THE FINAL BEGINNING . . .

September 1988 represented the final beginning, the last time we would look forward to the upcoming year at East. But this year's expectations were different, for the experiences and privileges we turned over in our hearts and minds were those of seniors. The twin feelings of tradition and self-confidence transformed once-common events into chances to leave a final, collective signature upon what had become much more than simply our school.

Now we can look back upon our handiwork, and what a proud, florid signature we have printed upon East! We have established new traditions and new standards of honor and responsibility. Joining together from a diversity of backgrounds, we have learned from and added to each other's experiences. Our class has truly discovered the essence of being East's seniors, and have added another glorious chapter to her ever-growing history. We hope to forever be remembered within the confines of her halls, for East will always hold a special place within the confines of our hearts.

International Banquet - Not Just A Free Meal

Cherry Hill East educates students not only in American society, but teaches world cultures as well. The new International Relations, Non-Western Cultures, and World History programs, the flourishing language department, and a diverse student body all represent this ongoing effort. Unlike these academic subjects, the International Banquet presents the unique opportunity to sample the world's diverse cultures in one room.

The foreign language clubs provide an innovative comparison of different ways of life through the representation of a variety of countries. China, France, Germany, India, Korea, Mexico, and Spain are just a handful of the exhibiting nationalities. Delicious food, beautiful decorations, and exciting entertainment are native to the International Banquet, further emphasizing the large cultural diversity. With the attendance of both French and German exchange students, participants had a first hand account of the different customs of other societies. This added realism, combined with the “cultural party booths” and the vivacious demonstrations of ethnic pride, contributed to the enormous success of the program.

The International Banquet provides an additional way for students to taste the different cultures of the world through activity and experience, rather than with formal guidelines.

With the recent Reagan-Gorbachev summits and the institution of the glasnost policies in the U.S.S.R., the two superpowers' relations have improved dramatically. The INF Treaty and the Warsaw Pact's reduction of conventional arms seem to be steps in the direction of a lasting peace. These agreements have not only affected the political relations between these two nations but it also has influenced the cultural exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This opening of the Soviet society has allowed students at Cherry Hill East to learn about the Soviet Union and its people in an unique and exciting way. Under the aegis of the "People to People Friendship Caravan," five Soviet mayors visited our school on November 28th. School Superintendent, Dr. Philip Esbrandt introduced the mayors in the Auditorium. Mark Newcomb called each of the spokesmen to the podium — Georgy Onischuck of Donetsk, Nikolai Golovin of Kursk, Anatoly Khmelevsky of Novgorod, Ivan Onoprienko of Poltava, and Vladimir Pantukhin of Voroshilovgrad. Each then spoke about the cities they represent, relaying important information about the geography and location of the Soviet Union.

During the program, each of the mayors expressed a feeling of optimism about future Soviet-American relations. Onischuck said that "the future of our two countries is in the hands of the young people," and commented that "the mayors have seen many positive things we want to implant." Other mayors such as Pantukhin also noted, "there is no difference between the young people of the United States and those of the Soviet Union, all people have joy and sadness; in this we are alike. All have a desire for happiness, friendship and peace."

Following these brief statements the mayors then consented to a question-and-answer period. The mayors responded to questions dealing with issues such as nuclear disarmament, "Star Wars" and mutual stereotypes. Although the leaders were restricted from fully commenting on political issues, they expressed true feelings of hope for further reconciliations between the two countries.

After this period ended, Howard Fichman presented the mayors with gifts from the students and the administration of Cherry Hill East. The mayors responded with gifts in the form of 45 rpm records, souvenirs and biographies of famous Russians. As the students left the auditorium, the mayors moved to the faculty cafeteria for lunch and a tour of the school.

During their walking tour, the visiting statesman seemed very interested in the Family Living program, the photography courses, and the computer classes. Interestingly, the mayors also wondered if American students had access to the great Russian writers, such as Tolstoy. This meeting with the Russian mayors is only a precursor to a program with which Cherry Hill East is currently involved.

To the Class of 1989,

It was a pleasure for me to serve as your principal during your first three years at Cherry Hill East. I have watched you grow from uncertain freshmen to mature and confident seniors and I have taken great delight in your many accomplishments. You have left a legacy of success in the classroom, a heritage of victory on the athletic field, and you have actively participated in all facets of school life. You have done your part to maintain the standard of excellence you found at East when you entered.

It was twenty-one years ago that I entered East. And just as you did as students I set out to become involved and make my mark on a school that was to certainly make its mark on me. As a result I have many pleasant memories to look back upon. I have had the privilege of working with many dedicated and hard-working teachers and many interested and supportive parents. But my greatest source of joy has been my association with the students of Cherry Hill East and their accomplishments have been my greatest source of pride.

I look back at my more than two decades at East as a very rich and rewarding experience that has enabled me to grow both personally and professionally. My guess is that East has had that same kind of influence on you. It is not easy to leave a place that has been such an important part of your life but as we leave we can do so with the confidence that we are prepared to face the challenges that lie ahead. I shall miss Cherry Hill East and the people in it. My guess is that you probably feel the same way.

I congratulate you upon your graduation from Cherry Hill High School East. May your future be happy, healthy, and prosperous and may each of you achieve the fulfillment of all your hopes and dreams.

Sincerely,

Anthony R. Cost
For one enchanted evening, cars, jeans and sweaters were transformed into limousines, tuxedos and gowns, as we finally experienced the most highly anticipated night of the year - THE PROM. From dancing under the swirling lights to posing for pictures, we were swept up in the magical atmosphere. Forgotten were all our previous worries, the panic-stricken weeks of searching for dates and the proper attire. Now all was perfect. It was our night to shine. It was our night to be "Forever Young."

Junior Miss

Each year, Cherry Hill East proudly names one well-deserving young lady as its Junior Miss. Although at times hailed as a beauty pageant, the contest is actually based upon a diverse series of categories. First, approximately thirty students are evaluated through their preliminary applications and high school transcripts. The judges then have the unenviable task of narrowing this honorable field to twelve girls, who must then display their ideas, goals, and personalities through comprehensive interviews. Six students are selected to advance, and these fortunate contestants must next display their physical fitness, stamina, and coordination by performing a rigorous dance routine. Afterwards, they gracefully stroll down the auditorium stage in evening dresses, being judged for poise, appearance, and posture. Finally, the young ladies have the opportunity to reveal their creative abilities and talents by performing a variety of individual routines, which range from musical recitals to ethnic dance demonstrations. After totalling the scores from all the categories, the judges are able to crown the new Cherry Hill East Junior Miss. She will then have the honor of advancing to the county competition, and if once again successful, to the state competition, held here at Cherry Hill East.

To the Class of 1989 -

I find myself in a unique position, having worked with your class as an assistant principal and now writing a yearbook message as Acting Principal of Cherry Hill East. Because of the close ties I feel for each and everyone of you, this year’s commencement ceremony will indeed be something special for me. I have watched you grow and mature during these past four years and I have derived great satisfaction from your accomplishments. The manner in which you have conducted yourselves as scholars, as athletes and as students have been a credit to you, your parents, your school and your community. Your achievements and contributions will become part of the proud history of Cherry Hill High School East.

And now as you once again embark upon a new and exciting phase of your life, I hope that you will look back upon these past four years as challenging, rewarding and wonderful years. On behalf of the entire staff I congratulate you upon your graduation from Cherry Hill High School East. May your future years bring success, happiness and the best that life has to offer.

Sincerely,

James J. Gallagher

Cherry Hill East

In view of the expression "You can't be all things to all people," Cherry Hill East, the state's third-largest high school, ought to be in the Guinness Book of World Records for disproving it. If your child wants to be a rocket scientist, let him choose from fourteen offerings in the "physical" science department. Future doctors have eighteen biology electives; horticulturists, a greenhouse. Hairdressers have an entire salon. Car mechanics have two lifts. This year, the school wind ensemble traveled to the Soviet Union to perform.

Program diversity must be a catalyst to academic performance. In 1987, out of 690 graduates, 75 percent went on to four-year colleges; 10.7 percent competed in the NMSP; mean SAT scores were 468 verbal and 530 math; and 6.2 percent of the students went on to a BMCC. About half the faculty members have degrees beyond a master's. Of the school's 236 courses, there are four APs and four foreign languages.

Cherry Hill generously funds education. Although the community is not among the state's wealthiest, spending here is nonetheless strong, a testament to the community's belief in learning. Teacher salaries range from $21,190 to $48,655, with an average of $40,000—figures comparable to, and even better than, many Northern districts that theoretically are capable of spending much more. The district is fifth in spending in Camden County; per-pupil costs for 1986-87 were $5,330.
On September 30, 1988 Cherry Hill East was forced to give up the “Father” of the Cougar den. Mr. Anthony Cost, East principal for eight years, was promoted to Deputy Superintendent of the Cherry Hill Public Schools. Although Mr. Cost’s smiling face and kind words are sorely missed, East remembers with pride, his accomplishments as an outstanding administrator and friend.

Still, another silver lining enhances this situation. Mr. James Gallagher, last year the vice-Principal of the Class of 1989 has been promoted to the role of “Acting Principal” until the BOE decides on the person for the permanent position. (We’re rootin’ for Mr. G.) while the transition from being responsible for a class of six hundred and seventy students to a student body and staff of over 3000 seems a near impossible task, Mr. Gallagher has adapted quickly and effectively. His day-to-day responsibilities include overseeing curriculum and instruction, co-curricular activities and personnel. He loves to interact with both the students and the staff as he maintains a very visible profile.

With the advancement of Mr. Gallagher, Dr. John O’Breza skillfully took the helm of the Senior Class in the role of vice-Principal, moving up from assistant department chairman of English. Mr. Edward Collins heads the Junior Class, Mr. Charles Fleischman leads the Sophomore Class, and Mr. Leonard Terranova, the “big man at the bottom of the totem pole” oversees the Freshman Class.

The tasks of these four fine vice- Principals include arranging class schedules, coordinating bus routes, dealing with parking problems, supervising specific educational departments, dealing with discipline problems, overseeing the athletic programs, and getting out the grades for Interims and report cards. And maybe the most important task of all is providing that sympathetic, understanding ear to the voices of the students. Rounding out our troupe of exceptional leaders is Mr. Richard Lacovara, the assistant Principal in charge of building and grounds administration and the supervisor of the budget and purchases for Cherry Hill East.

These gentlemen provide the constant energy and knowledge required to keep East where she so proudly stands - at the top. For this alone, they are the true “Men of East.”

Media

Someday we shall look back at the technology of the eighties and smile at its lack of sophistication; however, for this moment in time, we are the proud recipients of an excellent media department and system.

A full service library boasts of every service and use of the printed word encompassing research to fiction. A non-print room offers us everything in visuals and video tapes. A film crew trained in video, records our memories for posterity and three energetic and helpful ladies run a duplication system that gives us every realm of the print and reproduction media for information both in the classroom and for the purpose of keeping the school personnel well informed.

Media, the plural of medium - it certainly is!

Biology - the study of life. The Biology Department teaches students the physical and chemical concepts of this field. A variety of courses such as Cellular Physiology, Field Biology, and Analysis of Athletic Injury are offered at East. These classes prepare students with interests for either further studies at the college level or merely to insure a well-rounded education.

Physical Science

Linus Pauling, the great Nobel chemist, once said, "Science is the search for truth." Nowhere is this search better realized than in the Physical Science Department at Cherry Hill East. With a variety of courses, ranging from Earth Science to Physics II, students are offered an array of scientific information at all levels of ability. The courses also develop important logic skills used not only in the laboratory and in class, but, more importantly, in the decisions of everyday life.

"That is the idea that we all hope you have learned in studying science in school - we never explicitly say what this is, but just hope that you catch on by all the examples of scientific investigation. It's a kind of scientific integrity, a principle of scientific thought that corresponds to a kind of utter honesty."

- Richard P. Feynman
Mathematics

The date is April 14 and parents are desperately trying to put together what remains of the tax form they attempted to do themselves. Perhaps it seems as though you will never need mathematics again, but as time passes, the value of a strong mathematics background proves itself. The Mathematics Department at East offers courses ranging from Algebra I to Calculus to PASCAL, teaching not only basic concepts, but also the process of thinking logically and analytically. Regardless of course, the knowledge that the Mathematics Department shares with the students confirms our need to understand.

"Mathematics possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty."
- Bertrand Russell
Social Studies

The Social Studies Department has the great responsibility of analyzing the past and the present, linking them to the world of today, and using them to guide students in their future decisions. All students take two years of American History, and enrollment in subjects such as Psychology, American Law and World Civilizations is increasing all the time. The department touches the lives of all the students at East, shaping their historical perceptions and preparing them for entrance into the world around them.

The English Department is not only the largest, but also the most diverse department at East. Offering courses that range from Public Speaking and Great Books to Creative Writing and Individualized English, these faculty members enable students of all abilities to improve their skills self-expression. The curriculum of vocabulary, literature, and grammar taught in English I, II, III, and IV provides and broadens techniques such as oral and theatrical expression. Furthermore, for those students who have recently moved to the United States, English as a Second Language (ESL) accelerates their learning of the English language and adds to their knowledge. By offering diverse classes which supply life-long skills, the English Department exerts a lasting influence on every Cherry Hill East student.

Miss Peggy Beck's 5th period Junior Honors class contributes their enthusiasm to Literary Character Day.

Seventh period struts their stuff in an equally inspirational living creation of literature.

Miss Peggy Beck, originator of the program vividly portrays the character of Hester Prynne from The Scarlet Letter.

"Literary Character Day has evolved from a dedicated teacher's belief that literature must be experienced to be truly understood. This popular event has spread throughout the department and many of the other English teachers have followed suit with similar types of learning experiences. This special activity certainly provides the forum in which literature is experienced in a realistic and valuable fashion."

Communication and Culture are only two elements that the Foreign Language Department teaches. Offering Latin, German, French and Spanish, this diverse area of East's curriculum enables us to glimpse the past, the present and the people of different countries. However, this department does not teach only concepts. Trips organized by the faculty allow a first-hand experience of the many customs and cultures that textbooks merely describe. Without the Foreign Language Department, few students would ever get the chance to see, speak or understand the nations that share our world.

Music

With widely diversified instrumental and vocal classes, the East music department offers theory and performance to meet the musical talents of the East student. Offering music lessons on a rotating basis, dedicated musicians learn not only how to play within a group, but actually get the opportunity to perform both in school and in many instances, perform concerts outside of the confines of school. Through the dedicated music faculty, the students are offered the opportunity to expand their creativity, develop their own individual techniques and taste the professionalism that is stressed throughout the course work. Though many of the student involved take these courses for enjoyment alone, we boast of many that pursue careers in the world of music.

Art does not have to encompass the talented. It is a discipline which concerns itself with the creative training of the mind as it coordinates the eye and the hand. Art and beauty are all around us and the art department is committed to exposing the student to an awareness of all aspects of the art world, as it prepares and trains - not merely for the career oriented student but also for the polish which so richly rounds out the cultural heritage of the educated.

the Kennedy administration mandated a physical fitness program for America's students, Cherry Hill East was ready. Not only do the physical education teachers handle fitness and physical coordination but they help keep pace with a health conscious society. Whether on the gym floor or in the classroom, the total student is physically prepared in mind and body.

Cherry Hill East's program offers the student diversified sports and health endeavors from courses in Family Living to a weight room designed to build and tone the body. There are sports trainers to professionally handle the athlete's needs and specialized sport training is developed right out of the basic gym class.

Individual sports practices are taught; not only to instruct in the gym class but to teach rules and field strategy so that a sports-minded spectator can get the maximum form a leisure-time activity.

The Industrial Arts program at Cherry Hill East is one of the finest in the South Jersey area. Courses range from Mechanical Drawing to Woodworking to Fluid Power. The equipment available for student use rivals that of some small corporations. The curriculum includes instruction concerning the use of these machines. These courses work in tandem with the Cooperative Industrial Education program, providing valuable work experience for students who are still attending high school. The Industrial Arts program plays a key role in providing a well-rounded education for all students.

Business Education

For the East student contemplating a career in the business field, the Business Education department has all the answers. The business majors at East can boast of a complete, solid foundation in all of the courses designed to survey the world of business.

Courses such as Typing, Stenography, Keyboarding, Accounting, Computer Technology and Retailing deal with the most important tangible aspects of the business world, while other elements such as Advertising, Merchandising, Buying and Consumer Affairs are woven into the curriculum to round out the program and the student, thus offering the most comprehensive business background possible to the well-prepared graduate.

The East Guidance department directs every student through their four years of high school. The director, Mr. James Sabin, the counselors and the secretaries all coordinate their efforts to meet individual needs, requests and scheduling to create a challenging course load compatible with every student's unique abilities and requirements. The Guidance personnel are indispensable in planning for college or career endeavors. Through events such as Higher Education Night and ongoing visits from university representatives, the East student is exposed to all available options. Whether it is a semester course to fill in a schedule, or a selection of a college, or exploring the availability of funding, or just listening to problems, the Guidance people are always there.

Eggstraordinary Project For Eggseptional People

Eggstra! Eggstra! Read all about it! Fresh from their long eggscursion from the farm, where they had fled from an eggscorable yolk of tyranny under hens, a batch of cuddly, albeit eggshausted baby Grade A's were adopted by the East psychology department. Ranging from the eggstotic eggshibitionists to spoiled-shell-tered types, each egg contained its own eggsplicit personality. The eggcited parents, actually students in the class, were soon able to eggsmine the roles of parenthood through their enjoyable eggspereience. Using a type of Eggstrasensory Perception, they grew to feel for their "babies" as if they were human beings. Egg-beating was deemed ineggscusable, nearly the grounds for eggsmunication or an eggsecution. Similar instructions were carefully followed. Too quickly and most sadly, the eggstensive project finally finished. Scrap albums were created, and both the students and their "children" eggsuded sadness over their separation. Both parties had received greatly eggspanded understanding of childhood care and love, one that would stay with them for the remainder of their eggssistence.

The Morning Rush

Every morning before school, the East parking lot transforms into a major traffic jam. The lucky seniors who can drive, rush to find their parking spaces as the buses line up to drop off students.

LOCKERS

Lockers are the students' "HOME AWAY FROM HOME". More than just another storage space, the metal boxes take the character of the individual. Lockers serve as leaning posts while one studies and as excuses to get out of class.
Q: What did the poor boy from Ocean City High do on the day of the school pet parade, being that he wasn't fortunate enough to own a pet?
A: He tied a hot dog to a string and proudly gallivanted through the school courtyard along with the other children.

This story can only belong to one man: Mr. Edward Branin (A.K.A. Fast Eddie, Trouble, and Grandpa). Mr. Branin is one of the most honorable members of the class of '89. As Freshman and Sophomore class principal, he led his class through two notable Spirit Weeks, two winning homecoming floats, a tropical Luau, and a roaring Cotillion (or "Ring Dance" as he called it). Mr. Branin never stops working until a job is finished; unfortunately, this sometime up committee. Eventually, Mr. Branin suffered from a "petite" stroke in the Spring of 1987, which led to his retirement that summer, before the class' Junior year.

Although Mr. Branin is no longer an administrator at Cherry Hill East, he remains close to the hearts of students and faculty alike, and can still be found at various sporting events, theatrical presentations, class activities, and once in a while he'll turn up as your substitute teacher! When you see Mr. Branin roving through East's hallways, a big smile naturally comes across your face; however, he cuts short your happiness when he roars, "Don't be so cheerful!" Actually, you should feel honored, for that is good ol' Uncle Eddie's way of displaying his affection for you!

BALLOON FUN
Homeroom

Homeroom, the time when we carefully gather ourselves together to face the upcoming school day; really it is much more. First, we test ourselves and our teachers by determining how long after the 8:00 A.M. bell rings we can enter homeroom without being marked late. After checking to see if we have broken any records, we immediately become serious, stand, and salute our flag and country with the Pledge of Allegiance.

Next, we watch as our homeroom teacher picks up a bundle of passes and begins to hand them out. We pray that our cuts have gone unnoticed and that interim reports will not be issued for another week. By this time the announcements have begun blaring over the P.A. system and we have started last night’s homework.

Quickly finishing our assignments, we spend the next few minutes talking to friends about the weekend or catching up on gossip. Finally, 8:10 arrives and the fated bell rings; another day of school is about to begin.

Of course, there are many different types of homerooms. However, while it is true that the photography, newspaper, yearbook, ROTC, Student Congress, band, and Cum Laude homerooms are busy with their additional responsibilities, none can claim exemption from the universal characteristics. Homeroom is simply a way of life, handed down from class to class.
Havoc In The Halls

The brisk, active pace of Cherry Hill East finds its way into every facet of its environment — even into the hallways of the school building. C-Wing intersection packs itself with people rushing to English, traveling to a Student Congress meeting, or waiting in line to buy a pretzel. Other corridors conduct a more orderly flow of traffic, but often find that students “blow off some steam” after a grueling test or congregate with friends while walking inside their walls. Every passageway, however, provides an escape valve for some of the pressure of the classroom setting and allows students to have a few minutes of relaxation before returning to a mind-boggling Biology or Chemistry course.

The Pledge Of Allegiance

Although George Bush, in his recent political campaign, has claimed that many students cannot recite the Pledge of Allegiance, every person at Cherry Hill East hears these thirty-one words each morning. This homeroom activity further demonstrates our high school’s dedication to the American’s government and the American Dream. Along with the Star-Spangled Banner, sung at every sporting event, the Pledge of Allegiance is known by every member of the East community - an indication of the patriotism that abounds here.

“Please rise for the flag salute. Ready. Begin. I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.”
Here 'N There
Cherry Hill East’s menu consists of three delicious, specially prepared cooking courses. As a sumptuous appetizer, students may take Basic Foods Preparation to learn cooking techniques and the basic applications of cooking skills. From there they may indulge in either of two main courses: Natural Foods, which provides an understanding of diet and nutrition, or Cooking.

World Foods, an introduction to various cuisines from Occidental to Oriental. All these courses are served through demonstrations, lectures, and “hands-on” cooking. Of course, the “dessert” arrives when the students attempt to utilize their new skills at home in the kitchen! Bon Appetit!

Four levels of woodworking courses at East provide students with numerous practical skills. Beginning with Fundamentals of Wood, where hand tools and machines are first discussed and used, the students then progress through Woodworking II, III, and IV. By the time they have completed the woodworking curriculum, students will have constructed complete pieces of furniture utilizing sophisticated techniques and machinery. Along the way, they will have learned to apply mathematics, science, and problem solving skills to derive answers to such problems as cost estimation and figuring the dimensions of each project. Woodworking provides the chance to use both the hands and the mind to enjoy one tremendous learning experience.
At the end of F-wing is a unique classroom situation for many East students who are preparing for a career in beauty culture. Under Mr. Ralph Ipri's twenty years of experience, up and coming beauticians take an exacting course dealing with all aspects of cosmetology. Offered as a four period, twenty credit course; upon completion of the coursework, a test is administered by the state. Those who successfully pass the demanding test are then licensed to practice in the State of New Jersey.

In addition to classroom instruction, these students have the opportunity to practice their abilities by working directly with the public. Senior citizens are encouraged to come to the East Salon (for a very nominal fee) and East staff and students are also offered the advantage of availing themselves of this unique service.

Cosmetology graduates have the distinction of being prepared for their chosen career immediately following graduation, with placement in some of the finest salons in the area.

By learning to mix art with talent and knowledge, the Cosmetology student is offered what most classes cannot - a total working and learning experience.
Science Lab

Start with several industrious students and one eager teacher (measure carefully with a triple beam balance). Slowly add one set of directions (graduated cylinder is optional) and mix vigorously over a series of lab tables. Finally, heat up the students thinking processes with innovative questions and hypotheses. What do you get? A group of students who have been enriched by a Cherry Hill East chemistry lab.

An East chemistry lab serves chiefly to reinforce the students’ knowledge of the principles and nature of chemistry. Equally important, it also teaches students how to prepare graphs and tables, analyze information, and utilize various types of scientific instruments. A lab is much more than simply an extra period; it is a potent, highly concentrated mixture of numerous elements of the educational process.

Grab A No.2 Pencil . . .

Throughout our four years at East, we take so many tests that they eventually fuse into one big Scantron sheet in our minds. However, the remembrance of one test will always cause our palms to sweat and our heart rate to increase - the S.A.T.’s.

Early on a Saturday morning we trudge into school to take the test that we are sure will determine our destiny. Looking around we see our friends, their hands shaking and their faces lined with terror. Dressed in comfortable sweatpants and sweatshirts (often those which name our hopeful future colleges), we take final stock of our sharp number two pencils and decide that we at least look ready for the hours ahead.

By 8:00 A.M. it’s time to go to our assigned seat, usually with a kid on one side who has a cold and doesn’t stop sneezing, and a kid on the other side who mastered Einstein in third grade. The proctor tells us to fill in all the personal information boxes (we think we got that part right), and then the examination; six, consecutive thirty-minute tests, begin. Trying to concentrate amidst the pacing of the proctor, we trudge through the questions, grimly realizing that the people who had written the reading comprehension essays would flunk our English class.

Finally we finish and now begins the hardest part, the one-month wait before we receive our scores. Then, on another Saturday morning, we receive the fateful envelopes, butterflies and number two pencils floating about our stomachs. We open them . . . and for the lucky few, the nightmare is over. But for most of us, we realize that we will have to spend yet another Saturday re-taking the S.A.T.’s. What ever happened to late sleep and cartoons?
What Is a Computer, Anyway?

Computers have become more than a fad or a set of games; they have become an essential part of today's society. To enable its students to benefit from these miraculous machines, East provides several computer courses, all equipped with computers, disk drives, and printers. Here students can learn from B.A.S.I.C. fundamentals to the most advanced terms of PASCAL. They learn how to create sophisticated programs, from flow charts to final drafts, and they are shown the development of today's computer sciences. At East, students have the opportunity to gain a head start in one of the most important and rapidly advancing realms of the future: computers.

Two Heads Are Better Than One

Walking to the Guidance Department, students could have almost anything on their minds. College inquiries, Job opportunities, Scholarship offers. Course selections. Here, at East's central student information and processing bank, they can discuss nearly any questions they may have, from next week's lunch schedule to their upcoming college interviews. A combination of an oracle, encyclopedia, and parent-figure, the Guidance Department is there for every student - in any capacity of need.
In Our Time

Preserving the memories—that’s the primary purpose of a yearbook. The Student Life section records these memories of the activities which make up a student’s life. One of the most challenging aspects of planning this section is to present a concise description of events and people that made this school year so special. We attempt, verbally and visually, to relate a variety of topics with coverage that goes beyond English labs and Gym. To retell an entire year in sixteen pages is a monumental undertaking. To relate bits of life with its trends and influences; to show how it affects us today - so that years from now, it can be relived as if it were yesterday.
1988 represented a milestone sports year for both the United States and Cherry Hill. The grace and showmanship of Brian Boitano first dazzled Americans at the Winter Olympics. Within a few months, Figure 8's turned to "180's" and similar dunks as Danny Manning led Kansas to an NCAA basketball championship and the Los Angeles Lakers became the first back-to-back NBA champion in nearly two decades. Displaying equal power on the tennis court, Steffi Graf became the third woman ever to win the prestigious "Grand Slam," winning Wimbledon and the French, Australian, and U.S. Opens. Halfway around the world, U.S. athletes left their mark at the Summer Olympics in Seoul, Korea. Stars such as Greg Louganis, Janet Evans, Florence Griffith Joyner, Mark Biondi, and Jackie Joyner-Kersee brought home gold medals. However, for Cherry Hill, the true star of 1988 was none other than the Most Valuable Player of the National League, the World Series star Orel Hershiser. This 1976 Cherry Hill East graduate set records.

Some come with dates and others come with a group of friends. Patiently they wait in the long lines to get tickets for their favorite movie. But what's a movie without snacks? Off to the longer lines at the snack stand to buy personal favorites. Next comes perhaps the hardest part of going to a movie: finding the right seat. The perfect seat always seems to be saved, or dirty, or broken. After viewing Coming Attractions it is time for the Feature Presentation. While its playing, all troubles disappear while enjoyment takes over.

Myriad faces stared at us from television sets and newspapers. Dukakis and Bush fought hard and dirty for the presidency. Tyson fought his wife, Robin Givens, and occasionally even fellow fighters like Michael Spinks. Wayne Gretsky's trade from the Oilers to the Kings shocked the Hockey world. North fought charges of conspiracy while Jim and Tammy Bakker tried to get back on the air. It was a bizarre year for those who made the news.
East's cougars certainly possess sweet fangs; during the day, nearly everyone feels like eating some candy. Luckily, a portion of this craving is satisfied by the variety of clubs and organizations who make travelling candy salesmen of their members in order to raise money. However, most students find the widest variety at one of East's candy stores, operated by either Eldolom (in Cafeteria 1) or by Student Congress (near Communications). Here, students can stock up with a day's worth of candy, from traditional lollipops and candy bars to exotic new varieties which appear each month. Like the individual "salesmen," these stores serve a dual purpose. While they satisfy the temporary physical needs of the students, they also satisfy the long-term economic needs of some of the school's most important functions. At East, everyone benefits from this stockpile of sweets; including of course, the students; dentists.

PEOPLE in PAIRS

Some walk down the hall arm in arm, talking with their friends. Some embrace in front of their lockers, oblivious to everything and everyone around them. We've all seen these "couples" in the hallways at East. They carry on a strong social legacy, recognizable from the first day we enter the school. Some, of course, carry this legacy a bit too far, but most carry it out in good taste.

Certain people are sure to be seen in the same place day after day, while others are established "rovers." Many people remain with the same person each day, while others pledge their eternal love to different sweethearts monthly. While the entire "couple superstructure" is steady in its overall existence, its individual parts are completely unpredictable. Two people with seemingly opposite tastes in clothes or music or everything may suddenly join together. It's all part of the legacy, all part of the community formed at Cherry Hill East.
Recently, the Cherry Hill East community, from the parents to the students, was faced with an interesting dilemma: what fun, healthy activity exists for students to participate in on Friday nights? After weeks of discussion they developed the Home Student Liaison Committee T.G.I.F. Night. Taking place for several hours on selected Friday nights, T.G.I.F. offers students the opportunity to meet, exercise, or simply relax. For less than the price of a movie, students can play volleyball in the gym, play ping-pong and video games in Cafeteria I, listen and dance to live rock bands in Cafeteria II, and watch a double feature of recent hit films in the Little Theatre. The live band aspect also enables talented East musicians to perform in front of live, and often lively audiences, further enriching the student body.

Although at first it may seem unusual going to school on a Friday night, this feeling quickly gives way to one of enjoyment and laughter. It is no wonder that this recently instituted program continues to attract new participants each month.
loafers to boots to Campsiders, the Cherry Hill East fashion plates walk the halls in a variety of looks. Oversized sweaters and sweatshirts abound, often matched with short skirts or baggy pants. With the demise of big belts and boyfriend jeans, the turtleneck has crept in, along with leather jackets and torn, bleached jeans. Acid-washed and stonewashed jeans continue to make a strong showing, joined by the mainstay of denim jackets. The sweat suit is strong for leisure and many of the girls still like the look of mens boxer shorts worn on the outside of the sweat pants. Although winter clothing seems to hug a conservative track, summer wear usually deviates from the average.

The look of bulky oversized sweaters in myriads of splashy colors and textures go hand-in-hand with the popularity of tie-dye outfits seen on the boardwalk and in town. Stirrup pants and the Miami Vice look gained in popularity briefly before losing favor to boxer shorts and cropped tops. Jams gave way to long Bermuda shorts for casual wear and the cotton fisherman’s sweater was seen in more serious settings.

Unisex apparel seemed to invade everyone’s wardrobe, with scarves making an interesting comeback, whether worn around the neck or around the left ankle. The guys got away from the white jacket and T-shirt style, adopting a more conservative look as they went for the flannel and rugby shirts in layers and layers. Regardless of the style, the basic look of the times is a cotton, wrinkled, unpressed, right out of the dryer appearance.

Fashion is very definitely an individual thing, and yet, conforms to the popularity mold. The most interesting aspect of the whole fashion statement is simply that what is here today will probably be gone
Student life is very full for the East student. Myriad activities and events blend into a complete academic schedule. In truth, East offers her students more than the hours permit. A view of the hallways after school reveals as many students involved in different pursuits as before the 2:25 dismissal bell.

To accommodate transportation needs, the familiar yellow school bus, of which there are more than sixty a day leaving East’s grounds, completes three runs. Two late buses take students from after school activities at 4:15 and again at 5:30.

With the approaching dusk, the buses roll away and the day grinds to a reluctant halt. East rests, secure in the fact that tomorrow is
To bolster enthusiasm for the new school year, Cherry Hill East conducts the annual Spirit Week extravaganza. The excitement and thrills of these seven days are unparalleled with that of any other event and these electrifying scholastic and athletic activities provide the forum for a battle between the four classes of the high school.

The week began with Night Life at East's Dance Club - the Girls' Gym. Although freshmen filled the dance floor, the seniors ate their way to victory in the pie-eating contest and the juniors captured the first place position in the King and Queen voting. The evening was filled with activity, and was an excellent starting point for the week to come.

This enthusiasm carried over to the following Sunday with the Cougar Relays. The seniors captured an early lead in this race but the juniors, in a surge of energy in the 400 meter section, overcame this early deficit and won the event. The seniors, truly disappointed with their placement, looked to the future events to make up for this loss.

With the beginning of the school week, the four classes continued their struggle against each other.

The seniors excelled in two new events - the Cougar on a can and the "Mystery Person" contest. The juniors won the hall decorating contest and the football game attendance, increasing an already large lead. With victory in the tricycle race, the juniors pulled away from the rest of the pack, widening the margin between first and second place.

The culmination of the excitement and enthusiasm of Spirit Week erupted in Friday afternoon's Pep Rally. Cheers for East's sports teams coincided with screams for respected classes. School energy and spirit ran throughout all seated in the Boys' Gym. Interspersed with this controlled pandemonium was the jump rope competition; although the sophomores challenged the record-holding seniors, the upperclassmen were victorious in this event. However, this time in the limelight ended quickly, for this win did not overcome the large lead the juniors had piled up.

There was gloom in Mudville, the mighty seniors had struck out!

After suffering a tragic defeat in Spirit Week, the mighty Seniors had one goal in mind: to win Homecoming. With Thanksgiving less than a week away, the preparations began. Ideas abounded, and finally, the theme for this year's festival was announced as the "Nations of the World." The Freshmen painted the Great Wall of China on their float and choreographed a dance with a dragon's head and hand-held streamers. Sophomores decided there was nothing better than the good ol' U.S. of A. and entertained the crowd with a roaring tourists' commentary of Italy. The Juniors, whom the Seniors knew to be their chief competition, featured a Greek extravaganza, using the Parthenon as a symbol of Greece's Golden Age. Finally, the Seniors chose Egypt as their nation, creating pyramids and harems on a colorful backdrop.

On a crisp, sunny Thursday, Thanksgiving arrived. The day promised excitement for all of the classes and for East's football team. Few doubted that the East football team would emerge victorious, despite the efforts of a tough West squad. For the participants in the floats, however, no one was sure what to expect.

At ten o'clock convertibles began to flood the track. Designated-drivers maneuvered their cars into place and the official competition among the classes began. Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors all performed before admiring spectators. Finally, the Seniors turn arrived.

and through a dynamic display of singing and acting, they recounted the story of one Egyptian pharaoh’s search for another wife to bear his son and heir. As the audience laughed and clapped continually, the performer’s hopes of winning soared.

Performances ended and the game began. East’s proud, undefeated team once again displayed its awesome offense and defense. Cheers rose as the Cougars pulled away to a comfortable lead.

Halftime arrived and Angela Lin, East’s Junior Miss, led the parade. The Freshmen with Seda Munis as their Queen, followed. Next came the Sophomores with Jennifer Dunfee and then the Juniors cheered and whistled as Alyson Poulis made her way around the track. No group received more applause than the Seniors with their four Homecoming Queens, Karen Haines, Andrea Rubio, Rhonda Litto, and Marybeth Braut. This applause further intensified when the exciting announcement was made: the Seniors and their won Homecoming!

As the game resumed, so did East’s offense. To the roar of the fans, they pulled away to a 35-16 victory. Reunited students, friends, and teachers laughed and cried amidst the frenzy of activity. For the Seniors especially, it was their day.

We're the best!
The greatest way to learn a foreign language and lifestyle is to live in that country, surrounded by its citizens and submerged in its culture. Cherry Hill East has responded to this realization by participating in distinct exchange programs to Germany, France, and Spain.

Occurring every even-numbered year through the German American Partnership Program and Mr. Moehlmann, the German exchange program allows approximately fifteen students to first host delightful German students and then to travel to Germany at the end of the summer. East students travel first to Göttingen, and then to Hamburg to live with their host families for two weeks. There, they attend school at the Gymnasium Wentorf and visit other exciting locations. The students observe both East and West Berlin, exploring the differences between the two societies.

Taking place every November, the French exchange program allows East students first to live with families in Salon de Provence and attend school at the Lycée de L’emperie. They are able to tour the region, visiting such places as Aix en Provence, Monaco, and Cote d’Azur. Finally, after spending three days in Paris, the students arrive home eager to host their French friends in the spring.

The Spanish exchange program enables students to live with families and attend high school in Seville for two weeks during the summer. They venture to such historical cities as Cordoba and Grenada and spend three eventful days in Madrid. Of course, they also have the opportunity to host their Spanish friends at the very beginning of the school year.

In each of the three programs, the fortunate students further enhanced their knowledge of a foreign culture and gained greater senses of international understanding. Of equal importance, they formed lasting friendships. It takes tremendous teaching to equal such an experience in the classroom.

POWDER PUFF
Football - Female Style

Flesh meets flesh. Grunt meets grunt. No, it's not quite the National Football League, but rather the Powder Puff football classic between the Junior and Senior girls. After training and practicing for several weeks, the combatants (as they certainly can be called) meet annually one seemingly peaceful October Sunday afternoon. Normally quiet and serene girls arrive on the field with names like "Killer" written on the backs of their shirts. Although in theory they then play a friendly game of touch football, the definition of the term "touch" often expands to include "pommel" and "bash". Tempers flare and spirits rise, as both teams strive to uphold the legacy of their respective classes.

In this past year's contest, bearing a strong comparison to trench warfare, the two teams pounded each other to a 6-6 tie. Although the Seniors scored first, the Juniors managed to score at the end of the game amidst controversial calls and harsh verbal blows. Along the sidelines, observing members from the entire East community cheered wildly for their particular favorites.

It was a game to remember, and the Seniors could take pride in the fact that though the score revealed a tie, they had in fact dominated the entire contest. They had, in their own way, upheld the glory of their class. Some, when no one else was assumed to be looking, even managed a quick smile here and there.
Imagine the cafeteria as a Great Hall for Elizabethan Dining—complete with banners bearing royal insignia strung across the ceiling and stained glass windows decorating the walls. Imagine each dining table formally dressed with a wreath of flowers and garland drapery; a head table where the royalty and dignitaries are seated. Add continuous live harp music, Madrigal singers, serving wenches, bawdy jesters and a three-course meal featuring a "boar's head" and wassail toast, and you have envisioned SHAKESPEARE ALIVE '88 as brought to life this fall.

Schools from all over the Delaware Valley were invited to participate in East's First Elizabethan Festival as conceived by Mr. Robert D. Nation, Festival Director and Ms. Peggy Beck, N.J.C.T.E. Liaison. The event coincided with the final performance of the highly acclaimed production of ROMEO AND JULIET. Hundreds of students who visited East that day were treated to workshops in stage combat, make-up, and improvisations while many competed in special categories such as Scene, Soliloquy and Sonnets. Hallway booths had displays where students could try their hand at Brass rubbings of Shakespeare, and writing their own sonnets. Several special guests, Mr. Paul Barry from the N.J. Shakespeare Festival, Mr. Joseph Mays, an expert on ancient instrumentation from Glassboro State, and Jude Chanzer of Rutgers University Theatre gave lecture demonstrations to the delight of aspiring thespians.

The South Jersey Regional Theatre contributed two professional actors who performed modern improvised interpretations of MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM and the Ritz Theatre loaned some scenery that was used as decoration in the "Great Hall." Mr. Thomas Weaver took groups of students on tour of the set and stage facility of which East is so proud. Soon it was time to "Feaste".

Many drama and music parents contributed their time and energies to transform the cafeteria and arrange for the catering. The Feaste commenced with the entry of the royal court in costume accompanied by a trumpet fanfare. Cherry Hill Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Philip Esbrandt, portrayed Cardinal Wolsey. Ms. Beck played Anne Boleyn, and Mr. Nation was King Henry XIII. Musicians and dancers were on hand for the entire evening and awards for the day-long competitions were announced during dessert. The culminating event for the excitement and grandeur of an Elizabethan Festival must be a performance of a Shakespearean Play. Dinner guests were escorted to the theatre to attend the closing performance of our spectacular ROMEO AND JULIET with a full-house and standing ovation; a rejuvenation of love for the classics was evident.

Mr. Nation saw the festival as "a root experience." He hopes the seed that he has planted will flower and grow as other schools take up the idea. Meanwhile, ensconced in memories, Cherry Hill East knows that SHAKESPEARE was truly ALIVE in 1988.

e held the sword and pointed its tip toward his enemy’s heart.

He said menacingly, “What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word, as I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee. Have at thee, coward!” The sword flashed, ready to slice through his opponent’s skin.

In one of the school’s most ambitious productions, ROMEO & JULIET graced East’s stage with danger and excitement. Although traditionally the drama department holds smaller productions in the fall, it undertook a challenging task: to bring Shakespeare to East and make it easily understandable as well as enjoyable. Unfortunately, most people cannot comprehend the genius of Shakespeare’s works. With Mr. Robert D. Nation as director, Mr. Thomas Weaver as technical director and Mr. Charles Currier as fight choreographer, ROMEO & JULIET comes alive. A special congratulations should go to Jen Cusato, the first student dance choreographer.

ROMEO & JULIET has many surprises surrounding the set. First, live animals were featured in the show. A horse for the Prince and a miniature donkey for Friar John received a warm round of applause as they made their appearance. A fountain, complete with running water and goldfish, focused attention towards the center of the stage. The famous couple's first meeting alone take place on a balcony with its own rose trellis. After several weeks of fencing lessons, the males in the cast used actual swords and daggers for the show's fight sequences. With all of these promising indications of a good show, ROMEO & JULIET became the first Shakespearean play performed for six nights instead of the usual four.

Those who participated in the production found it memorable and those who watched found it unforgettable. No eye was dry closing night as the good Friar Lawrence said,

"For never was a story of more woe, Than this of Juliet and her Romeo."

Holiday Party For The Handicapped
F.O.P. Party 1988

When the halls of Cherry Hill East look like Santa's workshop, with over two hundred "elves" bustling through the hallways, cutting out pictures and decorations, painting signs, and drawing, it can only be one time of the year - F.O.P.!

Each year the Fraternal Order of Police and the Cherry Hill Rotary Club sponsor a magical Christmas party for over fifteen hundred physically and mentally handicapped children and adults. Traditionally held at the Cherry Hill Hyatt, this celebration is the result of over a month's work put in each day, and many nights, by the students of East.

The faculty supervisor for this grand occasion is Mr. Fred Belchikoff, and this year's overall chairpeople were David Cohen, Jennifer Koffler, and Marci Shapiro. They selected whom they felt to be the hardest-working students to attend this year's party on December 19, 1988. This rewarding experience has left the East students and their guests with senses of happiness, love, and appreciation.
Each year, the Junior Class sells literally thousands of candy canes and adjoining messages to students throughout the school. Along with establishing itself as the largest fundraiser in the school, this activity has fueled rounds of enjoyment as students compare the quantity, quality, and most importantly, the sources of their candy cane messages on the day before winter vacation. Some students simply send them to their friends, some may send them to their teachers (hmm...), some may send them to their loved ones and fold them into tiny squares, and occasionally, some send "secret admirer" messages. All, however, express similar feelings of friendship to warm their friends throughout the weeks of winter.

Senior English Classes Have That Holiday Spirit

On December 14, Dr. John Vivone and his senior English classes held the annual "Holiday Party" for the underprivileged children from the Camden area. This year, 20 pre-schoolers were the recipients of candy, food, toys, a visit by Santa Claus, Brendan "B" Graham, and a great deal of genuine love. Preparations were begun in September as the seniors made personal contributions of over $100. Because so much money was collected, the seniors sent donations to provide the homeless with Thanksgiving dinners. Dr. Vivone was especially proud of his seniors because, "This year, my seniors brought renowned acclaim to East because of their athletic prowess and gifted theatrical and musical abilities. Now, everyone knows they have hearts of gold, too. They are the reasons why Cherry Hill High School East is called the 'Home of Champions,' and I am just most fortunate to know such phenomenal individuals."
BLOOD DRIVE — It doesn’t hurt to give

December is a traditional time for giving, and as usual, our caring and generous students gave blood at East’s two Blood Drives. Persuaded by a variety of pleas, Juniors and Seniors lined up to help those in need.

Building on East’s reputation of being the 1987-1988 Penn-Jersey Group Four donor leader, this year’s drive set out with even higher goals than in years past. Over two hundred students volunteered to work at the two drives, helping to schedule, serve doughnuts and orange juice as energy boosters, and assist the nurses. Some even dressed up as “blood drops” and solicited potential donors. All of these volunteers certainly helped to lubricate the wheels of the Bloodmobile.
Of course, the blood couldn't flow without the work of this year's chairpeople. Although the two drives lasted four days, these leaders spent many weeks preparing by attending workshops, holding meetings with workers, and signing up volunteers and donors.

Those who have braved the needles, the Red Cross volunteers, and our own volunteers and chairpeople all helped to create two productive, life-saving drives. They were able to give others blood, a gift of life more precious than any other holiday present.

LID SYNCE
The third annual Lip Sync Night, run by Brad Yarnell and Melanie Santos on January 10, 1989, was one of the most talent-laden productions seen at East in many years. Twenty-one acts, from one-man shows to group extravaganzas, dazzled the packed audience with clever choreography and exciting dancing.

When all the “syncing” and judging was over, prizes were awarded for the top four acts. Tied for fourth place were the “Chip-Punks,” Drew Smith, Lee Diamondstein, and Fred DeMarco, for their rendition of “Rockin’ Robin,” and the group “Body and Soul,” Kathy Serra, Stacy Wolkoff, Sandi Kim, and Milli Apelgren, for their performance of “I Want to Have Some Fun.” In third place, the duet of Sean Mohen and Jaih-mel Forchion performed a hilarious, particularly well-mouthed version of “Yakety Yak.” Performances which nearly rivalled East’s own drama productions garnered the top two prizes. “Senioritis” earned second place, a group of six dancing, poodle-skirted girls, Amy Beringer, Amy Claffe, Wendi Nardi, Lisa Ferrell, Ina Li, and Marci Shapiro, and their six “tough,” greased-back dancing partners, Eddie Healey, Jay Young, John Mastrangelo, Mark Harrison, Brian Rothenberg, and Graham Hill. Finally, the “Wandering Bohemians,” Eric Asalon, Matt Markoff, Jason Fiabone, Steve Mathai, Larry Zazzo, Prince Lal, and Mallie Trazyck, deservedly earned first place for what was much more than a mere performance of Queen’s “Bohemian Rhapsody.” Their combined light-show, theatrics, and thematic analysis astounded and awed both spectators and judges alike.

Seniors Darryl Mapp, The “Insane Dough-Heads,” and “Rudel” also displayed outstanding talent. The night was a tremendous success for everyone involved. Next year’s performers will have a very tough act, or rather acts, to follow. In fact, equalling this year’s array of talent may prove to be impossible.
Not only was the success of Peter Pan evident from the very first day of ticket sales, but its technical aspects proved to be the most challenging and entertaining in the history of East's stage productions. While Peter Pan, the boy who never grew up, could use fairy dust to fly, the technical crew was forced to think of a more practical way to enable the leads to take to the air. Enter "Flying by Foy," the only corporation worldwide with the unique apparatus to safely propel actors and actresses through space. With their wizardry, the characters could depart for Never Land by means of wires which, although as thin as pencils, could easily support the weight of a car.

Naturally, no show would be a success without the effort and talent of East's students and drama department. Over 175 students (including elementary school boys from various local schools), contributed their efforts and talents, acting on stage, working behind the scenes, and playing in the pit orchestra. Mr. Robert Nation directed the actors and actresses, while Mr. Thomas Weaver directed and designed the set. Mr. Charles Currier coordinated the flight and sword sequences, and Mrs. Marybeth Quinlan choreographed the dances. The show was likewise grateful for the efforts of Mrs. Joan Bruno for organizing the playbill, Mr. David Hearn for teaching the cast how to fly, orchestra conductor Mr. Bruce Yurko, Mrs. Lisa Wilson, vocal coach, and Pierre's for providing the costumes which could transform students into bloody pirates, fierce Indians, misguided Lost Boys, and irresistible animals.

By the end of each show, everyone, participant or spectator, had realized that there would always be a small child within each of us. Peter Pan reminded us to always keep our youth, our faith, and our spirit of freedom. With such wonderful thoughts, we could rise into the air, take the second star to the right and fly directly to Never Land.

Music
The Top Of The Scale

Any student who has traveled down D-wing is familiar with the sound of music floating through the air, the old ratty pianos, the kids playing their music and, yes, sometimes doing homework or just gossiping in the practice rooms. But, the students from D-wing are most familiar with the high degree of excellence that the various musicians have achieved. However, this high caliber of music was obtained not through mere luck, but through hours of long practices during and after school, teachers' dedication to their students, and the students' own desires to excel. The dedicated hours have paid off, earning East's music department many honors and accolades including invitations to play in Russia and during President Reagan's visit to Voorhees, as well as outstanding results in various adjudications. The musicians from D-wing have given East something of which to be proud.

Some of the groups that have recently been recognized are the Orchestra and the East Singers, who were invited to perform at Carnegie Hall. Unfortunately, due to school policy conflicts, they were unable to perform. Year after year, the entire music department proves their excellence by qualifying a large number of students for All-South Jersey, All-State, and All-Eastern. The East musicians have repeatedly performed outstandingly, earning them the recognition they so richly deserve.

For those of you who still do not know who they are, these musicians are easily identified throughout the school. They usually carry bags of candy, not merely to entice dieters, but to pay for various out-of-state performances. They can also be easily spotted carrying instruments or humming a song. On the surface, it appears easy - play a few numbers for the President, sing a few songs for some judges, but the musicians know that it is much more than that. No matter what musical group, the students are bonded together by their desire to achieve perfection, enduring long practices and helping one another in the pursuit of excellence. These bonds cannot be broken as long as they continue striving forward. The students demonstrate not only perseverance and dedication, but also their desire to illuminate East with the gift of music.
Vocal workshop is East's introductory choir where students learn the fundamentals of singing. It is for students who sing for social as well as aesthetic reasons as they are given the chance to interact musically with others and explore their capabilities. They perform a variety of music while developing their voices and are able to display their talents during the various concerts at East.

Chansons is a balanced group of the more mature female soprano and alto voices. They study octavos and major forms of the choral tradition. Their advanced abilities allow them to perform a variety of choral arrangements arranged specifically for all women. These students perform at concerts, assemblies, and community activities.
East Singers provide opportunity for young men and women to excel in vocal performance and to expand their vocal training.

The students study a variety of choral pieces over various time periods which helps to further develop their appreciation of music. Through hard work and long practices these students achieve a high degree of excellence and are presented with many accolades. The group performs at concerts, assemblies, and community activities, representing the top echelon of the choral department.

March On Florida

Marching Cougars Band Trip

All those long afternoons of practice and precision, memorization and cadence, spit and polish finally paid off! For four glorious days in May of 1988, the Cherry Hill East Marching Cougars partied and performed at DisneyWorld in Orlando, Florida. The band, under the superb direction of Mr. Roy Hough was invited by the directors of DisneyWorld based on a reputation of sparkling and fine performances.

The 150 member band ensemble gave rousing performances and loved every minute of it as they marched down Main Street and around the world landmark of Epcot Center. They strutted their stuff, soaking up the sunshine, sounds and sights of this fabled fantasy land. With the cheers of Mickey and Donald and crowds of spectators ringing in their ears, the East Marching Bands returned to Cherry Hill with a lifetime of wonderful memories to relive through pictures and special souvenirs.

When I am asked what encourages me most about this nation today, my answer is the spirit of our young people and their faith in America's future. In my travels, I have met the young people of today as the key to the great American patriotism. Someday, historians will look back and pinpoint you by the thousands and I've seen your enthusiasm and renewal of the 1980's.

Despite the years which separate us, I believe we are bound together by the common thread of our great love for America. We know that only in America can one find an abundance of what makes success possible for everyone -- opportunity. Every man, woman and child in this country can reach for the stars and challenge the limits of human potential. As long as we have faith in each other, the opportunity to do courageous to dream great dreams, and the opportunity to do its best, nothing will halt the progress of our nation and its people.

Each generation adds to the legacy our forefathers established. I pray that my generation will pass on a healthy economy, and the chance for every American to realize the promise of the American dream. We are a people who know no other way of life than freedom. Our liberty is the original legacy of our forefathers, to keep and cherish and protect it. When it is yours to keep and nurture for future generations, remember that this beloved inheritance can be increased only with strength and vision. Today you stand on the threshold of the future and the many challenges it will pose. You can start preparing now. Approach your studies with enthusiasm and dedication, I have never heard anyone regret working hard doing so. You have never heard anyone regret not doing so. You can decide your future and you can make that decision now. I have heard many regret not doing so. I believe that each and every one of you will meet the challenge of the future with great success. God bless you.

HISTORIC VISIT
PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1988
"MAIN STREET"
VORHEES, NEW JERSEY
The crowd of over five thousand strong cheered wildly as the parade of police cars and limousines pulled into the Main Street arena. With the Cherry Hill East Marching Band playing his official welcome, President Ronald Reagan, accompanied by New Jersey Governor Thomas Kean and Senate candidate Pete Dawkins, left the motorcade and ascended the red, white, and blue banded platform. For them it was the end of a long, arduous campaign trail, but their enthusiasm was felt by the crowd as the President praised the Main Street concept and especially acknowledged the marching bands of Cherry Hill East, Cherry Hill West, and Eastern Regional, each selected to play for this momentous occasion.

Our own marching band played a vital role in the unforgettable occasion, frequently filling the crowd with patriotism during breaks between the speeches. Rousing strains were also heard during the introduction of each speaker, and the musicians were provided with an opportunity to meet and talk with some of the great political figures of 1988.

This once-in-a-lifetime honor of playing for the President of the United States is just one example of the respect felt for our fine high school. Not only was this a special event for the students involved, but it added yet another accolade to the fine reputation of Cherry Hill East.
String Workshop is for those who play violin, viola, cello, or bass. For the beginner to intermediate string player, this group introduces ensemble playing and teaches the techniques that are relative to all string players. These students perform at school concerts.

Concert Band is East’s introductory band for any student who plays a band instrument. It offers an opportunity to perform with others, to improve musically, to explore new styles of music, and to express oneself creatively. The sections of the band are the brass, woodwinds, and percussion.
Symphonic Band is for those instrumentalists who have advanced beyond the introductory level of playing a band instrument. It is comprised of brass, woodwind, and percussion sections. The students in this organization learn a variety of band music, gaining much experience with different music styles, improving their playing technique. They perform at concerts and recitals.

Wind Ensemble is a group of outstanding brass, woodwind, and percussion instrumentalists who study and perform difficult music literature scored for musicians with the most advanced technique. The students of this organization represent the top of the band department. They have won many awards and have a reputation for excellence in both commitment and performance.
Auditions: Anxiety Attack

The halls are filled with students; anxious looks cloud their faces. As heartbeats race, so do the tempos as music is prepared for auditions. Scales can be heard; feet pace back and forth, as the same song is repeated over and over. Suddenly the door creaks open, and the student leaves the room with a look of horror on her face. "I did so badly!"-first musician. "Trust me, I did worse."-second musician. "No. You don't understand. I totally messed up my sight reading. It wasn't anything like what was on the sheet!"-first musician. "Oh shut up! I didn't even get past the scales!"-second musician. "It doesn't matter. It's finally over."-first musician.

The many talented musicians at East are familiar with this scenario. Throughout the year hopes are crushed and dreams are obtained as audition time rolls around. Whether it is for All State Orchestra or East Singers, students surpass their expectations and ultimately reassure themselves of their own abilities. They gain confidence from past experience, from the companionship of fellow musicians with the same task, or just from plain inspiration. Overall, although it is an extremely stressful time, these talented students rise above their nervousness as they perform with the excellence that they have practiced so long to achieve.

MUSIC IS THE REFLECTION OF ONE'S OWN SOUL

Freshmen - a group of innocent boys and girls who gradually realize that elevator pass bargains are hardly bargains and that swimming pools exist at East only if the students are betting on the Summer Olympics. Similar to tourists in a foreign nation, although the tourists have a much better chance of communicating with the natives.

We were all freshmen once - tiny, scared, and lost. The last class to fuse from Beck and Heritage Junior High Schools, we were faced with new surroundings and new opportunities. As the first weeks passed, however, we grew wiser, discovery continues to page 121.
ing how to thread through C-wing intersection and learning not to ask seniors for directions. By the end of September, we were in the midst of Spirit Week, escaping from the threat of Hurricane Gloria to our own tropical version of "Hawaii." Although we upheld the time-honored freshmen tradition of finishing in last place, we were beginning to unify as the Class of 1989. Elections were held, officers were elected, and we began to adhere to the golden rule of "getting involved." More and more of us had to take the late bus, staying after school for a variety of activities. Our class adjusted to the school's recently increased academic requirements, taking new courses as Western Civilization and reading such classics as The Odyssey, Les Miserables, and A Separate Peace. Many of us took advantage of East's production of Charley's Aunt as much-needed comic relief between our studies and activities. On those nights when we could not attend such a show, we watched Moonlighting, Miami Vice, and The Cosby Show. Homecoming finally arrived in late November, and our first-place float, "The Wizard of Oz," revealed how much we had learned in only two short months.

Winter soon arrived, sending us swarming indoors to Cherry Hill's new "food courts" and to the school gymnasium to watch East's highly touted athletic teams. We spent our free moments listening to Bruce Springsteen, the Grateful Dead, and Sting. Some of us were even lucky enough to see our favorite performers in concert. Filled with school and holiday spirit, we helped undertake the F.O.P. Rotary Christmas Party and numerous S.A.D.D. functions. Each of us learned new tricks and replies from Ferris Bueller's Day Off, but for some reason we weren't as successful as Ferris. Sadly, we turned from replies to remorse upon hearing about the explosion of the Challenger and the death of its seven astronauts. Tragedy again dominated the news when we were harshly reminded of the lessons of health class upon hearing of the fatal, alcohol-related car accident of the Flyers' goalie, Pelle Lindbergh.

The arrival of spring helped to melt the sadness from our hearts, as East's production of Funny Girl revealed how "lucky" we really are. We continued to play for East's numerous athletic teams, copy will continue to p. 122 from the freshman to the varsity level. After taking the new High School Proficiency Tests, we made one last effort through the “home stretch” of school, trying to study in spite of the warmer weather. For a while we still worked hard in such classes as QFFS and Keyboarding, but soon we became occupied with more important things, from the Freshman Luau to the class trip to Great Adventure. We participated in or enjoyed watching East's many performing and theatrical arts presentations, from orchestra concerts to our One-Act, The Good Doctor. Electing new class officers and representatives for the upcoming year, we began to look forward to the time when we would no longer be East’s “baby cougars.” Finals still remained, however, and only after hours of studying and trying to remember what we had learned in September were we able to hurdle this one remaining obstacle in our path to summer vacation. At long last, after ten months of bearing our title so humbly, we were able to pass on the title of “Freshmen.” We now inherited the role of Sophomores.

Sophomores - a group of semi-innocent boys and girls who think they are much less naive and innocent than they still really are. Similar to tourists who think they know the native language and then find out there is so much more to learn.

As Sophomores, with all our knowledge of life at East, we were now ready to begin to create our own lasting legacy. During Spirit Week, we terrorized the school as the “Little Class of Horrors,” nearly winning the famous jump-rope contest. We concentrated on our most important class, Driver’s Education, anticipating the permits that hopefully would be ours. Soon, the halls of East appeared like our Spirit Week decorations, for Dracula had arrived with all of his bloody friends. We eagerly strolled past the cobwebs and monsters to see our friends perform in the spectacular production. Many of us spent our Saturdays playing for or watching East's fall athletic teams, but unfortunately, some of us spent them in ways reminiscent of The Breakfast Club: attending the newly-instituted Saturday School for disciplinary reasons. By Thanksgiving, Homecoming had arrived and we were able to “start spreading the news” of our glorious, victorious homecoming float, “New York.”

We prepared for winter, buying tickets to go indoors and see such performers as Peter Gabriel, Genesis, and Billy Joel. If we couldn't see a concert in person, we could come extremely close through listening to the recently released Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band Live 1975-1986. We were able to attend East's new productions, Lyp Sync and Battle of the Bands, proudly cheering as we watched our friends perform. Crocodile Dundee arrived from Down Under, as "What's up, man?" became replaced by "G'day, mate!" However, events such as the hotel explosion in San Juan, the numerous embroilments in the Middle East, and the Amtrak collision in nearby Maryland reminded us that we should definitely take time to stop our activity and appreciate the family, friends, and life we enjoyed.

Spring arrived, and we took breaks from reading Othello and from studying periodic tables to watch our previously shaven friends transformed into the rogues of Man of La Mancha. We continued to "Dream the Impossible Dream" by asking Cotillion Dates, receiving our Class Rings, and saying the secret password that would allow us to enter what was no longer the cafeteria but our own Roaring Twenties "Cotton Club." East then transformed from red and white to black and orange as we cheered on our beloved Flyers even after their heart-breaking defeat in the seventh game of the championship series. We watched our friends perform and win scholarships for their roles in the Class One Act, "The Gloaming, O My Darling," and soon were preparing for our second bout with finals. These were mastered, and after another year of excitement and education, we proudly took our place as Juniors, among the upper realm of the school.

Juniors - a diverse mixture of students, some who still think they're freshmen and sophomores, some who think they're seniors, and many who realize that junior year can combine the best of both worlds. Like tourists who know the native language, know all the tricks to travelling around, but who speak with just enough "tourist" accent that the waiters still help them by speaking in English.

At last we were honored members of the "upper half" of the school. Our first few weeks witnessed major changes, as our beloved class principal, Mr. Brainin, retired amidst a mass of farewell tributes. Spirit Week arrived, and our modern-day "Flintstones" not only established a new record in the jump rope contest with twenty-four jumpers, but nearly defeated the senior class overall. A few weeks later, on a grim Saturday morning, we marched off to school to take the P.S.A.T.'s. After all the scores had been tabulated, our class would boast of twenty-two National Merit Semifinalists, the most in the state. We next prepared for our first Powder Puff football game, with some of us even driving there with our newly-acquired licenses. Although we lost the game, we gained experience to lead us in the following year. We all felt the wrath of October's stock-market plummet, exacerbated by the controversy surrounding Supreme Court justice nominees Robert Bork and Alan Ginsberg and Lt. Colonel Oliver North. With much more excited and happy feelings we packed the stadium to watch East's conference-winning football team, and on a freezing Friday night in early November, hundreds of us cheered for our boys' soccer team as they copy continues to p. 124 played in the state championship at Trenton State College. As 1987 marked the bicentennial birthday of our nation's constitution, it also marked the production of our Nation's (Mr., that is) fall show, the Spirit of America. We watched our friends sing, dance, and represent numerous aspects of America's glorious past. Fall soon drew to a close, but not before our "Jetson" float performed at Homecoming, continuing our new Hanna-Barbara tradition.

We ushered in winter with armfuls of holiday spirit, as our annual Blood Drive led South Jersey in blood donated and as our Candy Cane sales spread both spirit throughout the school and money into our class treasury. Maintaining this sense of caring and warmth, many of us helped make the F.O.P./Rotary Club Christmas Party for the physically and mentally handicapped an outstanding success, and many of us comforted the area's terminally ill young cancer patients through the Emmanuel Cancer Society. When winter break finally arrived, we caught up on our movies by watching a bountiful winter crop, including such hits as Three Men and a Baby, Wall Street, Fatal Attraction, Broadcast News, and Good Morning, Vietnam. We traveled through American Literature, making difficult stops at Hawthorne's seventeenth-century Massachusetts and Melville's nineteenth-century roaring seas. Elections were held for new class offices, and when feeling the need to relax from our studies, we listened to Bruce Springsteen, the new Dirty Dancing soundtrack, and numerous other groups.

The weather began to warm up, people began to ask out prom dates, and in every way, spring was upon us. On April 30th we realized that we would be “Forever Young” during our Junior Prom in the Phoenix Room at the Racetrack. We had to guard our pockets against scurrying little vagrants when Oliver hit the stage, and as the weather became ever hotter, we spent more time at the pool on weekends. However, we still had to concentrate and study for finals, for we had all been told that this year’s grades were most important for getting into college. We managed to get through these last tests, and at last we were prepared to put the final touches on our legacy, to head East as its senior class.

Seniors - A collection of boys and girls who know that they are the oldest and most experienced students in the school, and who use this age and experience to their utmost advantage. Like true natives, eager to introduce and possibly torment the new “visitors” to their culture.

Before ever stepping into school that first week in September, we all had changed in a profound manner. We were Seniors now, complete with appropriate attitudes and parking spaces. Many of us forsook the old yellow bus for the opportunity to drive to school, and the great parking-sticker lottery seemed to determine the fate of many of our lives. Our grade-level office once again witnessed a major change, for when Mr. Gallagher advanced to the position of acting overall principal upon Mr. Cost’s becoming the district’s assistant-superintendent, Dr. O’Breza became our new class principal. We easily adjusted and next turned our interests towards the Senior Class Picnic and an event which for the Class of 1989 will go down in infamy - Spirit Week. Al- though we lost that ill-fated seven-day extravaganza, we did retain our perennial status as jump rope champions. Enough said. Throughout the next month, we watched our school colors slowly turn from red and white to Dodger Blue, as East became known as the “Home of Orel Hershiser.” This remarkable graduate garnered an entire trophy-case worth of post-season awards, causing “Orel exams” to spread throughout the school. Orel exams turned to oral debates as the presidential election between Michael Dukakis and the eventual victor, George Bush, rolled to a conclusion. President Regan himself recognized the importance of the Cherry Hill vot- ers, making a grand appearance with his fellow politicians at the newly constructed Main Street complex, where the East Marching Band greeted him with strands of welcome. When all the sound-bites and spin-doctors had finally disappeared, we witnessed the first changing of the president since when we were in grammar school. No intrigue or excitement of the election, however, could compare to that which appeared on East’s stage in the fall production of Romeo and Juliet, which was accompanied by a school-wide Shakespearean festival. Police throughout the Cherry Hill community reported a dramatic increase in balcony trespass, but otherwise the effects of “The Bard” on students seemed quite rosy and non-poisonous. We still had to struggle through the dreaded process of college applications, telling total strangers whom we would most like to eat with, but many of us found that this drudgery could be alleviated through the excitement of watching such events as the East football games. We watched our award-winning classmates, indicative of the success of all of the school’s fall copy continues to p. 126

athletic teams, rampage towards an undefeated season and a State Group Four Championship. Along the way we of course saw their Homecoming victory, which nicely accompanied the triumph of our class's breathtaking, hilarious "Egyptian" float in the morning's judging.

For the final time of our high school careers we welcomed the arrival of winter by helping others, through our efforts towards the F.O.P./Rotary Club Party, the Blood Drive, and the S.A.D.D. regional meeting. Sadly, however, a great deal of our holiday spirit was transformed into grief upon hearing of the Pan American Flight 103 bombing and the tragic deaths of its passengers, including a beloved East graduate, Rick Monetti. As the New Year approached, we pondered our own lifestyles and declared our annual resolutions. We returned to school, after watching such classic movies as Rain Man and Working Girl and listening to an array of heavy metal music, only to prepare for our long-awaited Senior Cut Day at the end of January. As everyone told their parents that "everyone else was doing it," we began to show visible effects of mounting college acceptances. Some of us also discussed with our parents what we learned in Family Living, perhaps teaching them a thing or two of which they were unaware. Lip Sync Night and the Russian mayors each graced the East stage, amazing students without having their participants speak a word of English. Quickly, however, only one city attracted many of our thoughts - Orlando. Over Presidents' weekend, we spent four days of rides and sun among the fuzzy characters of Disneyworld, laughing over old and newly formed memories.

The warmth of our trip spread north to the warmth of spring, as we watched our friends refuse to grow up in Peter Pan. And then the fated day approached - April 15th - when many of us would finally discover where we were headed for the upcoming four years. Some of us cried for joy, some for sadness, and the growing sense of nostalgia became still stronger among us. We were awed by our friends' performances in the Variety Show, and then we turned our sights towards one of the most-awaited nights of our high school years - the Senior Prom. We gladly strove to "Hold on to the Night" as we danced at the Hyatt House, also holding on to all our fond East memories. At last, however, our time had come to graduate and to pass the title of "Seniors" to the Class of 1990. But we would never pass on the legacy we had created, the times we had spent together, or the friendships we had developed.

These became ours alone to retain and ours alone to cherish forever.
Dear Members of the Graduating Class of 1989:

As I write this, America has just completed another mission in space and is about to elect another President. These two historic events remind us of the promise and hope that resides in America and its place in the world. You, the members of this year's graduating class, represent the promise and hope of education in a democracy. You will advance other frontiers and, at the same time, perpetuate the democratic tradition.

From my unique vantage point as both your teacher and your house principal, I have had the opportunity, along with my colleagues, both to instruct and guide you. In seeking your dreams, the questions you ask are as important as the answers you seek. The process of learning is more demanding and more rewarding than an accumulation of facts. Your school, Cherry Hill High School East, is more than a place where you have come to accumulate facts and to pass examinations. Cherry Hill High School East is a place where you grew and learned to ask questions about who you were and where you were going; it is a place where you were encouraged to ask questions, to find your way, and to chart your course.

East is a place where you have been encouraged and nurtured by your teachers and by your fellow students. Here at East there is something for everyone: art, music, business, sport, and academics. For all who attend East, I would hope that there are cherished memories of teachers, of fellow students, of achievement. As you leave East, there is both joy and sadness. There is joy for your new beginning in the workplace or the classroom; there is sadness for you leaving. You were here for but a short while, yet hopefully the smiles of friends, the work of your teachers, the encouragement of your coaches will remain with you always.

I wish you each happiness and success. I also remind you that in your individual achievements, you honor your school and your community. East has been your community for four years; in your success, may you look back to this community and those who nurtured and encouraged you: your teachers and your fellow students.

Sincerely,

John O'Breza
Acting Assistant Principal

To the Class of '89 -

You are about to embark on a new journey - one filled with bigger challenges, rewards and an occasional disappointment. But don't forget the journey you have just completed. There is much to learn from it. During our four years together we have held a dozen dances, managed several concessions, planned two proms, four homecomings, four spirit weeks and a host of other activities. Yes, it has been a successful four years. But that success did not just happen. You made it happen and therein lies perhaps the most important lesson of all. You can let life happen to you, or you can take control and make it happen for you! Some 650 students made things happen ... good things. I am proud to have been your adviser through it all.

Remember that the same determination, cooperation and hard work that paid off here will help you meet the challenges ahead. Thank you for being such an important part of my life. May each of you achieve whatever goals you may set for yourself. Thank you for your spirit and friendship.

Good Luck!

"Mr. D."

Class Adviser
Senioritis is the unconquerable force which slowly deteriorates a formerly diligent underclassman. The primary stage starts the first day we drive to school and arrive late. Then we help lost and bewildered freshmen (who barely reach our waists) find the pool, or we kindly sell them elevator passes at reduced rates. It's a great feeling to know that we were never that stupid or immature. Senioritis further intensifies at the first class assembly, when Mr. Cost and Mr. Gallagher reveal how great it is to be a senior (as if we don't know - we're seniors, we know everything).

The great feeling of this first stage of senioritis suddenly halts when report cards are issued.

TRUTHRUMOR

Now we avert our teachers less frequently by saying we're at guidance, and our early-morning fast-food breakfasts become ever rarer. Grades must be raised, for college applications must soon be sent. We work hard (for a short while anyway) and get through this second stage. Of course, we're still having a blast, thankful not to be underclassmen.

Having completed our applications, we begin Senioritis Stage III. Experiencing the legendary Senior Cut Day, we enjoy it mainly for the sake of principle and tradition. Soon we begin the countdown until the class trip to Florida. Again we start spending more time out of the classroom, our books become dusty and lost in our lockers. Looking at the juniors panicking over their upcoming SAT's, we simply laugh and reassuringly tell them that they'll never escape alive. Soon, however, April 15th arrives. It is far more significant than being just the last day to file income tax returns. For our Senior Class, this day marks the arrival of college notification letters.

Upon receiving our acceptances, we then enter Stage IV, a two-month tug-of-war between the complacence that accompanies the knowledge that we are "in college" and our continued efforts toward school. We enjoy our final chances to be together with friends but also dread our forthcoming separation. As time beckons, we must move onward, but not before we have one last chance to look back and reflect upon our final year at East and the rare experience called Senioritis. It is a definite reality for those who are willing to believe in it.

Boys' State

This past summer, male and female delegates from East attended respective sessions of New Jersey Boys' and Girls' State, held at Rider College. Sponsored by the American Legion, these sessions were a combination of the ultimate testing ground for political ideas, the perfect place to make new friends from every aspect of society, and a chance to truly appreciate the beauty of America's democracy.

For both sessions, the students were first divided into two political parties, the Federalists and the Nationalists, and then into "cities" of approximately sixty people. Here, they were given fictional Boys' State or Girls' State "Bucks" with which to run for city or party offices, from flag-waiving guidons who led their cities on walks or marches in the morning to city councilmen and municipal judges. Each city then combined with its brother or sister city to form a county, where new officials were elected, from Sheriffs to State Senators and Assemblymen.

Throughout the day, activities abounded, from seminars on law and paramedics to special C.P.R. courses. Many inside "State" jokes were developed, regarding such policies as the restrictions on speaking with members of the opposite sex or the prohibition against scandalously stepping off the sidewalks onto the grass. Meals were times to either discuss politics or simply hang out with new and old friends. Nearly every time all the delegates gathered together in the gymnasium, for both sessions, mass fun and excitement broke out, from uncontrollable "waves" to chants to good-natured verbal battles between the two parties.

Special features enriched each of the two sessions. For the boys, each afternoon consisted of a series of athletic competitions between the counties. At the end of each day, all the delegates solemnly gathered together to lower the flag and pay tribute to America's veterans and heroes. Furthermore, the State Senators and Assemblymen were able to conduct a mock session of "Congress" at the actual New Jersey Statehouse in Trenton, utilizing real tote boards to pass bills that would then be sent on to the actual State government. The girls were treated to special innovations as well, including a delegate-run talent show that revealed some of the best talent in the state.
Each of the sessions ended in a profound, lasting manner. Enormous gubernatorial primaries and debates were held, and “State” Governors were finally elected, utilizing actual state voting booths. The students gathered one last time to sing songs, revere the flag, and reflect upon their action-filled week. They would all return home to send thanks to the American Legion and send letters or call their new friends.
Each of these honored delegates were changed as both Americans and as overall people, for they had learned an equally great amount of information about both government and human nature.

For one month this summer, nine of Cherry Hill East’s most talented students had the opportunity to grow and learn beyond their expectations at the New Jersey Governor’s Schools. The Governor’s School in Public Issues was held at Monmouth College. In courses chosen by the students, the teachers enlightened their charges about the problems faced today by New Jersey, the nation, and the world. Topics ranged from international banking and world geopolitics to New Jersey’s various environmental problems. Our school’s two representatives learned about world issues and also discovered how to freely express their ideas.

East’s talented arts delegates nurtured their budding skills at the Governor’s School for the Arts at Trenton State College. When not honing their talents, the students met hundreds of fellow student artists in an environment enlivened by a spirit of creativity that pervaded all parts of this exciting time. No one left without learning a valuable lesson about self-expression.

This year, the Governor’s School in the Sciences, held at Drew University, provided a broad curriculum including college level coursework and lectures from noted figures to the three delegates from East. Although the Governor’s School in the Sciences was definitely academically based, the students had the freedom to roam the campus at will, attend weekly dances and sporting events, and venture into the exciting town of Madison, New Jersey.

No matter which one they attended, none of the scholars will ever forget the exciting summer, both socially and academically, that they spent at Governor’s School.

For three days in August, seven of East's highest-ranking Student Congress officers, Alison Bell, Lauren Brandt, Derek Braslow, Kim Boulmetis, Josh Friedman, Andre Hu, and Amy Shapiro, attended the New Jersey State Student Council Leadership Training Conference. They first travelled (all by themselves) the now-traditional route to the beautiful Fairview Lakes Y.M.C.A. campsite in Stillwater, New Jersey, where they were joined in Student Congress representatives from across New Jersey. They were then housed in bunks of ten people (each from a different school, with each bunk named after a different Monopoly-board property. For the next three days, they were enriched, entertained, and educated through a series of activities. Constant humor and a sense of fellowship accompanied them wherever they went.

During the day they attended classes which detailed the various methods of leadership, from organizational processes to goal-setting techniques. These classes were often presented in original manners, far different than any type of classroom or lecture experience. At nights the representatives joined together around campfires, songfests, and finally, a tremendous dance. The delegates were able to form friendships with other active students from across the state, often exchanging ideas and student council-related experiences. The only thing they didn't have time to do was sleep! But it was worth it, for the representatives not only had the time of their lives, but they came away with skills that would benefit the entire student body at Cherry Hill East over the course of the upcoming year.

First comes the warm weather, and then the anticipation of graduation. We are caught in a paradox, however, for with the joy of our imminent graduation comes the sadness of departing. Fortunately, to alleviate this sadness, seniors and upperclassmen may purchase "Kiss a Senior Goodbye" messages.

The appropriately sweet Hershey Kisses that the seniors receive may taste the same, but the messages that accompany them are as varied as the people who purchase them. Some underclassmen say goodbye to their older brothers or sisters, realizing how much they will miss their college-bound siblings. Others thank seniors for taxi-ing them to school each day. Many of the younger students thank the seniors for their help and guidance, and many express hope for continued friendships.

The seniors themselves seem to be caught in a transition stage between the past four years and the future. The messages that they send to their friends sing of good times, good laughs, and good memories; but a sense of sorrow mixes with this levity. These messages, filled with uncertainty about what the coming years will present, express hope for continued luck and most importantly, for the continued enhancement of special friendships.

Perhaps it is fitting that all the "Kiss a Senior Goodbye" kisses taste the same, for although the words they contain vary, they still express the same message - friendship.
Summer Achievers:

It is a tremendous honor for a school to boast of one winner in the National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Award in Writing; for this award is won by only seven hundred students across the nation. This past year, however, East and the Class of 1989 were proud to boast of three winners, Manish Butte, Scott Podolsky, and David Zellnik, the most of any school in the state.

First, students throughout the school were given the opportunity to submit pieces of literature to be judged by the East English Department. The top five writers of the school, at least according to this judging, were then selected to represent East in this national competition. The number of competitors allowed for each school is determined by student population of the particular school. These first-round survivors were then required to write timed essays regarding either the theme of “time” (how ironic) or that of “competition” (even more ironic). Additionally, they submitted pre-written samples of their writing, from poetry to prose. Each of these students’ selections were then judged by at least two members of a national panel of high school and college teachers. The students received scores combining the merits of both their timed and pre-written essays, and every state in the nation was awarded two winners for each of its congressmen.

East’s performance reflects the expertise and foresight of the English Department, as well as the innovation of its unique writing lab program. By the time the contest arrived, the competitors from East had become used to writing about any type of topic in any type of situation: The winning students almost had an unfair advantage over students from other schools, and this advantage will assuredly be maintained throughout the upcoming years.
Although many students stand out for their achievements in the fields of world affairs and national politics, two students deserve special attention for their work and dedication—Darren Fleishman and Michael Furlanetto.

This year Darren was the only student in the State of New Jersey to be selected to participate as a Senator on the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia's Model Senate Foreign Relations Committee. With Michael selected as his aide, Darren commanded the most influential stand upon the issued presented in this simulated political forum.

The day, December 9, 1988, began with the interviewing of witnesses dealing with the international drug trade. As a member of the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Operations, Darren's simulated Senator, Frank Murkowski (R, Ala.), took control of the meeting by drilling witnesses with killer questions created by himself and his aide. With testifiers falling left and right, Senator Murkowski gained the necessary support to build a plan supporting his ideas and passed legislation that would change the international drug trade for years to come.

After a working lunch of pizza and politics, an emergency meeting of the entire mock Foreign Relations Committee was called. The UN had just announced that a resolution had been motioned to removed the United Nations from its home in New York City, based on the recent rejection of a visa application to Yassir Arafat. The committee had to make a recommendation to the President concerning the United States next course of action. Darren Fleishman again in the form of Senator Murkowski, spearheaded a campaign to veto at the Security Council level any similar resolution passed, while a fellow Senator argued that a formal apology should be made to the Arab leader. Although the vote was close (10-8), the more liberal stand won, and Cherry Hill East's students were defeated for the first time and only time of the day.

The day then drew to a close as the Senators returned to their respective high schools. Darren and Michael enjoyed as well as dominated the day, and they know the experience gained at the World Affairs Council Model Senate Foreign Relations Committee will be useful throughout their lives.

This past summer, Haleh Rabizadeh was fortunate to be selected to take part in the annual Teen Leadership Program. This program, sponsored by the Jewish Community Center of Southern New Jersey, is intended to enhance the activities of youth groups, Hebrew schools, synagogues, and unaffiliated Jewish teens through educational workshops and seminars, including a mission to Washington, D.C.

The program's purpose is to create a sense of community commitment among young people, as well as a feeling of identity with the larger Jewish community. In doing so, it also further develops the leadership and reasoning skill of its eager youth.

In the highlight of the trip, a two day mission to Washington, D.C., Haleh attended briefings with many public officials, learning about both foreign and domestic issues of concern to the Jewish community. She now has the opportunity to develop a local community project related to a present Jewish issue, further helping her to understand her responsibility in building the future.
We all remember taking the PSAT’s junior year. They were supposed to be practice for the real SAT’s later on. However, for certain members of our Senior Class, these tests afforded the chance to score extremely high marks and earn national recognition and scholarship opportunities. Nineteen East students, whose scores ranked in the top one-half of one percent of the state’s scores, became National Merit Semifinalists, representing the highest total of any school in the state.

Additionally, students whose scores ranked in the top five percent of the nation were awarded National Letters of Commendation. These much-deserved honors have earned East further recognition as the Home of Champions.

Cum Laude Society

Each year, Cherry Hill East is proud to select the top five percent of the Junior Class as Members Designate of the Cum Laude Society. This "society," part of an eighty-three year old nationwide organization, both honors certain deserving East students and allows these members to enrich the rest of the school through a free, in-school tutorial service. By the middle of the following year, elections are held for new officers of the society, and the remaining students in the top fifteen percent of the Senior class are selected as Members-In-Course. Along with the previously selected members and the top five percent of the new Junior Class, these Seniors are all invited to take part in a grand induction ceremony, replete with speakers, choir performances, and the awarding of certificates. Our Senior Class members have been honored by having Mr. Pinzur as their Cum Laude Adviser when they were Juniors, and Dr. Eck as the Cum Laude Adviser as Seniors. These two fine educators have enabled our class's top-ranking scholars to enjoy times of recognition which they truly deserve.
turbulence required us to remain seat-belted for most of the trip, the contemplation of 96 hours of vacation was enough. Some of us even began tanning in our seats as we imagined the fabulous sun of the Sunshine State. Even though we left Philadelphia International Airport in 40° weather, we were in our shorts, ready for fun in that far off Paradise.

The nighttime touchdown was met with cheers as we inhaled our first breath of summer in a long time. At the Orlando International Airport, buses were standing by, ready to take us to the posh Days Inn Motel, our home away from home for the next four days.

At 6:30 A.M. the following morning, we sleepily rubbed our eyes, staggered to breakfast, ready for the official start of our vacation adventure. Breakfast was we would not lose valuable time boarding the buses which were to take us to Walt Disney World.

The first stop was the Magic Kingdom where we were totally enthralled by the thrills of the enchanted theme park. Some of us got right into a shopping mode as we explored the shops lining Main Street, USA, all under the shadow of Cinderella’s majestic castle. Here we bought our T-shirts, ears and other memorabilia which would serve to tell all upon our return that we were there. The rides were everything that we expected - spine-tingling, stomach-wrenching, laugh-filled. The most popular were Space Mountain and the tranquil classic, “It’s A Small World.” Many of us braved Thunder Mountain, the Haunted House and Mickey’s Birthdayland. The lines were long for Tom Sawyer’s Island and Mr. Toad’s
The geodesic structure of Spaceship Earth towered over the Disney complex. Inside, we were filled with the images of the future in the Horizons, Universe of Energy and World of Nations exhibits. As we migrated to the World Showcase, we experienced the flavors of countries such as Morocco, Norway, England, France, Japan and even our own United States. The possibilities for fun in these areas ranged from Norway’s thrilling Maelstrom to the marvelous Circlevision 360 of France and Canada to the outdoor theaters of England and Italy. After we tested out the rides, we visited the picturesque gift shops, in which everything from Moroccan fezes to $40,000 suits of Japanese armor could be bought. The day wound down with the stunning Laser Light Show where fireworks, lasers and spotlights combined to highlight each country’s pavilion, complete with a booming score of powerful music.

An exciting part of the Epcot restaurants with varied and new-tasting cuisines. These gourmet establishments offered the best of all worlds. We tried to sample them all! Eating was heightened by superb floor shows, which ranged from the proverbial Moroccan belly dancer to a rollicking German polka band. Those of us who braved the long lines and the long wait for seats never regretted it for a moment.

Not all of us remained in the Disney World Parks. Many of us ventured to numerous events offered by the monorail-equipped hotels. The beaches of Lake Disney offered a prime sun-soaking spot for those of us determined to sport a golden tan. The Cherry Hill brigade kicked up spray in rented speedboats between trips to souvenir and clothing shops of the Polynesian Contemporary and Grand Floridian hotels.

These three days were capped by an exciting six hours at the great water park, Wet ’N Wild. We defied the laws of gravity with the breathless seven story drop of the Der Stuka and dared to navigate the Roaring Rapids. The whip-like action of the Kamikazi the other slides to fill a thrill-packed morning. The afternoon had us braving the tricky Knee Ski which was followed by a relaxed bounce through the huge wave pool.

As we peeled off our bathing suits for the last time, we came to the realization that our sojourn to Florida was just about over. The four days in this land of eternal summer was only a taste of the warmth which was still a long three months off in New Jersey.

We were unusually quiet as we boarded the plane for our return trip home. Filled with remorse, we took a final breath of warm, humid Florida air. Once airborne, we received a Philadelphia weather report, furnished by the pilot - a chilly 34°F with possible snow! How could we relate this to 81°F and blistering sun? But we are Cherry Hill East’s resourceful seniors; a new thought quickly filled our heads. With the prediction of snow, there might not be school on Tuesday. Senioritis had officially begun!

Mr. B’s B-Day!

On Sunday, February 20, 1989, East students had more to celebrate than their Florida Trip; Mr. Fred Belchikoff became half a century old. That’s right, the Big Five-O! The entire East contingent gathered to commemorate the occasion, starting with B-Day cards signed by everyone who went on the trip. Then, as Mr. B was dining with Mrs. B, Mr. Haines and Dr. O'breza at Alfredo’s, he was surprised by a carafe of white wine and an Italian “Happy Birthday” serenade, courtesy of Jaime Fieders, Mike Furlanetto, and Jim Hough- wout (East’s Florida Trip Photographers). The celebration continued with a birthday party at the (in)famous Days Inn cafeteria. The day’s events were culminated when Amy Shapiro, Lauren Brandt, Candice Borenstein, and Lizzy Sufin sang their own unique version of a ’50s style Birthday song in Mr. B’s honor. From all of us at East: Happy Birthday, Fred!

ANGSTREICH
Scott, over the past four years, has taken advantage of the many academic opportunities at East. His favorite courses include History and English, and he feels that he has learned the most from the teachers of these courses. He hopes to major in these subjects or Political Science. Scott received an early acceptance from his first choice Princeton and plans to attend. After graduation, Scott looks forward to a career in law, journalism, or politics. While academics are important to Scott, he enjoys other activities as well. The most significant thing to remember when dealing with education, he says, is "learn how to learn, rather than how to memorize."

ADAM COHEN
In his four years at East, Adam Cohen has explored many areas of interest. He credits a great deal of his academic success to caring teachers - in particular, Mr. Dennis Smyth and Dr. Ann Eck. He especially enjoyed Mr. Simon's enthusiasm in History II as well as Mr. Kovalevich's down-to-earth style in English II. Athletically, Adam has been the captain of the Boys' Varsity Tennis Team and thanks Mr. Ipri for his care and support. As a newspaper editor and Student Congress member, he has also experienced extra-curricular activities at East. Finally, Adam would like to thank his family and friends for all their love and affection. Most likely, Adam will attend Princeton University in the fall.

FURLANETTO
Throughout his four years at East, Michael Furlanetto has mixed academics and extracurricular activities, enjoying both without overemphasizing either. He has especially enjoyed the classes in which free discussion was emphasized, and Michael thanks his history and English teachers for providing this opportunity. Michael also values his experiences with the debate team and the yearbook, and is deeply grateful to the advisers for these activities, Mr. Nation and Mrs. Hopp, for their support and guidance. No matter what career Michael eventually decides to pursue (as of now, he is undecided), he hopes to keep alive the spirit of learning which he has gained at East.

Who are these seven people? They are the top one percent of the 684 member senior class. They have accepted the hardest workloads, have taken the hardest classes, and have made the strongest commitment to academics, and these seven students have made it look easy. They are the Ranking Scholars of the Class of 1989.
RAVI D. GOEL
While at Yale University, Ravi hopes to prepare for a career in medicine and continue to pursue his interests in the political sciences. His best memories of the past four years were studying International Relations at the Andover Summer Session ’87 and exploring different facets of the sciences at the NJ Governor’s School in the Sciences ’88. He was elected President of the State Senate at Boys’ State and was the state winner of the Century III Leadership Scholarship. Ravi was a member of the two-time South Jersey Champion Varsity Debate Team and overall chairperson of the top South Jersey Red Cross Blood Drive Committee. Ravi thanks his friends and teachers for helping him prepare for the future.

KENNETH C. LIU
In the middle of his senior year, Ken “Arnold” Liu found out (to his complete surprise) that he was among the few, the proud; the ranking Scholars of the Class of 1989. To what does he attribute this great accomplishment? Although he will shrug and tell you it was all luck, the credit truly goes to how he lives his life: studying all night in his Slazenger T-shirts and Phillips Academy sweats; pumping iron in between studying; eating only nutritious foods; practicing his violin for long hours; and cruising South Jersey for girls. These past four years are etched in his memory and he thanks his family and friends for their great support. Ken has plans for medical school (but not how to pay for it). What pearls of wisdom does he wish to impart to all he knows? “Improvise! Adapt! Overcome!”

SCOTT HARRIS PODOLSKY
Scott extends his gratitude to the entire East community for making his four years at East so worthwhile and for preparing him for the future. He reflects upon his studies of English (from form means to the nature of reality), Spanish, and mathematics with a strong sense of overall enrichment. Scott also regards his playing soccer, running track, serving on yearbook, and as a Student Congress member, his terrific family and his closest friends as major factors in the development of his values and personal growth. He will continue his diverse academic and other pursuits at Harvard University where he will grow further in every sense of the word.

LAWRENCE JOSEPH ZAZZO
Larry considers scholarship to be a natural outgrowth of life itself. In the last four years, he has especially enjoyed Spanish with Dr. Eck, History with Mr. Simon, and English with Mr. Carr. Outside of strict academics, he has derived great spiritual and emotional fulfillment as a member of the Chamber and Madrigal Singers under the caring and able direction of Mrs. Wilson. Although unsure of a career, Larry would like to thank Cherry Hill East - its staff, teachers, and students - for such a fine education.
This year, two students from Cherry Hill High School East had the honor of attending the Rotary Youth Leadership Conference. Competition for these two positions was extremely fierce within the Class of 1989, but two seniors, Michael Furlanetto and Stephen Eigenrauch, outqualified the remainder of the field of applicants and were offered the opportunity to participate in this enjoyable and educational summer experience.

The Rotary Club of South Jersey selected students for this conference based on their academic standing, involvement in community and scholastic affairs, and the expression of leadership qualities. Only one hundred twenty five students in the entire South Jersey area were selected to participate in this 5-day event. In addition, Rotary clubs across the nation and world held similar meetings during the same time period, making the assembly an international event.

The South Jersey portion of the seminar took place at Stockton State College, located in Pomona, NJ, during the week of June 26, 1988.

Daily life at the Rotary Youth Leadership Awards Conference began at 7 a.m. with a healthy dose of calisthenics to wake up the students for an intense day of lectures. Breakfast was then served from the school's cafeteria, which surprisingly, was rather good. A morning speech was given by a noted political official, such as Senator Lee Laskin or Mayor Usry of Atlantic City. Then, the participants would break up into small discussion groups to contemplate the issues presented to them by the speakers. Following lunch, another lecture would be presented. Afterwards, students could participate in a variety of activities, ranging from basketball to weightlifting to swimming. Dinner would then be served around six-o-clock, and the attendees could prepare for the evening's activity. With evening engagements restricted to the Stockton State Campus, those at the conference enjoyed programs organized by the Rotary Club. The first night offered a dance which served as a great icebreaker for all. A pool party followed, which the participants seemed to like as well. The third evening, the Rotary Club sponsored a Careers Night, exposing the students to fields where they employ the leadership training they received at this seminar. The last night developed into a talent show in which every student at the Rotary Youth Leadership Awards conference had to participate. A banquet served as a goodbye ceremony, to the 1988 Conference.

The summer of 1988 was unique for Darryl Mapp, for he attended PEP - the Pharmacy Education Summer Enrichment Program. This program has been designed both to introduce pharmaceutical professions as career opportunities to high school students who are underrepresented in the pharmaceutical sciences and to help prepare these qualified students for their studies in this field.

The founders of PEP recognize the need for skilled ethnic minority professionals and believe that such people are also critically needed in New Jersey's urban areas. They therefore have also designed this program to increase interest, retention, and graduation of minority and underrepresented students at the Rutgers College of Pharmacy.

Darryl was one of forty students to attend this program, and it will help him in his transition from high school to college. It may have been a particularly demanding program, but, according to Darryl, it was definitely worth it.
While most of us were studying for final exams junior year, Lauren Brandt represented the Cherry Hill Township at the forty-second annual Girls' Citizenship Institute held at Douglass College, Rutgers University. This weeklong foundation is sponsored by the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, and its goal is to promote leadership and citizenship in women. Appropriately, its theme for the week was "Professions and Personal Growth."

During the day, the three hundred female delegates attended various sessions to hear female speakers from such diverse realms as the F.B.I., the business world, politics, and drug and alcohol prevention centers. At night, the scene changed as the girls enjoyed choir and orchestra concerts, fashion shows, and skits, all performed by their fellow G.C.I. (as it came to be known) representatives. Lasting friendships were formed and solidified during these recreational activities.

Cherry Hill East was proud to send Lauren to the Girls' Citizenship Institute, and she was grateful to the teacher committee who selected her. The only qualm Lauren had was taking final exams while everyone else was heading to the beach!

The Cherry Hill East Marching Band, honored this year by being selected to perform at President Reagan's visit of Voorhees, is the finest school-related musical organization in the South Jersey area. To maintain this excellent level of achievement, the band dedicates hours to practice and years to lessons. Although all students involved are committed to the activity, two particular individuals, Lewis Lazarow and Howard Maisel, went beyond normal band dedication by spending a week immersed in the George M. Parks Drum Major Academy.

Led by George M. Parks himself, the five hundred twenty-eight students learned various methods of band leading. Complex topics such as conducting, time signatures, and marching formations were addressed throughout the week. Practice was less than easy in the one hundred degree heat of the first five days of August, so the camp often turned indoors to learn through videotape and other visual media.

Although the seminar centered around education in marching band fields, students attending were able to enjoy the luxuries of West Chester University in West Chester, Pennsylvania. Delegates received three delicious meals from the school's cafeteria as well as the use of facilities of the campus. Students were not allowed to leave the grounds; however, the dedicated band members organized both sport activities and relaxation periods alike.

With the free time during the day left to the students' disposal, nightlife was organized by the Drum Major Academy Staff. The first evening, an icebreaker dance was held to introduce the attendees with one another. The second night was left free for student use; but with the arrival of the third sunset, a talent show overflowed with laughter and excitement. Finally, on the eve of departure, the Academy was treated to a Drum Bugle Competition, in which the world renowned Blue Devils entertained the audience and claimed first prize.

As this last evening turned to morning and the beat of the drums and the notes of the bugles died down, the members of the George M. Parks Drum Major Academy prepared to return to their homes across the nation. Lewis Lazarow and Howard Maisel came back to Cherry Hill East prepared to lead the Marching Band through another successful year of halftime shows and pep rallies.

The tell-tale symptoms appeared everywhere. The lethargy began two weeks earlier when rainstorms drenched Cherry Hill. In school, the students stared either dismally outside at the gray sky, or blankly at the hieroglyphics on chalkboards. Soon, symptoms reached epidemic proportions as teachers, too, became affected. A certain restlessness hung in the air as dark skies passed and sunshine appeared, beckoning to the students. The cure for Cherry Hill East's Spring Fever? The P.A.V.A.S. Festival.

This year, the festival provided the traditional mix of activities in the courtyard, while students performed throughout the day in the auditorium and the Little Theatre. East's Madrigals and the Belles of East greeted the students in the morning. In the courtyard, aspiring painters worked avidly on large canvasses. A messy but enjoyable feature, the pottery wheels invited many unsure hands to make bowls or vases. Home economic students made luscious chocolate-covered strawberries while gymnasts tumbled on the mats, demonstrating their physical fitness and energy. Examples of silkscreening dried in the sun, capturing the bright colors of the summer to come.

Enthusiastic spectators packed the auditorium. A troupe from the Pennsylvania Ballet Company appeared for two periods, offering most students their first glimpse of the classical world of dance. The head of the company chose some

In the beginning, new terminology and tasks seem to overwhelm. Cropping, pics, grease pencils, 3R, 3C, copy-fit and deadlines: it is serious stuff, this Yearbook. It is not sometimes, it is always. Everyday brings new challenges, requires new and better ideas. The goal is simple - design, illustrate, write, list, represent as many people as possible - in print. Provide them with memories for years to come. Project into the future. Provide a cherished memory, a fleeting glance back, a lingering oasis for another time.

A yearbook is personal. It is different things to different people and yet, it must do the same thing. It is a historical record, a scrapbook of memories, a visual diary.

A team effort somehow puts it together page by page and it miraculously comes together. It is the largest book we have ever produced and still there was not enough space for all we wanted to say and do.

It is not perfect, but it represents our best effort. We offer it with utmost pride. We think it is very special.

These are the people who sell the candy, do the typing and filing, copy over the layouts and fill in the cracks with hard work and enthusiasm.

Special Thanks to:
Adam Silver for photographic assistance (always “in a pinch”)
Mr. Robert Yellen, official photographer, Lorstan-Thomas Studios
Mr. Terry McGovern, Jostens’s American Yearbook Company representative.
Putting 698 pictures in alphabetical order with the right name, compiling the Index, typing pages and pages of copy - if it had to do with seniors, these guys did it!

Endless lists of names to match to faces in photographs, page layouts that never seem to have enough space - these are the things that try editors' souls.

To select the definitive elements that represent the trends and times of a "year in the life..." and weave them into the school environment and make sound unique.

The girls who solicit the ads, do the countless mailings, take the orders for books, keep the records and organize the "candy store" - "Thank you for shopping Yearbook!"

Students Against Drunk Driving is a truly innovative and viable institution. With the help of the administration and staff, SADD has branched out to every facet of both the school and the neighboring communities. This past year, SADD sponsored many fund raisers such as the sale of key chains, buttons and T-shirts to raise money for their many activities. In fact, SADD has played quite an active role in the lives of East students. The time and effort they have donated is obvious in the success of the many flyers, newsletters and meetings that have been conducted throughout the school-year. However, SADD’s greatest achievement lies in their statewide regional workshop held each year.

On February 8, 1989, over fifty schools sent five or more representatives to attend this extraordinary event. More than two hundred of East’s SADD members helped organize refreshments, registration and guidance for the various schools. The day began with an inspiring and educational presentation by Dr. Speth, the Gloucester County Medical Examiner. He was particularly informative as to how alcohol can impair reflexes, judgment and reasoning capabilities. Next, the students broke up into small groups for a “swap shop” of ideas where the different schools were encouraged to relate their experiences with activities and events. Finally, the groups reunited in the auditorium for a discussion with Dr. Jim Hughes, a therapist in a local Detoxification center. Both the advisers and the students gained a new insight into the problem of drunk driving and the stiff penalties that offenders must now face.

The regional meeting draws an incredible response from the entire student body here at East. Thus, SADD is able to continue their efforts during Prom season with many posters, flyers and even a wrecked car to show the danger involved in an alcohol-related accident. Students Against Drunk Driving can be proud of the growing awareness in the students of Cherry Hill East. Their dedication and hard work have come to symbolize this new realization of the value of human life.

Give the gift of love — ADOPT-A-GRANDPARENT. For the past seven months, students in this organization have been visiting Meridian Nursing Home near Evesham Road. Each month, an Adoption Ceremony is held in which the students “adopt” residents as their friends. They organize and participate in programs for the residents such as: Bingo, baking, bowling, and crafts. These activities provide companionship and support for the elderly while the students gain a feeling of self-satisfaction. Time is spent forming lasting friendships, sealing the gap between generations.

The opponents sit opposite each other, concentration etched in their faces. Kings, queens, and knights have gathered for this battle, which could last minutes or hours. Suddenly, the East player makes his move and say the words which conclusively end this fight, "checkmate". The Chess team has ended most of its competitions with this single word and victory has inevitably followed. Both the Varsity and Junior Varsity are ranked nationally as one of the top high school teams in the country. Chess consists of only six different pieces and opens with a choice of 24 moves, but using their wit and ingenuity, the team increases the number of possible outcomes, exponentially. The Chess Teams have developed unique strategies in this classic Medieval past time and, under Carmen Grasso as adviser, they have experienced wins on, and off, the board.

We've heard all the cliches - "practice makes perfect," "no pain, no gain" - but what really goes on at typical practices?

First, there are the "training" types of practices, where only the sheer forces of self-commitment and individual willpower enable the athletes to maintain their energy during this grueling ordeal of getting into shape for the season. Then there are "skill" sessions, where the players endlessly repeat specific maneuvers in order to fine-tune their talents for gametime. Interspersed between these sessions are thinking types of practices, sometimes called "skull" sessions, where plays or coaching philosophies are discussed and where the players' bodies receive a rest while their minds pick up the slack. Finally, players can look forward to occasional "fun" practices, usually unexpected contests that subtly reinforce all the previous skills and training.

These practices do more than just prepare the athletes as individuals. From the cheerleading squad to the football team, they also create strong senses of team unity and personal dedication that are as important as any single play or talent. Practices are not mere cliches; they are the training grounds where teams fuse together into winners.
Cheerleading

The 1988-89 school year marks an important organizational change at East, for there no longer exists a "football" cheerleading squad. In order to incorporate the use of the cheerleaders' spirit by all of the athletic teams, this group has now been termed the "Fall Cheerleaders." In addition, the junior varsity football team, for the first time in three years, has been graced by the presence of their own cheering squad.

Although Mr. Charles Musumeci, the coach of all the spirited girls, realizes that the junior varsity team does not have a great deal of games, he feels that having cheerleaders would provide fun and experience for everyone involved.

Twenty-six girls, chiefly juniors and seniors, comprise the varsity squad. They have elected Krista Peola, Sue Nicolazzo, Sandra Scott, and Anne Marie Sklenecar as their spirited captains. The junior varsity squad is comprised of fifteen girls, mostly sophomores and juniors.

Cheerleaders have always been a tremendous asset to Cherry Hill East. By expanding their presence even further, the school added to its overall sense of spirit.

Football

From the beginning of school, accolades and hopes were already surrounding the Cherry Hill East football team. The papers and college coaches flocked to talk with its members and coaches, all pronouncing the team as one bound for greatness. However, not until the season actually started could people realize the magnitude of power that this team possessed.

Although they played the first three games without their star running back, Brian Kurlej, they were still able to roll through their opponents behind the play of such blue-chip college prospects as Glen Foley, Steve Lobel, Ted Page, and Mike Zielinski. Over the course of the next five games they continued their tremendous display and garnered ever more attention and praise. Players such as Jon Sherman, Steve Ennengaugh, Ed Regan, Glenn Surowiec, Craig Matteo, and other important Juniors and Seniors further helped East to avenge past years’ losses to such traditional powerhouses as Camden, Pennsauken, and Washington Township. Glen Foley and Steve Lobel, billed as the best passing tandem in South Jersey, set new records for nearly every type of passing, receiving, and possible newspaper coverage category.

With a building band of fans, East entered the playoffs hoping to eliminate the emotional burden of last year’s first-round playoff loss. Without looking back even momentarily, they trounced Toms River South and then pummeled West 35-16 in a resounding Homecoming victory before over five thousand fans. Now they could prepare for the final, championship game.

East had never before won the Group Four Championship, but as they squared off against three-time champion Brick Township, the cougar sidelines were filled with hope and expectation. This team, they realized, was not bound for “good” or even a “great” season. It was bound for that one season that would go down in South Jersey history.

And fully aware of this potential place in history, East went on to trounce Brick Township 35-14 behind five touchdowns by Brian Kurlej.

The game marked coach Bo Wood’s 100th career victory, a special one to be shared with his fellow coaches, Tom Cook, Herb Fisher, Greg Godfrey, Mark Miller, Dick Oliver, James Peeler and ex-Eagle, Joe Pisarick. It marked the first unbeaten season in East’s twenty-one year history, and placed the permanent touches on a once-in-a-lifetime season. It was a season to make the players, their parents, the coaches, and the entire Cherry Hill East community proud for many years to come.

On December 12, 1988 at The 44th Annual Brooks-Irvine Memorial Football Club banquet, Cougar coach Bo Wood was awarded the Courier-Pest Trophy Cup for Outstanding Football Coach of a South Jersey team.

Imagine holding a straight fifty-lb. metal bar in each hand. Now, add weights to each side evenly until the weight matches that of the average East student. Next, try raising each arm until a perfect T is formed. Or if that's too difficult, how about just swinging the bar until it is over your head, but remembering to keep in control. Well, if that seems impossible, how about doing a simple backbend and flipping over. All of these actions are tough to do and unfortunately, most of us can't even get past lifting the fifty-lb. bar. Yet, gymnastics combines all of these tasks into a single effort, in which overall athletic ability is the key to success.

East's Boys and Girls Gymnastics Teams have had great success. With such notables as Rich Hyland, Scott Drucker, Evan Richman and Stephanie Harrison as members, the team executes moves which leave mouths agape during competitions and most memorably, during the Pep Rally. Few people can watch a gymnastics meet and leave unimpressed.

The sport is one of the most difficult to pursue because of the vast number of skills which must be developed. There are six events in which the boys compete: floor exercise; pommel horse; rings; longhorse vault; parallel bars and horizontal bars. The girls events consist of the balance beam, sidehorse vault, uneven parallel bars, and floor exercise. There is also the all-around competition for the individual and team.

Judges carefully watch the gymnasts execute their routines. Balance, endurance, flexibility, strength and grace must combine in order to earn a perfect 10.0. For each flaw the judge subtract points from the score. If body position is poor, movements slow or omitted, or the gymnasts fall or stop, the score, or mark, is considerably lowered.

Gymnasts are acrobats whose feet can be planted firmly on the ground routine after routine. Crowds may cheer or whistle but they cannot disturb the concentration or dedication gymnasts possess. What could a gymnast do with a fifty-lb metal bar? Just about anything I guess. Maybe even bend it.

Tennis, anyone? Tennis may not be your cup of tea, but more than forty girls work long and hard to make it theirs. Tennis is a game for everyone. These girls work diligently all year to prepare for that all-important season in the fall. The girls, who have won the Olympic Conference almost every year since East first opened its doors, are proud of this achievement. For the past fifteen years, Coach David Cole has been a crucial factor in their continued success. The girls take their matches seriously but have fun as well. The team feels a special sense of closeness and truly work together for group support. Individual players may win or lose, but the team continues to be a bona fide winner.

The 1988-1989 Boys' Basketball Team reached several milestones and provided many exciting moments for our school this year. Most visible was their stunning defeat of Camden High School at home in early February, their first victory against “The High” in twelve years. Additionally, they provided Coach Valore with his two hundredth career victory in a midseason victory over Shawnee. While they might not have had quite as dominating a season as in recent years, they provided many hours of exciting action and team play.

This past season, Mr. Frank McAleer became just the tenth wrestling coach in South Jersey history to win two hundred matches. His twenty years of coaching, 200-98-1 career record to that date, and the fact that he has coached two state champions at East combine to reveal the extent to which his experience and expertise have enriched the East wrestling program. If past results are any indication of things to come, another two hundred wins should be within reach of such a fine coach.

It sounded so easy …
“Golf (noun), a game played with a small hard ball and long clubs with variously shaped heads, on a course provided with nine or eighteen small holes and scattered obstacles.”
… No one ever told me about sandtraps, and handicaps, not to mention… shooting under par… and birdies.
I found all this out the day I tried out for the golf team.
… And Webster never told me how hard it is to hit the small hard ball with the long clubs …
But I learned about the water-traps … and the balls hit into the woods … You might say I learned a lot about the game of golf.
… All I haven’t learned is how to put all the terms into practice.
I have come a long way though, when I hear “birdie,”
I only look in the sky once in a while.

It is said that the eyes mirror the soul. If that is true, the face must reflect the heart.

The sports spectator, when agonizing over the intensity of a play, reflects his drama of the game and opens the heart and soul for all to see.

As the basketball travels the full length of the court for the final "hail Mary" shot, or when a 60 yard pass is thrown in the final seconds of a game, muscles tense, hands clench, breath hesitates. This antagonizing feeling precedes the eruption of victory or the sighs of defeat through these churning, hope-filled emotions. The last ball pitched glorifies the winner and humbles the loser, and ends the fans' everpresent yearning for that game saving grand slam or that final third out.

The time when that winning goal is scored or missed marks the shift in the balance of emotion of watchful sports enthusiasts. Expressions change from anticipation to joy or from hopelessness to horror. People expose the inner happiness or frustration as the fans are captured by the wave of fervor running through the crowd. The ultimate presence of this phenomenon roars when the grandstand clears as zealous fans rush the court of field, or when universal faces of shock and disgust trespass the face of every fan.

When the passion of the moment is gone, the body feels limp and spent. This is the drama, the vitality, of the action for the sports fan. Watching a team, a classmate, or a friend, arises a spirit within that feels the ambiguities of the moment. The sports fan experiences a true recognition of how it feels to scale the peak of uncertainty. The ups, the downs; it matters not. It is disappointment, it is pain, it is wonder, it is a miraculous. It is that brief moment when something teeters on the balance of the possible when the heart and soul are there to see.

Sports involvements are proving grounds for the fan as well as the athlete, mirroring the heart and soul of both participant and spectator. It is practice for life.

Dear Aly Boober,

For your first five years you walked on your hands and we were always looking at your feet. Then you finally stood right side up and we were excited to think that at last we'd meet. But you ran so fast and so far that you were merely a blur. We even asked the doctor if she could find a cure. Well, the pace slackened just enough for us to really get to know you and all we can say is we're glad for the day that we were lucky enough to have you!

Dearest Geekaramb,

Hello dare girls! Gee, is Christine still waiting for her pizza? Maybe she should order a cacaboli or a frutata. Oh, I heard that Death killed the clock. Is he okay? Tse, tse! Norma's coming. Mm-m-Could I go for some Chick or Cinnabon. Maybe we'll bump into Colonel Sanders and his Chicken Littles just one more time. Uh, oh, better clear off the top bed. Let's go to calculation vendation servation and buy some goombay. It's da Battle of the Network Shows. I am not your Casanova. I saang. What's wrong? I don't know! Here come de buggies - guess we can't babaang bang baboosh boosh.

Well, gotta go!
Please call me at 1-800-OK-CABLE.
Maybe we can get together on Mildramorial Day.

Jim B. L'The wheaties guys-thank for keeping me awake in WillTree's "Class", I'll miss your singing and special effects.

You better remember me and my anxieties - the athlete of the week from La Isla Shomita.

Koko-after 6 yrs, Always remember - to `keep it clean, keep it clean; press going bowling at 9:00 in the morning; all the work we did tried tc for yrbc; and of course, me. Better keep in touch or "I'm not going to play with you." I hope you get a life in college, good friends are hard to find.

Actually I'm still looking - SHMO

In the earuness I, tried to take your hand, but it was nothing at all.

CBD-You have meant so much to me. Thanx for touching me deep inside S.

Danielle: old yeller. I just had to say it. You're an awesome friend as well as cutting up parner. All of us have had some great times together but I can't seem to think of any right now. Love, -Kim Tamelia: We started out with moo moo cow food and we are still friends. Just don't say anything. We've had a lot of memories together-Tex History, JSS syndrome (I still have it) Cotollion and others I don't want to mention here, Love, Kim

Barb: you and I started with the cousin from Hell but I've realized you're the better half. You've listened to me complain quite a bit and I am glad we're good friends although you got a 1370. I had to mention that. I also hope that you and Danielle aren't laughing over MT. Rushmore anymore. Love, Kim

Buch: What can I possibly say to you? I've known you too long to bring up best memories. You're a great friend and you have always had the best gossip. I want to mention J.G. and L.S. but L.S. would probably beat me up. Love, Kim

Ryan: I don't know what to say to you writing in the back of a yearbook. I have had so many great times with you no matter what happens. I would make this funny but I don't think it would be appropriate. Love, Kim
