill High School East, they are prepared to take initiative in their lives. From maneuvering around Cherry Hill High School East as freshmen to taking advanced placement courses, students develop responsibility and become independently strong individuals.

Starting out at Cherry Hill High School East is a difficult task, but students quickly learn to adjust to the academic atmosphere of the school, as Ariel Katz ('96) and Lexi Brezler ('96) have done. In the beginning many freshmen use a map of the school, but as sophomores many students get around the school with ease.

Teachers have taught students study skills until high school, but as the students become older, teachers expect students to read the textbook on their own, do practice problems on their own time, and ask questions about anything that they do not understand.

Also, students must learn to manage their time by planning ahead. In order to achieve higher standards, students must prioritize their life, so that they do not miss any opportunities.

By the time a student is a senior, he will have had practice taking control of his own life in a high school setting.
As always, Roshni Joshi ('04) and Anna Ly ('04) are devoted to becoming independent individuals. Throughout his journey at Cherry Hill High School East, a student develops independence. By the time a student is ready to leave for college, he is well on his way to becoming a responsible adult.

Reading is a large part of almost every class offered at Cherry Hill High School East. As students gain more experience in high school, teachers expect students to follow along with the material taught in class by doing independent reading.

Efficiently using his time, Daniel Lee ('04) edits his essay while he has access to a computer. Instead of wasting his time, his four years of high school experience have taught him to take advantage of the time allotted to him by his teachers.

Starting out at Cherry Hill High School East may seem intimidating, but with enthusiasm, students can take control of their high school career as Jonathan Wang ('07) has done. The hard work and determination that a student devotes to his high school career is rewarded with the immeasurable reward of knowledge.

GOING ABOVE AND BEYOND

Not only are students at Cherry Hill High School East high academic achievers, but also they go above and beyond limits set by themselves and others. Walking through classrooms, students, faculty, parents, and visitors can admire the hardwork of the students.

With a healthy cooperation between the opportunities that the teachers provide at Cherry Hill High School East and the student’s never-ending determination, it is no surprise that Cherry Hill High School East is a National Blue Ribbon School. In order to finish work, students sometimes stay after school until most of the teachers are gone.

Hence, the achievements of the students at Cherry Hill High School East are known not only by members of the school, any visitor to Cherry Hill High School East can see why the students, faculty, and parents are so proud by looking at the many awards on display.

Furthermore, students at Cherry Hill High School East have really proved their dedication to achievement by achieving high standards in other extracurricular activities.

For example, Cherry Hill High School East is home to many of the state’s top athletes. Just this past year the school had high rankings in tennis and swimming.

Also, Cherry Hill High School East has earned many accolades for the school’s publications such as the yearbook, Eidolon, and newspaper, Eastside.

Thus, it is impossible to label just one way that students at Cherry Hill High School East go above and beyond the standards. To the students at Cherry Hill High School East, the sky is the limit.

In biology, Moses Park (’15) and Ben Chung (’16) work industriously. As students of one of the toughest courses offered at Cherry Hill High School East, Park and Chung must not only work hard paying attention in class, completing homework assignments, and studying for tests, but also they must study everyday and diligently read the textbook in order to keep up with the fast-paced course.

Making sure that he understands all of the material taught in class, Chung Yen Wo (’16) asks Mr. Robino a question. Accuracy Mr. Robino addresses all of Wo’s concerns. Teachers are always standing by their students to help them reach above and beyond standards.
In biology, Jillian Finkelstein ('05) and Katlin Mignella ('05) work together to test their knowledge. Using the textbook as a useful source, they reach higher levels of learning. Often the practical applications offered in textbooks allow students to apply the material taught in class to the students' daily lives.

Using one of the many new computers in the math lab, Katherine Brainin ('04) takes advantage of the time that teachers give her to further extrapolate her data. All of Cherry Hill High School East's students have access to the vast technological resources. With advanced technology, students are able to experiment with data from a lab.

Practice Makes Perfect

Smiling and moving in rhythm, Julia Kurtz ('05), Angel An ('05), and Marlon Peralta ('05) dance their part as they entertain the crowd at a football game. Cheerleaders act as emotional and uplifting support for the players and fans with their ever-smiling faces and cheerful attitude regardless of what the scoreboard says.

Angela Miller ('05) mightyly bumps the ball back to the opposition. In many cases, the success of a volleyball player lies in her concentration and accuracy.

Laura Davis ('04) and Brandi Mosko ('05) balance with the support of their teammates below. Repetition and practice make such stunts possible.

Pacing himself in a grueling race, Brian Deppa ('06) looks forward to the finish line. Training and endurance are key to distance runners as they compete in 3.1 mile races on a regular basis. With this in mind, they often practice at various speeds and distances in preparation for a meet.

As Brandi Mosko ('05) falls into the basket catch of her teammates below, she relies on them to cushion her landing. Trust is one of the most significant elements in cheerleading, as each girl must trust that her teammates will secure her position.
Daw Londres ('04) sticks with the pack as he makes his way through the course. Londres' hard work and dedication has paid off as he was selected for First Team All Conference this season. This distinction and honor is only awarded to the best and most accomplished runners.

With excitement and enthusiasm, Jill Steinbrecher ('04) leads her team in a cheer. Due to the competitive nature of the cheerleading squad at East, all cheerleaders must be experienced in both gymnastics and cheering.

Boys Cross Country: First Team All Conference: Adam Colle, Dave Londres, Brad Silnutzer.

Girls Volleyball: First Team All Conference: Samantha Foss, Katie Gold, Marcie Polite. All South Jersey and State Senior All Stars: Katie Gold and Marci Polite. All South Jersey Player of the Year: Samantha Foss.

Varsity Cheerleading: Mimi Agisim, Angel An, Nicole Angelica, Maru Arai, Noel Brown, Laura Davis-Captain, Danielle Dittrich. Michael Duffy, Brittany Ensign, Ben Finkel, Taia Halperin, Tina Hopkins, Samantha Hutzi, Lisa Korostowski-Captain, Julia Kurtz, Julia Lettieri, Stephanie Libes, Alex LaGrossa, Froza Mercado, Ian Mercado, Brandi Mosko, Marlon Peralta, Sarah Spillane, Jill Steinbrecher-Captain, Julia Wacura-Captain, Samantha Weicker.
Under Pressure

Winding up for the kick, Dana DiBruno ('04) aims to score. Scoring has been one of DiBruno's forte as a soccer player as she scored her 54th career goal at East. Her agility and speed have been great assets to the soccer team.

The East football team lines up along the offensive line to prepare to drive down-field. The Cougars pounded blood, sweat, tears, and heart into every offensive play throughout the year.

Steven Markoe ('04) rockets a pass down the center of the field, threading the needle through the opposing defenders. Markoe led the team all season as the Cougar's steady quarterback. The accuracy of the quarterback is essential to the team's plays.

Shana Herman ('04) fights off an opponent as she vies for the best position to retrieve the ball from her teammate. Being aggressive and commanding on the field are two of the traits that have distinguished Herman and earned her the First Team All Conference award.

Aggressively in pursuit of the nearest opponent, Lauren Scarpato ('04) charges to stay competitive in a heated race. Being a leader both emotionally and on the racecourses, Scarpato has led her team to a successful season.

Ashley Gill ('06) uses quick motions of the feet to maneuver around the opponent. Agility is key to a team member's contribution to the team, as proper handling of the ball will score goals.

Girls Soccer: First Team All Conference: Danamarie DiBruno, Shana Herman. Second Team All Conference: Jaclyn Greenstein, Jessica Young.

Football: First Team All Conference: Sean Satchell, Gamal Abiona. Second Team All Conference: Al Valentino, Anthony Prescott, Justin Bonitatis, Justin Matthews. First Team Group 4: Sean Satchell.

Girls Cross Country: First Team All Conference: Dale Burton.
Second Team All Conference: Lauren Scarpato. All Group 4 Honors: Dale Burton.

Girls Cross-Country: Dale Burton, Melissa Friend, Laura Herron, Alexandra Hill, Beverly Hon, Leigh McCurdy, Stephanie Mikitishe, Holly Moeller, Crystallann Moreno, Laura Neff, Lauren Scarpato, Ashley Singer, Rebecca Sohel, Sunaina Yarlagadda, Jamie Zucker.
Christina Contrafatto ('04) follows her serve through to ensure proper execution and placement of the ball on the opposing side of the court. Successful tennis players are able to anticipate the return of the ball. Thus, agility and quick thinking are key.

Daniel Wu ('04) ensures that the ball remains out of the net as he prevents the opposition from scoring a crucial goal. Although not the goalie, Wu is willing to extend help to his teammates in order to secure a victory for the Cougars.

Leaping to control the ball, Brittney Hoffman ('05) gains her composure before passing to a teammate. Control of the ball and passing are key elements to a successful team, as all must work together to achieve the goal of victory.

Daryl Wander ('04) controls the ball as she makes her way down the field. Being a senior, Wander has become accustomed to her position on the team and her leadership role. Communication is key as the team is spread throughout the field.

Boys Soccer
- First Team All Conference: Daniel Wu.
- Second Team All Conference: Jack Keyes, Paul Caracciolo, Matthew Sterling, Sean Borkowski.

Field Hockey
- First Team All Conference: Amanda Cucinotti.
- Second Team All Conference: Marissa Sweeney, Brittney Hoffman, Allison Segal.
- All South Jersey: Goalie: Amanda Cucinotti.

Girls Tennis
- All Conference: Jackie Herb- 1st singles, Emily Herb- 2nd singles, Christina Contrafatto- 3rd singles, Charlotte Nagelberg and Leanne Silverman- 1st doubles, Joelle Koplin and Ashley Peretz- 2nd doubles.
Lauren Guida ('04) steps up as she makes her way down the field. Being aggressive and commanding on the field has propelled Guida to make split-second decisions for the benefit of her team.

Paul Caracciolo ('04) watches his opponent as he quickly glides past the defensive man. Through dedication and hard work, Caracciolo and his teammates have learned how to dazzle their opponent with their footwork and agility.

Dan Hamill ('04) snatches the ball in his tiger-like grip to prevent the other team from scoring a goal. Whenever the ball seems to get past the defense, Hamill always seems to be there to save the day.

Watching fiercely for the return, Charlotte Nagelberg ('04) braces herself for her next move. The success of the tennis team this year was dependent on the leadership and endurance of the members. Their perseverance has truly shone through.

Girls Tennis: Christina Contrafatto, Emily Herb, Jacqueline Herb, Jamie Hessert, Joelle Koplin, Kate Malamut, Charlotte Nagelberg, Ashley Peretz, Remy Ravitz, Brooke Rothman, Leanne Silverman, Aimee Stahl.

To Meet, To Compete, To Defeat

Vasilios Kalovrouziotis ('05), stands his ground against an opponent. His steady, concrete stance keeps him more stable than his adversary.

Drive and determination guarantee a win as Brett Robbins ('05) prepares for another forceful stroke. Breath control and support are key to successful swimming.

Boys' Swimming: Chad Armstrong, Benjamin Birnbaum, Andrew Breen, Justin Breen, Seth Braggar, Collin Canfield, Davis Canfield, Allen Chan, Anthony Ciccotelli, Justin Coyle, Erik D'Esteone, Daniel Dresler, Eric Dresler, Jonathan Goldman, Zhen Gong, Jason Huber, Julian Katz, Gregory Kayser, David Keiffer, Albert Keiffer, Michael Keiffer, Anthony Kim, Stefan Knecht, Alyson Kouch, Sarah Mandes, Neil Manas, Dan Nagelberg, Zachary Osheroff, Graham Parker, Sarah Parker, Raman Ravindran, Evan Richter, Brett Robbins, Daniel Roth, Timothy Rowe, Jeffrey Rusignolo, Michael Scott, James Smith, Matthew Tannerbaum, Freddy Wang, Quinn Weisman, Sean Yellin

In a demonstration of teamwork, Jennifer Kelly ('07), Julie Reizes ('04), Alison Heiman ('07), and Amanda Boye ('07) move in perfect unison. Students find dancing on a team to be fulfilling, both physically and spiritually. With the Dance Team, students have found an outlet for their talent that also enables them to satisfy their competitive urges.

With the butterfly form, Raman Ravindran ('04) uses all his might to out-swim the opponent. Perfection of its form is key to the success of the swimmer.

Using all of his force, Nick Mitchell ('04) pins his opponent. Focusing strength and strategy, a wrestler must foresee the movements of his opponent in order to gain control of the match.

Boys' Wrestling: 2nd District: Justin Bonitatis, 3rd District: Mike Lussier, 4th District: Jesse Cohen, Nick Mitchell
Boys' Swimming: South Jersey Public A Title

Girl Swimming: State Qualifiers: Laurel Johnson, Lindsay Grimes, Morgan Ley, Sami Schlachterman.

Lauren Jakubowicz ('04) breaks the rhythm of her stroke to steal a quick breath. In doing so, she gains an added momentum that will pull her to victory.

Matt Lewis ('04) smiles with satisfaction as he watches his ball soar down the lane. Bowlers' moods can shift often during a game as a good frame could bring momentum for a team.

Talia Halperin ('05) cheers with spunk. The cheerleading squad performs their routines during halftime in order to ensure a successful competition.

Cehara Wellington ('05) checks her position with the basket as an opponent fiercely blocks her view. Being constantly aware of positioning with the basket and communicating with teammates are key to scoring.
Jeremy Kaminer ('06) comes to a stop as he squares to the basket. Having control of one's body is key to an accurate shot. In basketball, players develop hand-eye coordination as well as strength and speed.

Ronit Chaudhuri ('04) sprints to the finish as he prepares to pass the baton to his teammate. Relay teams present the need for teamwork in track, as members are dependent on each other for overall success.

With pace and purpose, Brian Young ('05) dashes to the basket after whizzing past his opponent. Such acts of agility and coordination are what bring success and victory to the team and keeping team goals in mind, each player makes sure to contribute his share.
Having A Ball

The ball looms over the basket as the players watch in anticipation. Using quick reflexes, players will grab the ball as soon as it descends so that they can score a point for the team.

Christine Duncombe ('04) strikes a pose as she watches her ball fly down the lane. Proper formation and stance help a bowler to focus and score.

Ashley Peretz ('06) leaps over the hurdle in a closely contested race. Hurdlers must be extremely agile and accurate on each jump.

The girls' track and field team warms up before a meet. Even though not all are runners, warming up muscles is essential.
David Choi ('05) swings out of valley to return the ball to the green. Golfers must keep their cool, even in the most adverse situations.

Jeff Yaffa ('04) evaluates the position of the ball and contemplates his swing. Staying calm and focused will ensure victory.

Brett Strauss ('06) sends the ball across the court in a display of strength and power. The teamwork exhibited by the tennis team has consistently earned them championships and awards.
Bobby Brunke ('05) hoists the javelin with remarkable strength. Developing proper technique is both difficult and challenging.

Lauren Guida ('04) retrieves the ball in the infield, before throwing for a play. Arm strength and accuracy are what fuel wins for the team.

Steven Woodland ('06) attempts to clear the bar. Pole-vaulters must have complete command over their body as one stray move can result in defeat.
Katie Gold ('04) bends down to retrieve the ball. Being agile is key to the outfield position as one must be ready to move at any second.

Shielding the goal, Nana Wilmot ('04) gets another save. Being aggressive and attentive helps the goalie to be aware of all situations on the field.

Practicing his skills, Dan Chung ('04) watches as he perfects his follow through. Before participating in a match, each team member practices the various hits to ensure proper execution.

With a leap and a bump, Chris DiBartolomaro ('05) spikes the ball to the opposition. Having powerful, tall players, the boys' volleyball team is able to return the ball with ease.

Lining up before the pitch, Chris Gibson ('04) prepares for a successful time at bat. Keeping concentration and coordination are key.

Teamwork proves essential as Fred Yang ('05) aids Ben Chung ('06) in a pass. In an effort to always be prepared, this type of attack ensures that at least one member will be ready to bump the ball to the opposition.

With an opponent sliding into second base, Alex Ruderman ('05) prepares for the double play as he throws the ball to first base. In doing so, Ruderman is furthering the success of the team.

"AFTER SILENCE, THAT WHICH COMES NEAREST TO EXPRESSING THE INEXPRESSIBLE IS MUSIC."

-ALDOUS HUXLEY

Performing Arts

2004
Looking over their audition music, Bryan Gross ('07) and Tim Rinehart ('04) practice during Vocal Workshop, the entry level choir. All students must take Vocal Workshop before being admitted to one of the upper level choirs. They audition in the spring to be placed in a choir for the following year.

Wearing their gorgeous red robes, Alex Chan ('07), Rick Chang ('06), and Harrison Bennett ('07) perform during the Fall Preview Concert. To ensure a good performance, every member of the choir must work together. Each singer must know their part and listen to the other voice parts in order to create the best possible sound.

How Can I Keep From Singing?

Do re mi fa so and so on grace the halls of D-wing on the daily basis. It is not only the instrumental groups, but the vocal groups as well that preside over this hallway. Freshmen, among others, begin in Vocal Workshop where they are taught the basics of vocal music. They learn how to read music, establish keys, and learn basic rhythmic patterns. From here, they progress into any of the three senior auditioned groups; Concert Choir, Chansons, and East Singers. These choirs work on complicated choral pieces that involve several different voice parts singing simultaneously, as well as complex rhythms and intonations. There is a wide repertoire of songs, ranging from gospel to opera to pop.

"I love the way we learn classical choral works and spiritual hymns all at the same time," said Shirley Fan ('05).

The choirs then perform in several concerts throughout the year. There is the Fall Preview Concert, the Winter Concert, Opera Night, and finally the Spring Concert. On occasion, some of the senior choirs give performances at the middle schools. Almost every year, the senior choirs are invited to attend a choral festival where they compete against other choirs from around the country. They have taken top prizes over the past few years. They also get the opportunity to meet choral directors and artists where they learn where and how to improve. It is an insightful and fun experience for both those who intend to make vocal music a profession as well as those who just love to sing.

Feeling the music, Ms. Cindy Ferguson conducts Chansons. The conductor is possibly the most important part of any musical ensemble. She keeps the rhythm for the group, while simultaneously giving entrances and breaks. Without the help of the conductor, the choir would be a miscellaneous blob of notes and key signatures.

Gathering around the piano, the Chansons alts convene for a rotating lesson. These lessons take place during the school day, during a period other than the choir’s regular period. They provide valuable rehearsal time in which students can work on music with just their section.

How Can I Keep From Singing?
Banding Together

The conductor raises his baton and the audience becomes silent. The drums begin a low rumble while the other instruments prepare for their entrances. A few violins and flutes begin, the rest of the instruments follow, making their sounds blend. Together, they recreate classical masterpieces. These beautiful melodies can be heard daily, wafting out of the band and orchestra room in D-wing. Though to some this hallway is terrifying, to many others it is a haven. During the school day, it is home to the school's instrumental groups including Orchestra, Wind Ensemble, Symphonic Band, Freshman Wind Ensemble. Students find these groups as an excellent way to express themselves and escape from daily school life.

"I enjoy expressing myself and my appreciation for music in band by bringing the music to life," said Stacy Silberman ('04), a clarinet player for the Wind Ensemble.

Playing together in these groups also brings students together and many good friendships are formed.

"Besides the great music that we get to play, the friendships we make within orchestra make it even better," said Enoch Hsieh ('04), a viola player in the Orchestra.

Taking this course allows students to learn music theory from the pieces they play in class. They are exposed to compositions from many time periods and cultures. One day it may be Benjamin Britten and the next day Beethoven. This exposure to so many aspects of music gives students a life-long connection to music, whether or not they choose to pursue it later in life.

Said Hsieh, "East's music department has helped me further my interest in music making it a permanent part of my life."

Rehearsing with Symphonic Band, Anthony Menta ('05), plays his French horn while simultaneously glancing at his sheet music. In addition to looking at his music, he must also watch the conductor for entrances and tempo. Being in sync with the conductor is an imperative part of successfully producing a good performance out of the band.

Exerting his magnificent powers, Mr. Bruce Yurko gives a preparatory breath to the band. The conductor is the most important part of a musical ensemble. Though there are many diverse parts of a band or orchestra, he is the one that must hold them together. With his mustache flying through the air and baton waving, he is a magnificent sight to behold.

FRESHMAN WIND ENSEMBLE: Andrew Baeckstrom, Harrison Bennett, Jonathan Branfman, Seth Breggar, Hallie Brettler, Rebecca Cha, Michael Chorney, Bryant Chung, Nicole DeAngelis, Jeffery Deppa, Carolyn Desrochers, Eric Dressler, Dan Fox, Karyn Goldberg, Jonathan Goldstein, Joshua Henderson, Cory Honeyman, Emily Kelly, Sarah Kline, Spencer Lieberson, Isaac Miller, Grace Min, Daniel Neuner, Dips Patel, Christopher Powers, Max Pressman, Evan Richter, Alex Roda, Rachel Smith, Christopher Walton, Ginny Yergler, Timothy Keleher (Conductor)

SYMPHONIC BAND: Meryl Abag, Nicholas Acciani, Annie An, Maru Arai, Michael Berkowitz, Vikram Bhargava, Javier Bolanos, James Boguski, Tim Boyle, Joe Brach, Pam Chang, Rebecca Chen, Grace Cho, Irene Chung, Chris Cicero, Norianna Cohen, Christina Contrafatta, Amanda Cucinotti, Brian Deppa, Steven Dinsmore, Richard Dominissac, Daniel Dressler, Julie Druker, Aaron Dvornin, Peter Efratiadis, Ross Fishbein, Salvatore Galati, Mattea Goldstein, Zhen Gong, Jamie Herron, Alexandra Hill, Ilana Holland, Andrew Hurwitz, Joseph Ibar, Andrew Kendus, Jeff King, Eugene Ko, Brian Lefferty, David Lampro, John Lee, Adam Lieberman, Kristen Little, Anthony Menta, Melissa Mijares, Daniel Min, Naoki Muhlbeg, Lauren Noce, Adam Nover, Soo-Jin Paik, Derek Podowitz, Jake Pollack, Torah Ross, Todd Schefflin, Matt Schorr, Zachary Seidman, Kunal Sharma, Todd Sharofsky, Michael Sharp, Christian Shelmire, Adi Shmuel, Benny Silverman, Julie Sobota, Caryn Steinbrecher, Lindsay Stone, Rullian, Takanashi, Max Tannenbaum, Nicole Wallace, Elizabeth Wasik, Matthew Weiler, Margie Welch, Ilana Wilson
Closely monitoring their breathing, Vipul Kumar ’05 and Philip Blackmer ’05 play their alto saxophones. Breath-control is an integral part to playing wind instruments as well as brass instruments. As with all skills, this is one that improves over time and also distinguishes advanced players from novices.

Warming up on his violin, Patrick Ho ’04 prepares for the Winter Concert. All performers generally require some degree of warming up to produce the best quality sound. “Before every concert, I need to prepare on my own as well as with the whole group, in order to feel that I am ready,” said Ho.

Practicing his part before a concert, Tim Pimmott ’05, waits in the band room for his turn to perform. Primarily a trombonist, Pimmott learned to play the baritone through the East music department. Many other students have also taken advantage of the department to learn new instruments.

Carefully watching Mr. Yurko, Jennifer Shippin ’04 and Rulani Takanashi ’04, play the flute and piccolo respectively in the Wind Ensemble. These higher register woodwind instruments provide a unique sound to the band. That brass and percussion instruments are unable to do. “The flute is sort of like the frosting on a wedding cake because it pieces through and it is used to create delicate, shining designs,” said Shippin.

Keeping his eye on the conductor, Phil Schuler ’06 patiently waits for his cue in the treble. Percussion instruments such as the chimes are not necessary in every piece. However, when they are called for, they can provide a dramatic effect in the piece. Such special effects are often needed in many Wind Ensemble selections.

Conducted by Ms. Cindy Ferguson, Celebrations meets after school every Tuesday, ready for a solid hour and a half of bellringing. The nature of this unique ensemble allows the performers to use a wide range of bells as well as special percussion elements such as mallets, to create different sounds.

Casual Harmony: Seth Alamar, Jeremy Bannett, Joe Bucci, Paul Caracciolo, Dan Chung, Ben Gross (officer), Ben Kukains, Ivan Mamuyac, Tim Rinehart, Andrew Romen, Adam Sagot, Philip Spechler, Joshua Spechler (officer), Marc Tadeja

Ross ('04), and Miles Jackson ('05) perform with Madrigals, a group that requires the performers to sing and dress in the manner of Renaissance times. Each member must not only concentrate on the music, but also actively engage with the audience. During the year, Madrigals participate in festivals and fairs around the area, often bringing back superior ratings.

Stacy Silberman ('04), a member of the Belles of East, smiles out at the audience while singing holiday favorites during the winter season concerts. "Being in Belles gives me the chance to express my passion for singing, and it's exciting to perform for different audiences," said Silberman. Each winter, along with the other small groups, the Belles sing for the elementary schools in the districts.

Rissmiller ('05) sing the popular ballad, "The Rose," arranged especially for hand bell choir. All music performed by Belles has been arranged by a current or former member. Although it seems easy and effortless, in addition to the voice parts, each member must memorize where and when to play her bells. Every voice and bell is crucial to the quality of the performance.
I SING THE BODY ELECTRIC

In the middle of the various vocal concerts at East, there is frenzy in D-wing as a group of students rushes to change out of choir dresses and suits. After ten minutes, an entirely new set of people emerges. Students dressed in Renaissance costumes made of velvet and brocade, periwinkle dresses, and tweed coats, ties and jeans, come out and quickly get into their formations. These are the members of the small groups, Madrigals, Belles, Celebrations, and Casual Harmony. The Madrigals represent the Renaissance era in both music and costume. They sing select pieces that are composed during the Renaissance. The Belles are a group of girls who sing and accompany themselves on hand bells. Casual Harmony is a group of young men who perform everything from ballads to pop tunes. These men are known for their liveliness and comical performances, paired with excellent musicianship. Many mornings at East, Casual Harmony can be heard delivering birthday and special occasion telegrams to students in homeroom. Celebrations is a group of traditional hand bell players that performs bell arrangements from classical music to show tunes.

The small groups are made up of a select group of singers who audition to be members. Being a member requires a great deal of commitment, involving learning extra music, staying after school for practice, and giving extra performances. Not only do the students perform in East concerts, but they are also often requested to perform at various locations in the area. One of the most memorable performances is the elementary school tour during the holiday season, where the singing small groups go from school to school performing for the children. They also carol in historic Haddonfield during the holidays. They can also be found caroling in the hallways at East during certain events.

One of the most popular vocal ensembles, Casual Harmony delights audiences with an extensive repertoire of pop tunes, ballads, and even rock, always presented with their signature comical style. Here, Ben Gross ('04) croons "Breakfast at Tiffany's," one of the group's most popular requests.

Seated in a different arrangement, Madrigal members, Shirley Fan ('05), Viviana Pabon ('04), and Amber Shernoff ('05) sing a traditional French song about gossiping housewives. Along with the usual period music, the Madrigal repertoire often consists of humorous and comical selections. A varied program provides interest and contrast to an ensemble's performance.

SAXPHONE QUARTET: Mike Ahn, Jackie Gerber, Melissa Mack, Ian O’Beirne

CHAMBER WINDS: David Baumgarten, Andrew Bleaken, Tasia Firestein, Alexandra Hill, Fay Hughes, Kavita Pandit, Jennifer Shipon, Bruce Yurko (Conductor)

BRASS ENSEMBLE: Greg Adcock, Andrew Bleaken, Scott Herman, Dan Herron, Jason Huber, Evan Klein, Dan Kober, Steven Kramer, Josh Levinson, Beth Martino, Tim Plimpton, Jason Reed, Aaron Rivkin, Abbey Teller, Bruce Yurko (Conductor)

Groovin' to the jazz beats, Shan Mack ('06) pounds out rhythms on her drum set with the Jazz Standards group. Jazz Standards is a small select group of musicians who rehearse during the week. When there is such a small group, every member is extremely important. They mostly improve and use their sheet music only as a guide.
It Don't Mean A Thing If It Ain't Got That Swing

The reincarnation of Duke Ellington probably is not roaming D-wing. However, there are some students who try to make the old jazzmeister come alive. The East Jazz Band is one of the most revered in the area. They have won multiple awards, including the elite 2003 Cavalcade of Bands Jazz Championship. In addition to the jazz band, there is the Jazz Standards Band. This group consists of the creme de la creme of the students involved with the jazz program. It is almost as selective as Harvard admissions officers on a lonely Thursday in Cambridge. The other small ensembles are just as elite. Chamber Winds, Brass Ensemble, and Saxophone Quartet both consist of a small number of highly talented students. Being selected to be in these groups is an honor and requires much dedication both to the music department and the group itself. For the music students who are just looking to have a good old jazzy time, there is Lab Band. This group rehearses Wednesdays after school and consists of many students who want to learn to play jazz, or play an atypical jazz instrument. Contrary to popular belief, it is almost possible to swing on a bassoon. Lab Band opens up jazz-centered opportunities for all. So maybe Ellington incarnate is lurking in the back corner of the band room or maybe even in the cello closet.

Learning some new music, Mark Greenfield ('06) and the rest of Jazz Band rehearse on a Thursday afternoon. Though it requires a great deal of dedication, many students find it worthwhile. Said Ian O'Beirne ('04), "Jazz Band is definitely the best commitment I've made at East. It is a group of top-notch musicians coming together to bring the music to a really professional level. It's a lot of fun, but only when we're also putting in the hard work."

Playing their alto and soprano saxophone respectively, Mike Ahn ('04) and Ian O'Beirne ('04) rehearse with Saxophone Quartet. O'Beirne, who started the group this year, said, "It's the most demanding form of performance, since the rhythm, the drive, the energy all depends on the players, all solos, making the music happen without any guidance from a conductor."

His silver trumpet gleaming, Dan Kober ('04) rehearses a song for jazz band. Though Jazz Band is a commitment, it is one that students relish. "The sound of the trumpet soars atop the rest of the band. I put my maximum effort into each rehearsal so I can get the most out of my time," said Kober.

JAZZ STANDARDS BAND: Paul Caracciolo, Ben Kaufman, Shara Mack, Ian O'Beirne, Tim Plimpton, Frank Wagner, Timothy Keleher (Conductor)

JAZZ BAND: Greg Adcock, Michael Ahn, Vikram Bhargava, Joe Brach, Roxanne Estes, Mark Greenfield, Dan Herron, Jason Huber, Dan Kober, Joshua Levinson, Melissa Mack, Shara Mack, Ian O'Beirne, Viviana Pabon, Jason Reed, Evan Richter, Aaron Rivkin, Todd Schefflin, Frank Wagner, Timothy Keleher (Conductor)

Emerging as the new and transformed Sandra Dee, Sarah Parker (’04) sings to her man Danny Zuko, played by Tim Rinehart (’04). The well-known and upbeat song, “You’re the One That I Want” is a favorite with the audience.

As live puppets dangle from the strings, Maria and the Von Trapp children perform for the Captain. This particular scene was one of the more complex of the whole show, involving quick costume and set changes and unique choreography.

The crowning glories of D-wing are the musicals performed on the stage in the auditorium. "I got chills, they're multiplyin'," sings Danny Zuko in this year's Fall musical Grease. The story takes place in the 1950's and revolves around the love story between Danny, a member of the "Burger Palace Boys" a greaser gang at Rydell High and Sandy, an innocent girl who has just transferred there. With its memorable songs and great dance routines, Grease brought down the house. The cast was invited to perform in California in April.

In March, the auditorium came alive with the classic musical The Sound of Music. The story is that of a young nun who leaves the convent to become a governess for the seven children of a strict widower. Soon, she opens the children to the wonders of life and the joy of music. With great special efforts and talented performers, the show's unforgettable songs and moments were brought to life on stage.

The performers put in much hard work and many long hours to make their shows successes. As the stage lights turn on and the show begins, the actors put in one hundred percent effort to make sure they have the best show possible. Besides the actors, the stage crew, who help build sets and make sure that everything runs properly, does a good portion of the rest of the production. Though there is anticipation, the end result of their work makes these students realize how worthwhile their efforts were.

As two of the seven Von Trapp children, Sami Siegel ('04) and Adam Lieberman ('06) escape to the Abbey. The Von Trapp family being pursued by the Nazis must find freedom beyond the hills of Switzerland.

Lisa Chalik ('05) and Nick Acciani ('04) perform in the Studio 2 production of "Pride and Pressure," a show that was written and produced by the students. This play allowed the students to use their full creative potential. Said Chalik, "Studio 2 was a unique experience I had the chance to perform in something original that was constantly changing."

Preparing for a gig, Laura Gladney ('04) applies whiteface to Sandy Finkelstein ('06). Mime makeup, though a nuisance to remove, is essential to the art of mime. The white of the base makeup contrasts sharply with the black outline to more drastically exaggerate facial expressions. "Mime makeup is cool until it gets all over my clothes," said Finkelstein.

During Act 2 of their show, the Act 2 Studio 2 class performs effortlessly. This year, the students of Studio 2 produced an original play about play writing. Over the course of several months, the students collaboratively wrote, edited, and polished the script. In January, with the performance of the play, the students proudly showcased their hard work and dedication.
Of Artistic Talents

Mirroring each other's moves, Ellie Tremble ('07) and Andrew Bleaken ('04) park mime on the streets of Haddonfield. Every year during the holiday season, the mimes, along with the small vocal groups, go to Haddonfield to entertain the people on the streets. Haddonfield welcomes the mimes openly.

During a performance of the Actor's Studio 2 show, Basia Brach ('04), Alyssa Pezzella ('05), and Debra Winter ('05) discuss the play they are writing. The first act of the play consisted of a creative writing class writing a play. The play within the play was the second act.

Marching To The Same Drummer

There are few things in life that are better than toast. One thing that does fulfill this almost impossible task is the Cherry Hill East Marching Cougar Band. They are not the stereotypical “Great American Marching Band.” If anything, it is its long lost Latin jazzy second cousin. In the past, they have played Latin songs, jazz songs, Latin jazz songs and every other possible combination of those. This year they played the Latin piece “Malaguena” and the jazzy “Sing Sing Sing” of Chips Ahoy!” fame. As always, this marching band season proved exciting and full of rauous fun. Band members enjoyed their early Saturday morning pre-game donuts, Friday night pre-game pizza, and third quarter soft pretzels. This band had no trouble staying in shape (or formation) thanks to their hours and hours of marching around the field in front of the school. Though occasionally they received lewd glares and obnoxious honks, they knew how to stay cool under pressure and under their heavy polyester uniforms.

For many band members, marching season is the highlight of their year. They willingly give up Wednesday and Friday afternoons, Friday nights, Saturdays, the end of summer vacation and basically their entire social lives to partake in the massive ordeal of marching band. It’s not so much a sacrifice as a way of life. Marching band members live for marching band. They consider marching band their social life and feel lacking of such after band season. Band members have been known to have elitist band parties throughout the year to revive some of the marching band spirit. Some are more obsessive than others, but deep down they all have a fondness for the band. Being in marching band is like having a slightly pesky significant other who refuses to go away for three months of every year. It takes over band members lives like a swiftly growing fungus on an old cheese sandwich. This isn’t necessarily a bad thing; some people like mold. Almost everyone likes toast. And marching band is better than toast.

Watching Drum Major Pay Hughes ('04) for the rhythm, Assistant Drum Major Steven Kramer ('04) conducts along with her. Drum major is an auditionally position given to two seniors. “As drum major, I get to conduct the band and help run rehearsals. I also get to dance sometimes. Being drum major has been a goal of mine since freshman year,” said Kramer.

Adding yet another element to the field show, color guard members Rachel Gerber ('07) and Lauren Lopilato ('04) twirl flags along while the band plays “Sing Sing Sing.” Color guard members spin flags and dance to enhance the entire performance. Proper flag twirling technique is necessary so as to ensure the safety of not only the guard, but the band as a whole.

Concentrating on their music, Zhen Gong ('06) and Joe Brach ('06), slide out notes on their shiny trombones. Band members start preparing long before the school year starts. They stumble into school during the last week in August for band camp. Band camp consists of four hours a day for five days of intense marching and music.

Sitting in the stands, Rachael Tannen ('04) and Deanna Burch ('04) play their cornets while beneath them, Nikki Liu ('04) and Jennifer Shipon ('04) play their flutes. Despite the grueling workload of first semester of senior year and the equally arduous task of applying to college, many seniors still find time in their eventful lives to participate in marching band. “Being a senior in marching band is really nice because the underclassmen look up to you,” said Tannen.
Standing tall, Jonathon Brandman ('07), Christopher Walton ('07), and Dan Kober ('04), proudly play their trumpets. Playing in the marching band allows players to develop and improve their stamina and performance ability for other bands, such as Wind Ensemble and Jazz Band.

During the always exciting football games, the band plays catchy tunes such as "Gonna Fly Now" from Rocky and "Louie Louie" in the stands. When the opposing school's band plays a song that is in the East marching band's repertoire, the two bands engage in a "band war." This involves seeing which band can play the song faster, better, and louder. However, the East band always wins.

Standing in full uniform on the football field, Stacy Silberman ('04) leads the clarinet section. East marching band members have a sort of love/hate relationship with their uniforms. The uniforms are never quite warm enough for chilly November football games, but never cool enough for sweltering September games. However, with their ostrich-feather plumes and gold brocades, the uniform always ensures the stylishness of the band.

Tapping out a cadence on their snare drums, Evan Richter ('07) and Geoff Stern ('04) keep a steady rhythm for the band to march to. The percussion section is important in any band, but it is especially critical for marching bands. Without the percussion, the band would just be aimlessly meandering around the field.

Looking ever so sauvage, though slightly beatnik-esque, Frank Wagner ('07), strums his electric bass in the pit. Instruments that are cumbersome or impractical to march with such as bass, mallets and hand percussion are placed in the pit. "Playing bass in marching band is cool because if you're not into marching you can just play in the pit and talk to your friends," said Wagner.

"Learning is pleasurable but doing is the height of enjoyment."

Activities 2004
At 2:25, A New Day Begins

Adding to students’ psychology/learning experience, the Behavioral Science Animal Lab is an extracurricular that students may choose to take. Jillian Rosenfeld (’05), observes Aurora the rat in her lab room to monitor her behavior. Other students, like her, have fun actively gaining knowledge about psychology through the animal lab.

Powderpuff Football is a highly popular annual event held at East. Erick Pichus (’05), Lauren Rosen (’04), and Carly Rasner (’05) give their all winning rights as the winning grade. With the boys as coaches, junior and senior girls train to compete against each other. In the 2003-2004 school year, the seniors gained victory in the overtime minutes of the game as the heartwarming girls fight until the end hoping for that special victory.

Frank Gambino (’05), President of Comic Book Club, and Max Diperstein (’05), speak to club members about the evolution of comics. Gambino said, “The Comic Book Club allows a group of people with the same interests in comics to meet and learn how comics evolved.” Like many other clubs in the East community, members that share a common interest can easily get involved to meet similar people.

Jake Loew ('05) assists chairpeople Caroline Conrad ('04) and Sam Inselman ('05) as they sort through blood drops. Kira Weinstein ('04), a Blood Drive Chairperson, comments on the success of the biannual drives. "This year's fall drive collected 12 pints over our goal. Each drive sets a goal and Red Cross sends a certain number of nurses, while many places donate food for the drive." East's students always become very involved in Blood Drive, an amazing service to the community.

The annual FOP holiday party provides food, entertainment, and company for children with disabilities. Students spend hours preparing decorations for the Hilton. Not only do the kids with special needs have a great time at the party, but the East students, like Michael Heiman ('05), enjoy interacting with the kids.
East As A Caring Community

In a room filled with needles and blood, it is amazing how many illuminated smiles you can find on people's faces. However, this scene inside the East Gym is not new. Twice a year, hundreds of students and staff gladly donate to the Blood Drive, which students organize annually in coordination with the American Red Cross. Sure, the nifty Blood Drive T-shirts that are passed out are incentive enough for some students; but for most, the sheer enjoyment of helping others and saving lives is the true motivation for donating. Over the years, East has managed to collectively donate enough blood to save hundreds of lives. However, the community service endeavors that East students participate in extend far beyond the Blood Drive. Those involved in FOP, for example, spend weeks preparing decorations and activities for a party that they organize to bring joy to the faces of handicapped children every year during the holidays. From the Animal Rights Club, to the Yellow Ribbon Committee, to Students Against Destructive Decisions, East students know the meaning of giving back and reaching out to the community in a number of ways.

Today, we live in a world in which personal gain is often put ahead of doing good deeds for the betterment of society. Whether it is because of a lack of free time or even an unawareness of the available opportunities, there is not enough done to help improve the community. However, amidst all the obligations of the normal school year, East students continue to devote a plethora of time to helping the community, a fact that speaks volumes about the character of the student body.

Michele Hasit ('05) supports the Jewish Culture Club as she buys a snack from Danielle Gabbay ('04) and Lisa Sinai ('05). Most clubs hold bake sales as well as pretzel and pizza sales to raise money for charitable aims of the group. The funds raised benefit the community or aid the club in achieving goals of setting up specific activities.

CREATIVE CREATORS CREATE!

After a hard day of classes, the artists at Cherry Hill East continue learning through art. Some of the clubs that make up a healthy part of East’s buffet are the art club, photo club, anime society, comic club, craft club, and knitting club. These types of clubs, which allow the students to stretch their minds beyond novels and math textbooks, have made their presence known around the school. With their tremendous talent, members of the art club have and continue to put together murals to cover the previously barren walls of the school. Murals have ranged from a depiction of life under the sea to a breathtaking view of a city skyline. The murals bring life to the walls, giving the school an upbeat appearance that rubs off on the students. Through the photo club, budding photographers can delve into the depths of the art and explore the world with the camera. Like the art club, the photo club helps adorn the walls as they display their works of art and hope to share their love of photography with the East community. No different from the other clubs, the craft and knitting clubs allow students to come together and share with each other their love for art. The craft club embraces all types of crafts while the knitting club allows both the experienced and novices to take some time out of a stressful day to produce artwork with yarn. These clubs not only bring color to East in a literal form, but also add a “WHAM BAM!” flavor to the community. They provide a place for all levels of artists to express themselves. The art related clubs are essential to add spice to the renowned East buffet.

Using care, members of the Craft Club create simple pieces of beauty from paper. The craft club makes origami for benefits around the community. They have produced elegant paper roses for teachers at the Lunar Banquet. “It’s not only fun, but also fulfilling to give someone such a personalized gift,” says Rebecca Kim (’05).

In the French Club’s holiday party, Erica Silverstein (’04) and Padma Venuri (’04) use fun crafts to promote hands-on activities. Throughout the year, French Club meets to spread French culture. In every meeting there is a different activity to expand the members’ French knowledge, and this crafts activity is one of the many activities the officers plan.

Rotun Weiss (’05), shows members of RNAC, the newly formed knitting and crocheting club the techniques involved in knitting. Learning to knit or crochet enables many of the members to hand-make many items such as scarves for the winter season. There are many benefits to this activity; members can wear their own crafts or give them to others as gifts.

Spreading The Word

Recently, a group of professors and scholars from around the world met to compose a list of the most influential people in the past one thousand years. Try to guess them. Isaac Newton? Number three on the list. Martin Luther? Number two. Oprah? A good guess, but she didn't make the cut. The top spot went to Gutenberg, the inventor of the printing press. In retrospect, it was an obvious pick for the number one slot. However, ask the editors of the major East publications, and they would borrow a line from Alicia Silverstone in the movie Clueless: "That was like so ... yesterday!"

The truth is, from Eastside to Eastcast, from Eidolon to Demogorgon, the modern computer technology reigns supreme. In some cases, such as with the yearbook, technology is used mainly as a way to efficiently capture and lay out the collection of photographs and images that make up each of the publications. In other cases, such as with Eastside Online and Eastcast, technology is used as the main medium by which these forms of media are shared with other East students.

However, regardless of whether the media is in the form of a printed book, an online newspaper, or even a cable television show, East encourages all students to express themselves and their views. From commentaries on the latest U.S. foreign policy, to recaps of the latest Cougar basketball game, to even editorials on the food sold in the cafeteria, news publications such as Eastside, Eastside Online, and Eastcast give students the opportunity to speak their minds on a variety of issues. In the same vein, annual literary publications such as Demogorgon pool together stories, poems, essays, photographs, and drawings to form a collection of the creative talents of East students.

It has been a long time since the days of traditional typesetters and printing presses. However, even amidst all the technology used today, the power of communication has not decreased. In fact, it has increased, allowing more and more students to become actively involved in the school community. Gutenberg would be proud.

It's A Small World After All

The standing joke among East students is that you can practically put any letter of the alphabet in front of "CC," and you'll be left with the acronym for one of the culture clubs in our school. In fact, the only thing missing from East is the Oompa-Loompa Culture Club, but once we start having a few transfer students from Willy Wonka's Chocolate Factory, flyers for the next OLCC meeting will be up everywhere.

All joking aside, the culture clubs at East play a very large and important role in the school. From organizing charity events, to planning the annual "Multicultural Day" extravaganza, to even holding entertainment activities pertaining to their respective culture, these organizations do almost everything. One example is the Lunar Banquet put together by the Asian Culture Society every year. On this day, students from all Asian backgrounds are encouraged to bring in ethnic foods, wear traditional clothing, and perform native dances or routines. Teachers visit the banquet during their free periods, and have the opportunity to get a taste of Asia at its best. It is an event annually looked forward to by both teachers and students alike.

However, an additional important aspect of these groups is that they provide a way for members of the same background to have an opportunity to get together and share a common bond. For many students, these culture clubs act as a great release from the stresses of the daily routine of school. After a barrage of tests and assignments on a given day, students love to get together at the end of the day and simply relax by joking around with their friends or making fun of the latest Bollywood film to be released. Another great thing about culture clubs is that they are not restricted to members of a designated ethnicity. By allowing anybody to join any club, diversity is promoted throughout the school.

HACKY SACK CLUB: Chelsea Coley, Danielle Ferland, Jan Hampshire, Danielle Salerno, Nicholas Sanchirico, Grace Sanchirico, Advisor: Ms. Adelizzi

The Hispanic Culture Club holds meetings regularly after school to discuss upcoming events. AS they provide members with food and drink, it becomes a party-like atmosphere. Here, Alejandro Cotto (06) approaches Hispanic Culture Club advisor, Dr. Raden with new ideas about the coming of Multicultural Day.

Casually playing a game of mahjong, Kevin Chang (06), Kelvin Yang (06), Dan Wenn (06), and Jason Reed (06) sit around the table. CCC often gathers to partake in various social activities. Culture clubs provide those with common interests and backgrounds, or those who are interested in that background, to blend in a friendly environment. "Playing mahjong gives students a sense of community where they can engage in a competitive game while conversing casually," said officer Andrea Pan (06).

HISPANIC CULTURE CLUB: Sanee Bishop, Mike Carter, Tiffany Chan, Paul Choi, Alejandro Cotto, Alan Guzman, Miles Jackson, Vicke Lam, Jeff Lee, Isabel Liu, Andrew Maeng, Victoria Morales, Viviana Pabon, Brittany Ray, Amanda Rickards, Charlene Steward, April Yang, Advisor: Dr. Raden

The writer Edward Abbey once said, "Sentiment without action is the ruin of the soul." In other words, it is useless to feel strongly about something and never act upon that feeling. Many East students live by such words, and take an active stance on certain problems in the modern age. Many of these groups are led by students who have been affected personally by the causes they support. This fact alone causes these groups to have an immense amount of drive in creating a more aware student body.

One example of such a group is Agape. Agape, for many students of the Christian faith, becomes a gathering place for people that have similar non-secular beliefs. The participants of this club consistently meet every week for fellowship. Throughout these meetings, these Christians explore their beliefs, expand their views through discussions, and share their experiences. Agape believes in opening up their doors through activities such as helping others by participating in community service. Agape affects many students by providing students with moral support during their high school life. Agape officers work hard because they feel compelled to share their beliefs with others. Through this, they hope to assist fellow students in their everyday problems, and to give their peers spiritual knowledge to rely upon in the future.

Another example is the Animal Rights Club, a group made of students who strongly believe in the protection of animals. This organization also appeals to corporations, trying to reduce the animal testing done on many consumer products. By spreading the word about animal rights, the members of the club hope that they can also inspire other students at East to take a stance on the issue. Thus, the words of Abbey ring true even today. After taking a look around East, the great author would be proud. Souls aren't easily ruined here.

MOCK TRIAL: Leena Bhatnagar, Beth Boland, Paul Boye, Mufal Dahodwala, Sam Elias, Ben Gross, Janice Harlow, Evan Klein, Sandra Levy, Rachel Maggioncalda, Jenna Mintzer, Jason Seher, Sanaa Somalya, Sean Stewart, Chloe Swirsky, Adam Zell, Advisor: Mr. Nation

PASSION FOR THE FUTURE

The legendary cartoonist Charles Schulz once said that because of its inevitability, the future is worth embracing. After all, according to the "Peanuts" inventor, "It's already tomorrow in Australia". Many kids at East have bought into this idea by starting "Future" clubs, organizations that promote various careers.

The Future Doctors of America Club, for example, prides itself on promoting issues of the medical world to the rest of the student body. Through field trips to hospitals and laboratories, lectures from distinguished physicians, and group discussions, the FDA club explores many facets of the medical profession. In addition, the club does a variety of community service activities, including fundraisers for needy families and toy drives for sick children.

Another club includes the successful Mock Trial team. By having students practice the legal technique used in trial law, participants are forced to think on their feet and learn the basic concepts of the legal profession. Other examples are the Prospective National Business Leaders of America Club and the World Affairs Council. Both these organizations inspire students to explore these fields in a fun and informative way. In fact, students all over East rave about these clubs because they allow kids the chance to socialize with others who share a common passion for a certain career.

No matter what the profession, students at East are dedicated to pursuing careers from an early age. In fact, this fact alone may contradict Schulz's theory for many of these kids for them the future isn't in Australia; instead, the future is here.

Speaking to FDA members about laser dermatology, Dr. Eric Bernstein is one of FDA's many guest speakers. FDA offers many learning experiences for its active members, including guest speakers and medical field trips. This year, FDA went on a field trip to Jefferson University Medical Hospital.

Powerfully speaking for the affirmative that the US government should establish an ocean policy to substantially increase the protection of marine nature, Adam Zill '04 is an effective speaker on the debate team. The debate team is this year's South Jersey League Champions. They have defeated Shorewood and Moorestown High Schools and the team has amazing members that proudly embody East.

Diligently solving a math problem, Jeff King ('06) applies mathematics skills he has learned to answer problems. Math Club meets weekly to offer sample math competition tests to the students. Preparing its students for various contests, Math Club has had many students rank high in competition.

"READ" & WHITE BOOK CLUB: Kathy Choi, Bianca Duce, Erica Greenberg, Amanda Grisafi, Christy Kim, Joscelyn Korth, Flora Novick, Ben Roomberg, Dani Sinai, Jessica Starkman, Alla Tsypanyuk, Advisor: Ms. Nahatt

Preparing for the National DECA Competition, Anne Ly ('04) and Roshni Joshi ('04) work on their International Business plan. In 2004, 120 students went to states to compete following the regional competition. Many students then progress to nationals. Every year East retains the honor of sending many students to nationals.

Hey, Life is a joy ride, makes you look deep inside, we'll figure things out, in times of doubt, when you grow wary, the dark can get scary, so look to you friends, 'cause the ride never ends! Have fun at college, I'll miss ya! Love ~ Tovah

Hey girl, You're one of the most amazing people I have ever met in my life! There are no words to describe the warmth that shines from you! You've become like a sis to me and I will miss you dearly! Don't ever forget that your presence is a gift to the world. You're unique and one of a kind. Your life can be what you want it to be... Take it one day at a time. ~ Luv Always and Forever Julie Kasyuk, a.k.a THE DANCER!

Melis, I love you so much and I don't know where I'd be without you. We all know what I'm bringing you from Israel! Ahh, you going to college! Love always Mini Gerber!

Have a good time at college next year, and don't forget about your assistant drum major from senior year. You are a banana. ~ Kramer

Hey. It's been great playing with you in band and being your friend for these four years. Always remember the song "Gez, Officer Krumke" (I don't think I'm allowed to put the lyrics here :-( ), the hot days of band camp, the cold games in November, jazz band championships and crazy Wind Ensemble songs. I know that you will do well in college and be a great music teacher! ~ Fay

Hey Meli, After 16 years I guess I've gotten quite used to you...so used to you that we definitely had our moments...pitooey!...bad singing of show and movie music in the car...wrestling...playin set... and you insisting on calling me by a nickname given to me by a two-year-old... I love you and I am going to miss you! ~ Shara (a.k.a shabee...urgh)

Best Friends - Till The End

Through the rough times and hearts that'll mend
walking fine lines
We are friends till the end
Like many a foe
the rules must bend
even to the all time low
We are friends till the end
More than enough
the e-mails we send always so tough
We are friends till the end
So many the boys to which we defend
so much like toys
We are friends till the end
A new love each day
somehow a new trend
they'll all fade away
But we are friends till the end

Only nice to people I like

To My Friend

Of all the people in my life,
From beginning to the end,
You’ve been a special blessing,
My dear and faithful friend.
You’ve filled my life with laughter,
Shared sorrows, joys, and tears.
You’ve stood by me and held my hand,
Walked with me through the years.
When I needed someone to listen,
I knew you would always be there.
When I weathered the storms of life,
You were always the one who cared.
So in this circle we call life,
From beginning to the end.
I was blessed to have you beside me,
My dear and faithful friend.

What can I say, you were my first friend. We have known each other for so long. You have always been there for me and I will always be here for you. Good luck next year at school and I know that whatever life throws at you, you can handle it. Stay in touch no matter what. Chocolate and Vanilla forever baby!

-Ali Mae-

My Little Ali Mae.

Where has the time gone? It seems like only yesterday we went sledding down your stairs and watched your dad. Whatever it was we were doing, we always had fun. Who can forget that yelling grandma or when I ran into the tree branch? (I'm hysterically laughing right now.) Though in our high school years we have found ourselves in different crowds, no one could possibly top the 15 years of friendship that you and I share. Wherever your path may lead you, never forget where you began or whom you started off with. STAY OUT OF TROUBLE!!!! I love you Ali.

Love, Samala

Best Friends
Couldn't have done it without you

♥ "Yesterday brought the beginning, tomorrow brings the end, but some where in the middle, we've become best friends." ♥
Jeffrey,

Before you I though these feelings only happened in fairy tales. What we have is unexplainable but we both know what it is even without having to express words. And now I know it can happen in real life. We have developed a certain bond. It makes spending every day with you more thrilling than the last. I am truly privileged to be a part of your life. You are the most admirable person. You are smart, goofy, and so unbelievably sweet. You have a certain quality to your face that every time I see it, I can not help but to fall more in love with you. You have become my best friend, and I am one of the luckiest people to be able to spend almost every minute with you. Congratulations baby. I will always be seeing you.

Love Always and Forever
-Alex

Alexandra,

I don’t even think there are words out there that can describe how I feel about you. I've loved you since day number one...all the way back in 7th grade...walking into 3rd period Ms. Colna's class, wearing that white button down shirt...and now that I have you, I will do whatever I can to please you and make you happy...just so I know that I've done everything to keep you in my life. I still don’t understand how this ever came to be. I thought I had lost you forever, but on a fateful night Junior year you changed my life forever. I finally know why you are such an amazing person. You are the most kind, compassionate and beautiful girl I know. Don’t ever forget that babydoll. And whenever down the road you are feeling blue remember...

“I’ll be lovin’ you always”
I love you Alex

I sit here and think of you
For lack of anything better to do.
And I wonder if you could be
Always and forever, here with me.

But in my heart you're always here
I never have to look for.
'Cause you're the one closest to me
For nothing and for all.

So now I give you my voice
And the music that I sing,
I give to you my world,
Which is all that I can bring.
It comes with all the good times,
It comes with a little strife,
And now I give to you my heart
And we can learn to share this life.

Seasons change, time never stops
I find things I can't control.
But I know that when I'm lonely,
You've got the other half of my soul.

I wish, I wish, I only wish,
Our sky stays forever blue
It'd be good, if you understood
That I'm just crazy about you.

It has been our pleasure watching you grow up to become such an incredible young man. We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished. Your success is only beginning. We will greatly miss our shining star next year. Good luck in college!!!

♥All our love♥,

Mom, Dad, & Jenna
SCOTT

Congratulations on a great four years. We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished. Good luck in college!

Love,
Mom, Dad, and Steven

Amanda,

Wow you survived your 1st year of high school, congrats. Good luck with the rest of your years here. Remember Mike is right behind you. I love you very much. You're a best friend and an awesome sister.

Love,
Christina

Christina,

Congrats! You graduated! I'm going to miss seeing you in school next year. Still we had some great times this year. Especially in the car. Burning rubber! You're a great friend and sister. Love you lots!

Love,
Amanda
Sam and Lisa; best friends since we were one
Pointing at each other, and having some fun!!
Growing up at Kellman, from 3-year-old nursery to 8th grade
Still best friends through high school, our friendship will not fade
Smoochick, Loochick, Lowes ladies, Ooh-a-linch, and cham
Florida at Thelma's, and Martha's Vineyard with Sam's fam
We told Mr. Dork we were stepsisters, and it was almost true
Always at each others houses, or driving together (295 wooo!!)
We know each other oh so well, each secret we have told
From being scared to enter houses, to knowing how to "hold"
We make each other laugh, in the bellyache kind of way
We never get into fights, for our "duties" save the day!
Orange tootsie pops for Heisler, Marky Twain was our best man
Next door neighbors, big white houses, we'll stick right to our plan
"Fun, Fun, Fun" "we're gonna miss the show," "me no know," "me toooo"
A million memories together, this poem lists just a few
Silly or sad, just wanting to talk, we call on each other whenever
Because we know when we were one we made a friend forever

JULIA

If ever there was a daughter
Who deserved the best, it's you...
And that's exactly what you're wished
Today and all years through.

We are so proud of your great years and accomplishments at East
Best of luck in college! We will miss you!

LOVE,
Mom, Dad, & Jerry

Maddie & Hallie

Bus rides: Debbie Burke-Linger-Sheen, HO Rendezvous, Preakness, House of Block 1 out of 7, Bobbi & Jessie, Varsity Tye Dye, STALKING Bellerinas with Roni Wright, Laurel High, Shoresh, that shirt gets around! Karen Groves, Flyer Mmeisten, Princeton, Dar concerts, Hallie + Maddie + Uncle Art + Aunt Paul = BFF. Here’s to you, Cousin Robbie, Overstimulation Bob-Ditter style. Puffy painting Maddie didn’t make Willy Wonka in ’96, Friday folk dancing, BONNIE Latin is alive! POD, Indigo, Ami, and Sona. Roadtrips to MD, Mexican troublemakers, Bag breaking at 7-11. Donde esta el CRV? Sketch sisters, Wet Hot American Summer, Kissing Acapella, Sing alongs. The grass is always worth the rocky ride! Juliet Thrift stores, Greyhound, 3 Gals, 2 Barbs & a Sharon, Yellow bookbags, EMS & L.L. Bean, Halogenes CIT 2003. Oh, they call me a HOMEGROWN. I grew up at CAMP LOUISE and let it be known...

I’d rather be at Camp Louise...
Through the years when everything went wrong together we were strong. I know that I belonged right here with you.
Jessica & Jenna

All the years of laughs and amazing times have created a bond that can not be broken. I am proud to call you my cousin and my best friend.

MWHAHAHA. Car and Mr. Sunshine. Main-lining Peta. Who got an announcement over the plane flight? Thousands of multicolored strings. Dreading the Hill... making fun of annoying campers ‘please never let me come back here’... Umm will you brush my hair for me? Omg Jess... WHAT WHAT Embarrassing photo experiences. LIIFETIME television for women. Family holidays... what filmmaking? Excuse me are you urinating on my lawn? I don’t think you just lied to me.

Birthday = Broadway Bound! Driving two hours turned into two minutes. I can’t eat that it has a gram of fat. 8th grade BADASS baby. No more couch its called a bedroom. Can you not be obsessed? Shooppingg excursions. Eating to the point of oblivion. Constantly making fun of the underlings. Grey skies are gonna clear up... were we insane? I wouldn’t relive that if you paid me 8 million dollars to do so. FLORIDA just ate breakfast... are you hungry... yess I need more Cheese please... that food yea we skipped out on the bill. You think you won’t meet people on the airplane.... your wrong. Matching Tiffany’s and Louis Hell Yea! SURGE! Attacking at o’clock in the morning. I feel like being creative. Cockskaki... not what it sounds like much worse. What would you do if your son was at home crying alone on the bedroom floor cause he’s hungry. Its getting hot in here. Ooo yea our car rides were hot. Pepperoni sandwiches at 3 in the morning washed with a bit of sprite. Lipstick tattoos... yea not as removable as it seems. Mission impossible sleepovers. The secret closet. Please let us stay one more night if not we will fight. TIM obsession enough said but not really Shout out to my girl Liz. Jenna = adulteress. Jessica = seducer. Omg your gorgeous. Backing out of kisses... sorry maybe next time. Re-enacting our intimate nights. Tanning on the roof... was that safe? Scheming when the parentals leave the premises. I know what your doing right now sitting in a room with the bright lights on... how’d you know that? I know everything. Stop picking! Why are you wearing your shoes in the house? Don’t you remember me from the shore? Yea you were the guy with the big... Why must you tip over my chair. Be the big ones hehe... er and average Joe. John your just pathetic. Good Chinese accent. Remember Zach... how could we forget. Can you say HOT? Channel 19 why did you tape me. Marvin Gaye private viewing. It needs to be released. For all of you people who don’t get this hopefully you can see how much fun we’ve had and how much we love each other. Our last words MWHAHAHAHAHA.
To our Jessica

We admire
Your strength, integrity, and intelligence
Your humor, compassion and tenderness
We love you.

In the beginning some may have found it rare.
They whispered, and pointed, and a few even thought to stare.
Now as I look back, I don't see the strange part.
What's so weird about two sisters who share one heart?

Now that you will soon be gone,
It's as if a part of me will be withdrawn.
Through thick and thin, our bond it grew.
I can say with pride that I love you.

With much love from your little sister,
Shanny

SECRET RECORDS OF THE BASTILLE

Did You Know?

- This is our first year with our new advisor, Dr. Vivone.
- This is the first year that we have used the computer and YearTech to make layouts for some sections.
- Eidolon means "An Image of an Ideal" in Greek.
- The TV in the yearbook office gets HBO.
- People who check all of these "Did You Knows" are often called "losers."

Yearbook Cultural History:

- "It's a Small World" has been the heading for the Activities layout about culture clubs for at least the past ten years.
- The first Asian Editors-in-Chief were Jenny Kim and Nitid Kapoor of the class of 1988.
- This is the first year that we've had a white male editor since 2000.

NOT-SO-VITAL STATISTICS (uh-oh, we're counting again):

- Caucasian population: 33.3333333333%
- Asian population: 66.6666666666%
- Male population: 27.77777%
- Female population: 72.2222222222%
- 6,02 E23 "candles" have met their fate in the waste receptacle.
- Yearbook editors have consumed a total of two bags of popcorn, two bags of chips, two large pizzas, two liters of soda, six leftover pretzels, and twenty-six croissants (where are they?)
- Sports Editor Philip Park had to use a cow scale at his recent physical. He weighed in at a whopping, earth-shaking 204 lbs! After school, he is fork-lifted into his extra-large Mack truck, with which he drives an average of six editors home per afternoon (Thanks Phil!).

ACADEMICS: As Chauvelin, Richard Chiung gleefully plots the Scarlet Pimpernel's demise.

PERFORMING ARTS: Alienated and alone, Sidney Carton, aka Molly Finkelstein, pines for her partner Charlotte. The victim of unrequited love, she tears her sconces in a bottle.

WANTED

"We'll charter a schooner at Dover and cross over during the night... It will be a race between Chauvelin and me across the Channel tonight, and the prize — the life of the Scarlet Pimpernel.

- The Scarlet Pimpernel"

Name: Charlotte Chong
Last seen: sneaking into D-wing to practice piano
Position: Performing Arts Editor
Reward: Two English Handbells

As Alexandra Hill, seductive accomplice and Sports Editor plots the captive aristos, Philip Park, aka a Sports Editor, drives toward Madame Guillotine. Inside the wagon, Individuals Editors Beverly Hon and Sanaa Somallya.
"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times"... editors were typing frantically at the computer and Mr. Berryman was growing impatient. Five o'clock became six o'clock, which soon became six thirty. And the end was nowhere in sight. Terry had dropped in for the 340697 time, telling us "you'll be fine" even though it seemed that we'd never be fine. The photos were late and the captions were trapped. The stories were missing, then boring, then miraculously OK again. We'd flushed our laminated yearbook pages, sacrificed lunch periods, gym classes, and Wind Ensemble, slaving over 68 color pages. We'd had a full-day in-school field trip, spent counting and re-counting pages. But somehow, by 6:35, we'd crammed all of the page envelopes into their proper box, labeled with its prepaid FedEx sticker, and it met its fate at Staples. Next up: January's deadline, and this time, heads were rolling. Any "friend" of an editor who dared to enter was customarily executed. Not only were the captions not captions, but pictures faced out (if they weren't of thighs or the thirty-sixth copy of the marching band group shot) and some pages were still forthcoming (weships we hear the merry feet of Performing Arts). To relieve rising tensions in A022, the editors went online and ordered two large pizzas and two liters of soda from Papa John's that did not fit into the new refrigerator. Total cost: we forget, but we still have nine dollars left. Oh, and minus five thousand dollars (sorry, Edelson 2005). Asian parents may not appreciate our hard work, but as Bobby Yearbook once said, "The yearbook is a memorable record," and "it is a far, far better thing that we do, than we have ever done; it is a far, far better rest that we go to than we have ever known."

LITERARY: Rohini Khillan and Mufal Dahodwala possess the only objective minds, recording the events of The Reign of Terror for future generations.

During an unexpected pause in the bloodshed, Madame Guillotine hungrily awaits her next victim. Each day, hundreds gather to watch her feast.
An ode to Jill Cuthill our beloved friend, mother and teacher,
With hope that our thoughts and memories will someday reach her.
Her friendly face is treasured by all who passed her on the second floor,
For she was the happiest math teacher in purple, the color she often wore.
She had a smile that brightened the day,
Followed by the quick, witty things she used to say.
Many lucky students had her for geometry or Algebra 2,
But we all know her passions are playing at the zoo.
She was a leader for caring and for protecting animals and little creatures,
Even while she was watching the Matrix, her favorite feature.
She left East a legacy of kindness, creativity, and sincerity that will be difficult to replicate,
To honor her memory, our lives we will dedicate.
In Loving Memory of Mrs. Cuthill

It's not going to be a eulogy. It’s not going to be trite. It’s not going to sound like anything anyone has ever written before. These thoughts ran through my mind once I was offered the opportunity to write something about Mrs. Cuthill. However, I know that this is something I need to do, even as just trying to convey her meaning to me makes me not want to.

I met Mrs. Cuthill sophomore year when she was my Algebra 2 teacher, and soon after, she introduced me to the Animal Rights Club. Not only did she inspire me in terms of the club, but she provided me with the knowledge that I could make an independent decision regardless of what other people thought. This decision related to becoming a vegetarian and eventually, becoming the club’s president during my senior year. I can sit here and say that Mrs. Cuthill was a wonderful teacher, but no one would ever feel the full scope of her achievements by considering that alone. She was a full-time mother, a full-time teacher, a full-time animal advocate, and a full-time friend. Between school, the animal hospital, church events, and home, she seemed to manage it all with graceful pleasure. Mrs. Cuthill and I would plan club events together, and I would hang up posters that she had made as announcements around the school; we were a team, and now my partner and friend is gone.

Being her Algebra student in the classroom was far different than being her friend behind the scenes, as I gained educational inspiration in one setting and a sort of life inspiration in the latter.

I can never sum up what Mrs. Cuthill meant to me in sitting, and I can never exactly move my emotions on to the readers of this in the hopes that they can feel what I do. One the other hand, I can offer up a slice of her life that I was so honored to be a part of, even if that physical life is now gone.
