

Internet Access

The Cherry Hill Public Library provides library users with the best and most current resources available. We accomplish this, in part, by offering patrons access to the Internet from multiple workstations located throughout the library. The Library does not monitor and has no control over the information found through the Internet and is not responsible for its content, timeliness, or accuracy. Parents or guardians, not the library or its staff, are responsible for the information selected and/or accessed by their children.

Filtering software is used on the Internet workstations. Because no filtering software is 100% effective, patrons are advised that objectionable material could still be accessed. It is recommended that parents monitor their child's Internet use in the library. Internet users should respect the sensibilities of others when accessing sites that may reasonably be offensive to others.

Normally, the Library staff will not monitor or supervise Internet access, other than for length of use. However, if Internet searching results in disruption of library services, or if patron behavior when using Internet resources becomes inappropriate for a library setting, the library reserves the right to end the session.

All Internet resources available in the Library are provided to each library user. The library may set time limits for its use so that all patrons seeking access will have an appropriate opportunity. The Library reserves the right to end an Internet session when time limits are exceeded.
